	Elliott (in Dulci Jubilo) Now that one of our owlets has a taste of stepping out of the box, and others have perhaps gotten the idea, I'm wondering whether there might not be an "evening on the patio" tonight. Certainly, if mom and dad bring home food and one of the kids is waiting outside to receive it, there may be a new hand-off

0	Ruth	We used to make our own hominy because most of the canned stuff here in the east is nasty. It is corn that has been dried then soaked in lye (presoaking corn in lye makes tryptophan available for absorption), rinsed and rinsed and rinsed, then boiled. (If the kernels are then dried and ground, they become grits.) Fried ham slices and hominy is wonderful! Today, 17:56:27 – Flag – Like – Reply Mobberley Schmitz

Regardless, my understanding is that much of their fledging and flight training may very well occur on the ground anyway. Why is everyone so neurotic about this? Assume the worst, if you must! Assume they get torn to pieces by neighborhood dogs or by falcons, or by whatever it is your nightmares concoct. If that happens, then we've seen nature as it truly is. I'm sorry. If you have windows and a PC, there should be a "Printscreen" or "printscren" button on the upper right corner of your keyboard. Push that key. It will not look like anything happened. Then open a program like "Paint" or "Photoshop" and go to "Edit" and then "Paste New Image". It will put the screen shot you took in the program. From there you can edit it using the crop feature (look under tools or in the side toolbar). I think you might see the same characteristics in the eagles, too (see the eagles cams in "Other Wildlife Cams" just below this video). The molting of "baby feathers"/down is a much longer process in raptors than it is in songbirds. Today, 16:32:56 - Flag - Like - Reply and al came work,	my post last night about the cardinal nest I discovered while cutting down bushes yesterday, mom and dad have been caring for them throughout the night Il day today. They don't seem to mind me peeking at the baby and they just watch from nearby trees. I took a picture of the baby and eggs before I in today. Somehow I think they know I'm not going to hurt the baby or eggs. I'm going to add the picture, never did that before on a post, so if it doesn't could someone let me know how to do it.

	Carol Jean Crossley I have a question: I went bto that www site re. Max perching last nite. I wanted to make a nice comment, but I was not allowed until I became a Google registered person. ???? There was a bunch of rules, etc., so I didn't sign it until I asked y'all. Here is my question: I've been on AOL since 12/96. If I sign this Google agreement, does it take me off of AOL? I thought Google was a search enginenot an ISP. Please explain? Thanks.

	 James Hill (in Itforthe Shilling) Nice comparison photo. btw, I received your note RE: super volcances. I just haven't replied since I am working off of very limited sleep - it was a long night. But I did want to tell you that I find the information fascinating. I've watched almost everything I could find on the ones out west. It is a very humbling thought, that we live over top of one or more. Relatively speaking.
	Today, 11:53:46 – Flag – Like – Reply Mary Carroll What I really find interesting is that the Mayan/Aztec predictions about the end of this age in 2012 claim destruction will come by earthquakes and volcanoes. Yellowstone's supervolcano erupts about every 600,000 years. Its last eruption was about 640,000 years ago so another eruption may be close. It would destroy much of the continental U.S. and dump ash all the way to the Atlantic coast. It could induce another ice age. 	Robin, taik about being in synci? We were posting on the same subject 4 seconds apart? I'm not sure now the barn OWI frust information and the post we got from Carlos jibe. Every time I read information on gender differentiation in barn owls, I'm struck by what an inexact science it seems to be. And now I read in the BOT piece that the female may actually mount the male !! I give up!
