Well I guess I'm heading out too. Back to work tomorrow after being off since Sept 3rd. Must get some rest tonight. It's been fun and I enjoy this so much. Good night all.

Sweet dreams to all.

I like to post puns on my facebook page. Today I posted one and even got some additions from a few friends:

"There was a sign on the lawn at a drug re-hab center that said 'Keep off the Grass'."

Comments and additions:

and on the sidewalk "don't step on the crack"

I hope they are selling RC Cola or Pepsi versus "coke"

If you're a bear, you get to hibernate. You do nothing but sleep for six months.
I could deal with that.
Before you hibernate, you're supposed to eat yourself stupid.
I could deal with that, too.
If you're a bear, you birth your children (who are the size of walnuts) while you're sleeping and wake to partially grown, cute cuddly cubs.
I could definitely deal with that.

If you're a mama bear, everyone knows you mean business. You swat anyone who bothers your cubs. If your cubs get out of line, you swat them too.
I could deal with that.
If you're a bear, your mate EXPECTS you to wake up growling.
He EXPECTS that you will have hairy legs and excess body fat.

He KNOWS not to get between you and the food.

Yup..... Gonna be a bear.

Until I joined this chat room, I avoided all chat rooms like the plague. I was somewhat intimidated and afraid of them I guess. The dynamics of this chat room - in good times and bad - are incredible. Everyone came together for the common purpose of watching an owl box cam in California. But it has expanded to so much more - a friendly place where people from all over the world can share their knowledge of owls and nature in general; their hopes and dreams; their joys and sadness; their interests; their families and pets; their good humor and so much more.

Lynda, I was in another chat room once just as we were adopting Johnny. It was designed to be a Mom's group. I thought that since it had been 30+ years since I had taken care of a baby, and the growing up part, that I could glean some tips, ideas, strategy to be able to stay on top of things with a child. Turns out, I had plenty of experience and when love takes over, it's not hard to get in the groove again. But the chat room was horrible!! The moderators were instigators and kept the pot stirred constantly! They bad mouthed very innocent comments, and if they didn't agree with you on something it became a nightmare. They had no rules about religion, politics, baseball or music. Anyone was fair game with the knife in the back. Needless to say, I left. It took a long time for me to post on this chat.

TgramFul

I try not to dribble when I am speaking drivle, but I didn't know it was leaking all the website. Luckily, I have a high I.Q., so I am not an idiot, but I am going through a bad patch, and when I fall asleep standing on one leg, I often find myself salivating... For those who advocate removing all non-owl topics from this page, JH has one-upped by moving all serious owl talk to an incipient ORIG site, where dribblers will be beheaded and their brains fed to owls trained to hork upon headless victims...

Do you know Ellie/EFS? You've got a lot of owls down there - have you seen the flammulated or the burrowing, etc? You have lots of great birds there!

We visited for the first time last year - but OWLass - no owls did we see! 😊

I'm confused again (so what's new?) I thought sure it was Carrie who downed the mouse, Chris thought it was Carrie - some thought Ashley. Isn't that Carrie behind Ashley in the front. ???

I am thinking Carrie is in the front, calling like always for food! It really doesn't matter to me. Food is being brought in, and they are being fed!

It doesn't really matter at all, Becky. Only when someone says "poor Carrie, she's not getting anything to eat". It doesn't matter to me - I think they are both getting all the food they need and more.

The neighbors can probably hear them... Now I don't hear the whoo whoo owl! Thought about holding the lap top over my head for protection. Remember about 2 1/2 months ago... when I was down at the Canal and I had 2 of them come right over my head... one after the other, kind of back peddling to get a look at me. It was like 2 am and I was taking pictures. Freaked me out, but it was very cool. Only time in 2 years that I have ever seen a bird at night.

I have seen the Great Horned... I use to talk back with him and then find him with a flash light up in the trees... once he swooped over me and had a wing span of about 6 feet. It was about 6 ft above me. I had the flash light on him. It was so cool.. I didn't know they ate cats. I lost 3 before I figured that out.

I can't believe I've been watching Molly obsessively since late March and hadn't thought of this, but...there's a raptor center here in Charlotte where I live. <http://www.carolinaraptorcenter.org/resident.php> They have kestrels, eagles, and of course, owls. If anybody in the area wants to go with me, let me know. It looks like the birds they keep are rescue birds that aren't able to be released back into the wild.

Both parents bring food to the box. It's common for the parents to roost in separate locations away from the box, and only meet up at night. No one knows for certain where they are during the day.

Today, 20:58:04 - Flag - Like - Replyin-suf-fer-a-ble*Snoring is actually used in many of the papers and journals I have read recently. Not a term from Carlos.

VOCALIZATIONS: Fifteen vocal and two nonvocal sounds were described by Bunn et al. (1982). B. Colvin (pers. comm.) described the five most frequently heard vocalizations: 1) the "contact call" is a drawn-out screech frequently given in flight when approaching a nest site from a distance; 2) the "alarm call" is an intense screech made in response to human or other disturbance which is typically given at a nest site and only after chicks have hatched;

Today, 20:58:42 - Flag - Like - Replyin-suf-fer-a-ble

3) "squeaking/ticking calls" are rapid, high-pitched notes which are associated with pair bond maintenance or distress situations; these calls are commonly produced during courtship, incubation, and first evening flights after chicks have hatched; 4) "snoring" is a greatly varying hiss which is repeated persistently by juveniles in and out of the nest; this call is used for food begging and may be heard at nest sites from sunset to sunrise; and 5) the "defensive hiss" is a very loud and prolonged hiss typically produced by nestlings when disturbed.

