Bill in SD and Tanya - the eagle (in the video) with the goat is a golden eagle. A very, very different creature from he bald. Bald eagles are sort of goofy 😊 - that said with affection. The golden is like the velociraptor in Jurassic Park!

Yikes....I just watched that - which led to other videos of them taking down wolves and foxes too. Nature can be cruel sometimes...but they all have to feed young ones.

There is also a series of photos out there of a bald eagle attacking a swan in flight (swan gets away). Swans are no pushovers. Once watched a young bald going for a pair of trumpeter swans on a pond in NW Wyoming. Before I could say, "You idiot...!" the swans reared up, spread their wings and charged the eagle which barely escaped.

My husband and were talking the other night about the goings on here with watching nature, and he said this illustrates how cruel life can be. Life has always been very cruel and compared to many other countries, we live a very safe life when you think about it. Many people are against eating meat when they find out the process. I have always been raised with hunters and farms and know the process very well...

Pardon my soapbox, Life is tough, and always has been and always will be, this illustrates it. Poor gophers and rabbits had it rough last night... not to mention the wee rodents.

Welcome back! You have missed a lot. Check out all the new photos at <http://mollysbox.wordpress.com/blog/>. Then go see the video of the two interviews of Eric Blehm, the author of the yet to be completed e-book at <http://www.ustream.tv/theowlbox>. You'll have to go back into the previous pages of videos to find them. Then check out the new Wiki set up by Molly watchers from this site and see the poetry and information saved there at <http://mollyowl.pbworks.com/>. There is a recorded video of the Molly delivering the "Big Thing" on <http://www.ustream.tv/theowlbox>. Look for the video by that title. Molly shows up at 1 hour and 47 minutes, so unless you want to wait that long, you want to move the bar until the time reaches about 1 hour 45 minutes.

How do you get to the over flow chat? When I reload the page I see "Over flow chat" briefly above the video feed but there is nothing for me to click on, and then it reverts to the stats for last nights hunting and number of treats/visits.
 Today, 15:42:44 - Flag - Like - Reply

Chris in Olympia, WA

That overflow chat is the one from Ustream. The blue box including the treat info and the chat info is copied from the originating Ustream site, and that's why we see that, but it has nothing to do with this site. There is no "overflow" here. We like our chat better, but if you want to check it out, you can click on the video above and it will take you to the Ustream site. There are 3 chats there. One is the "social stream". The other is the "Chat" which has limited capacity. If the Chat is full, then you will see the "overflow chat". All of these move much faster than this chat and are for short messages only. You have to log into Ustream in order to participate.

I wonder why that female owl is still staying in the box with the 3 owlets. They must be close to the age of Molly and McGee's little ones.

Today, 15:37:36 - Flag - Like - Reply

Melanie from Milwaukee, WI

According to Stacey O'Brien (via her blog), it is more typical for mothers to stay with their owlets until/after they fledge, vs being gone from the nest. Stacey thinks this is because Molly may be a first time mom, and Owlivia has had a clutch before...and knows what to do. Could be speculation, but I tend to believe someone with as much experience as Stacey.

I posted it and I'm glad you like it! Be careful how it's used though: the intention is to use it to mark trolls and spammers. That way you don't have to say anything, which just encourages bad behavior, but it alerts others not to fall into their traps.

Don't know if any of you visit the Africa cam site but they had a serious troll who sucked many of them into believing she was a 13 year old girl with a fatal illness! Lots of creepy people out there - we are fortunate that Molly and her lovely family have attracted so many wonderful, wonderful people.

Hi James

I just logged on and saw your question about whether there are any Arlo Guthrie fans. Yes, we just saw him and his family of four kids and various grandchildren in concert. They were great. I'll have to check out your links.

So glad to see the babies are doing well and thriving. How long before they are expected to take their first flight? I assume even after their first flight, they'll return to the nest box to sleep at least for a while.

Hi Barbara. I found it odd and amusing that the song just popped into my head when viewing Alice the owl. Stranger still, I went to high school with Arlo's son-in-law, Johnny Irion. I never knew Johnny was a musician until many years later when I saw him and Sarah Lee at a local music festival. Small world, big musical family.

Not likely with a full grown cat, possible with kittens, but it really depends on the type of owls you want to attract.

Most owls are far too small to worry over cats.

Remember these owls only weigh a pound at most when full grown. It would have to be a really small cat to be in danger.

I have a big horned owl somewhere in my neighborhood, and when I hear him late at night I think maybe I should round up the cats! But I usually don't.

seems like they only like vegetarian prey, not carnivore prey. The link just posted from the Indiana Wildlife site seems to support that as well.