Even though Ashley was 5 weeks yesterday and Carrie is 5 weeks today, Ashley is at least a third bigger than Carrie. Most are speculating that Ashley is a female and Carrie is a male. With barn owls the females are larger than the males.

The owls in the last clutch had a number of rabbits to eat, and someone figured Tauntz would be a good name for the one that lives there. Taunting the owls. 'Can't catch me!!!'

Today, 20:28:12 - Flag - Like - ReplyOwlosaurus

There's been speculation that the first clutch got rabbits because at that time of year there were baby bunnies around. Now the rabbits have grown and are probably too large for a barn owl to carry. The rabbits McGee delivered in the spring were very small.

Basically that he had gone outside to check the area after the last fly by and loud hissing from the owlets (especially Carrie). He found no sign of a predator or anything to cause alarm. Reported that Tauntz and a young one were out in the yard. He had been on a few minutes earlier describing where the various lights were coming from. Apparently some questions from the other chat room. He was not taking pictures, but he described how car lights coming around the corner sometimes reflect off the box and sometimes when the neighbor across the street backs out of his garage there is a reflection on the box from his back-up lights.

There are some that take off cross-country and there are others that stick close to the natal sites, so sure, there could still be some of the last brood hanging around. But it's not likely they all are. I don't remember the age of those particular owls off the top of my head, but they were not far past fledging age when they were released.

Beats me what it was, Becky. IMHO, Carrie didn't recognize whatever noise the adult owl may have been making (that we didn't hear). The loud hiss and head outstretched posture by Carrie seemed like a defensive hiss as opposed to the usual loud "calling for food" noise. Ashley was quieter, but very and they both were very quiet and alert for a while.

RECIPE FOR PRESERVING OWLETS - By Storymom 5-26-2010

Take 1 large field, 4 adorable baby owls, several trees, a cool brook, a large quantity of field mice and a pinch of pebbles. Mix the owlets and trees together and stir frequently. Pour the brook over the pebbles.

 Sprinkle the field with flowers, various grasses and the field mice.
 Fill the trees with a gentle summer breeze. Spread over a deep blue sky and bake in the summer sun.

When done, set away safely in a cozy owl box or tree stump.
 Wrap securely in awe and store in the hearts of everyone.

Here is a page with some cute owl poems. Maybe not as cute as ones that been posted here, but cute nonetheless.

Wise my owl,
Keen as he can be.
Quietly watches,
From up in his tree.
Suddenly he spies,
A fine tasty treat,
Far off in a field,
Ah, something to eat.

I just read that they found a Nessie monster in Bow Lake in England. They are now looking for it. Several people have reported something big living in there. Could be interesting if they find Bow Nessie as they call it. I never got to see Loch Ness Nessie when I went to visit it.

Last night I had been sitting here in my computer chair for I don't know how long. Anyway, I walked out to the living room and was kind of limping a little. My husband asked me what was wrong. I told him my knee kinda hurt and my back kinda hurt. I told him I thought I had been sitting probably too long... My wonderful husband whom I love and adore said...."WELL DUH"...

Carrie doesn't seem to stand as much as Ashley - I'm sure his/her legs are as strong, aren't they. They are so sweet looking. Just makes you want to pick them up and hug them....probably would get a nose full of mouse breath though which would probably knock me off my feet. I see the Kestrel box in cam 3. Has anyone seen comings or goings in that box. I know one of them has been on top of it

No kestrels are nesting there. Donna Royal is hopeful as they are her favorite bird. They have seen the female kestrel - "Callie" frequently in the yard, on the owl box eating lizards and on top of the kestrel box and think she "might" be looking for a mate.

I have to review math, in order to teach it to 4th/5th graders, tomorrow. I know how to divide, in what has become "the old way" --sigh--need to review several "new ways" in order not to fumble about. I never did get as many posts read as I wanted to--the early evening, at any rate, looks to have been quite congenial. Have a great evening, All. Much appreciation for the dedicated MODs who keep the stats overnight, and post them for the rest of us. Enjoy the owls and each other. If I don't get to peek in later, I'll see you tomorrow after school! -----Ellie

How many ways can we divide 8 by 2 ? I guess I'm very old fashioned. My kids (now 46 and 48) went through some so-called "new math" in grade school. By the time they got to high school they had to "re-learn" it the right way. Thanks you, too, Ellie, for being a teacher - some of the most "unsung heroes" in our country !!

*A wave, a splash, a ripple
At the flow's end, what shall be?
A present found on the seashore
That is when a door will open
Maybe it was the key
The door's
other side
Lies excitement
Not just a faint breeze
In the same way
A switch of happiness
That way
You'll have Somehow have made it become
A wave, a splash, a ripple
At the flow's end, what shall be?
A present found on the seashore
Is calling out to you
It seems to be.

Hi all! I'm GREATLY enjoying my new book, "Wesley the Owl: The Remarkable Story of an Owl and His Girl". It's about a Cal-Tech biologist who raised and spent 19 years with Wesley. There are so many insights into owl behavior, many of which Ashley and Carrie already display, including very intense emotions. Hope some of you read it too!