Although they did point out that the great horned owls will eat barn owls, so perhaps those would be the owls large enough to view a cat as a meal.

Donna, thank you for stating that you will be donating money from the proceeds to the Royals.

However, promoting your own items for sale in a chat room is generally considered SPAM and is against most site's usage terms.

I have no personal problems with what you've done but, it may be a good idea to email the site administrator to verify that they do not mind you linking to your wares in the chat. I'd hate to see your messages receive angry replies do to a misunderstanding. You can email the site owners by clicking the "Contact Us" link, at the top of the page. Apologies if you have already done so. But I have seen the concern raised over a few of your previous postings.

Preening every day,
what a chore!

Wing up,

and stretch.

Preening every day,
what a bore!

Wing down,

Preening every day
is the price we pay
to crouch,
spring,

Oooooo! Nasty virus.

Hantavirus is carried by rodents, especially deer mice. The virus is in their urine and feces. Humans are thought to become infected when they are exposed to contaminated dust from mice nests or droppings. The disease is not passed between humans.

Hantavirus disease has been reported in every western state, and in many eastern states.

Hantavirus is a serious infection.

Even with aggressive treatment, more than half of the cases are fatal.

I wonder if Carlos can scrape out the mess when the owlets leave. It can't be that good for new babies.

Cleaning Owl Box (October - November)

Tools needed: rubber gloves, face mask, trowel or other scrapping tool or crow bar, trash bag or box, tool to open the box.

Wear the mask and gloves.

Always have a helper to hold the ladder steady, and to stand by while you are at the box. Peek into the box. If you see an owl, retreat and remove the ladder.

Once the box is open, use your scraper or crow bar to loosen up the tightly compacted "carpet" inside. Scrape the carpet and all other debris into the trash bag, or box, or onto the ground (it's biodegradable but possibly toxic!). If box is very wet inside, try to determine why - wetness can create bacteria and is unhealthy for the owls.

Do not leave any material inside box.

Close the box.

I agree with you Joie, i believe we all evolve further, us and nature by our bodies creating natural anti-bioties and resistance to many things that come along and evolve also. They have prove that many children have allergies because of a too, clean of a environment, (cleaners have been known to cause problems also, as well as many man-made processed cleaners and food.), and no animals, that many kids who are raise with animals have less allergies and breathing problems, also it is good to eat raw honey from bees from your own area, because it builds up your resistant to the different pollen in your area. (do not give unprocessed honey to children under 1 or 2 years old, check with your pediatrician.) There is a balance in nature.

Yes - the condition of the owl box offends our human sensibilities. But it is healthy and appropriate for wild owls. If the box is too clean, owls won't return. It took a couple of years of having the box up before Molly and McGee turned up.

(This good look at their feathers has inspired another sonnet!)

A TIME TO FLY

Our owls are growing larger every day
With feathers almost ready for the sky.
How can we keep their urge to fly at bay
Until we're sure the time is right to try?

Alas this is a daily trial for all,
The owls and Watchers Loyal all alike!

We hold our breaths in case we see a fall,
Concerned for each and every little tyke.

One day too soon our Maxie will embark
To try her strength upon the fragile breeze;
Her wings will spread against the sky so dark,
Then siblings, one by one, their night to seize.

Away they'll fly and take our hearts along
Upon their wings: a laugh, a cry, a song.

I hate the "food chain" thing that goes on with nature. I witness it frequently where I live here in Prescott, AZ. I often see red tail hawks grabbing the morning doves and also have seen a raven take a tiny baby bunny and beat it to death on a large boulder we have in our landscape. Bunnies are my favorite animals of all - they seem like such gentle souls to me. I never knew birds ate other birds until we moved here from CA. We also have a roadrunner that has been coming around on our property looking for food too. I can tell when a predator is in the immediate area as the bird feeders are vacated and the birds go for cover. It is a part of life, but I still hate it. I know we as humans do it too pretty much. Just life and surviving... Oh, almost forgot to mention the Javelinas we have passing thru our property as well. They are a form of wild pigs or boars.

Cool Google Chrome tip of the day.

If you're paranoid, curious, popular, or just in a hurry.

And you're trying to find that special post, person or word.

Control F = Find (not new, works in all browsers)

Chrome however, also highlights all instances of your search term, both on the page AND in the scroll bar.

Pretty nifty!

April 27 Today I woke up and I made me a rattichino it was good later on I made Rataroni and Fleas and we started playing a game. I am tired so we are going to go to sleep. I woke up and just stared outside I long for the day I can fly away. We flew around last night for the first time. It was amazing

O.K. I thought owls sleep during the day. Guess these little guys don't know that yet. They are always playing.
