Hi all! I can't believe another chapter is ending. And a happy one at that. Miss them already. What a gift we have been given. I really don't think Carlos and Donna can begin to comprehend how much they have touched so many lives.!!!!

Well I must go again, will be lurking. Just think of it this way...of all the times we ALL were worried that Carrie was not getting enough nourishment, has proved us ALL wrong. At 5:22 this morning Molly gave us proof with the delivery, and Carrie confirmed it all by later flying off. Both Molly & Carrie gave us all a wonderful reassuring goodbye. No? Just proves how us caring humans tend to overreact in an animal world. THEY are the animal experts, not us. Molly & McGee had EVERYTHING under control. And they did one fantastic parenting job.

I did plenty of worrying!!! Thank goodness, you were absolutely right. I was thinking this morning of what a great thing Molly did by letting us see a delivery to Carrie before she fledged. What a gift it all has been. Now, we can leave feeling confident that all is as it should be---the way we want it to be! 😊

I said earlier this morning, there was nothing wrong with genuine care, concern and worry. I don't think any of us didn't have at least some concern and worry. Some posted those feelings here and others didn't. No one should feel ashamed or embarrassed about how they felt from one situation to another. The only ones that I fault were those who came into the chat room to make false, alarming and hateful statements only to stir the pot. They had no true concern or knowledge of this family of owls.

This really has been fun---and I have been a part of it!!! 😊 I know the days just aren't going to be the same without the owls! It was like having company all of the time, or like having friends to talk to no matter what time of day or night. Ah, wishes---I wish this could go on and on and on. No one in my family understands how much I will miss this. I hope everyone stays on the chat, and that there is another clutch in the spring. Last year, on Feb. 13, I broke my arm. The time I spent recovering from surgery, etc., was the time the cameras were on for the first clutch. It really helped me get through that time, because I could do little else!

Now, I'm so addicted that I am going to be seriously depressed! Thanks to all for the enjoyment. I hope we truly stay in touch via this great website! XXOO

I thoughtfully understand Share1222. My family doesn't always understand me either but they do look from time to time. Both my husband and daughter went on the last Model T tour of the season and the car will be put away for the winter. But I cannot and would not miss the picnic even if on the computer. I have to be a part of this. Glad your arm is all healed and that this chat room helped you through that. Take care!!!! And remember we will get through this and there will be a sad time but we will all regroup once again and have fun talking and sharing.

Given the fledgling of both Ashley and Carrie this week, there is something very special and significant in your picture to me, too. As some of you know I had my son and my granddaughter here last week. She is three and has this amazing vocabulary. One time she was pushing her dolls together and I asked her if they were fighting. And she said: "no they're not fighting they're having a disagreement." 😊😊 Another time my husband heard her and her father arguing about her changing out of her bathing suit into regular clothes. He was telling her that we weren't going swimming now, and she says: "But we will be going swimming eventually." 😊😊 Just blew us away!!

 You were both so precious to watch side by side.
 At first it was hard, making sure you were okay.
 We loved you so much, you touched our hearts inside.
 You both grew bigger every day.
 We know we must let you fly away.
 Down in our hearts from here to the sky,
 You were taking steps with wings to fly.
 We're so proud of all that you both are.
 You will always be our shining stars.
 Your first day of fledging is finally here.
 We know you are excited that is perfectly clear.
 We MODS will be here to kiss you goodbye.
 Spread your wings precious girl it's time to fly.

sigh What a bittersweet day! I'm not ready to give them up yet, but I'm so thrilled that they have successfully made thru this portion of their journey. If Carrie could talk, would she say, "Na na na na na na"? Probably not. More likely that she'd just say, "Thanks for watching my back...it's all good. Peace." So, in the Owl Way.....It's all good, peeps. Peace. 😊

I made a deal with my hubby this morning. He could go to a friend's to watch football this afternoon while I took care of the lunch dishes, etc and I could watch the picnic tonight and he would get the DDs bathed and to bed. 😊 So I am off for a bit to do my share and play with the girls. See y'owl lovely peeps in a few hours.

P.S. I love you all! 😊

Good afternoon y'owl: Hope by the time the picnic starts the light rain stops! I love the song he's playing "You're gonna fly" I can just see it all; also with little kids flapping and bouncing! Feel like doing a little flapping, but too emotional about owls fledging; glad the chat is still here, it's a real relaxer for me. Y'owl are so interesting. Maybe I'll find a recipe to share pretty soon. Bye for now.

Helloo friends,

Just got back from a wonderful day out.

Just to say you guys out there in Molly world are the sincerest, loving, caring and wackiest bunch of people ive been in contact with. The banter and repartee has had me in stitches on occasions and the talent has been amazing.

Im so delighted that this has been another successful hatch and Im excited for the owls. Im surprised that I don't feel too sad this time,...well perhaps a little bit, but its been a blast again.

Im raising a glass to Carlos and Donna. (and a big fat rat to M&M) 😊

Hi everybody,

I have never posted before but I just feel like saying something today. I've been watching Molly and her family since Max was born in the first clutch. I too check in morning and night. I am really going to miss this little bit of joy. Carlos and Donna are just a pleasure. They have been so generous to make it possible for us all to see this wonderful event! I am just looking forward to spring. I hope Molly & McGee will come back and Carlos will share with us again! I finally broke down and bought the DVD. It may get me through the winter without Molly! I have also enjoyed all of the comments...even when I get bugged at the negative ones! Take care all.

Hi friends~ What an exciting day. I see from the stats that MODs saw Carrie receive food early this morning and she left for a day in the palms. Woohoo! That is just what we want... for the owlets to grow into big, strong, fully fledged owls. 😊

I have been on this site since the very first clutch. I have never talked or gave my opinion on anything. I just want all of you to know that I have enjoyed it all. The friendships I have watched develop, the girls and boys growing up, and even the at times the silly negative comments. It is funny because I will miss all of it very soon. I would check every morning and watch every night. For those of you lucky enough to be heading to the picnic, enjoy! It has been an amazinr ride 😊

I'm off for a fall drive through Amish Country in Holmes County OH...it's beautiful and serene. I live about an hour away so it makes a perfect Sunday day trip...and this is our peak weekend for foliage. I surely will miss Carrie and Ashley...they are precious owlets...hard to imagine them being grown-up enough to swoop and fly high and hunt their own food...but Molly and McGee do a tremendous job as parents so I know they'll be well-trained to be "big girls"...:p

I have been mostly "lurking" for quite awhile now and rarely post but I just wanted to say how much I have enjoyed this experience. Many thanks to you all of you who have answered my questions, posted the stats, photos and video links so I could keep with things I missed in "real" time. I am going to miss seeing the owls but am so grateful for this awesome time. I wish all of you the very best.

What a great day! I saw Carrie get the mouse (via rerun, thanks Carlos)...I saw Carrie on the posing ledge...I heard that Carrie flew off to the Palm tree! I was starting to think she'd never leave the box!! I saw Carlos this morning...he was so jovial! His prediction came true. And then there's the picnic...what a happy occasion that will be. I wish I were there...but hope to catch a rerun later...I have to be away from home the rest of the day...It's been a pleasure my MOD friends! It will be interesting to see what happens tonight too. Have an owl-rageous day!

Carlos thought that was "it" for the year, so he emptied 10 pounds of gag shag out of the box and looked through it for "Dudley," the non-hatchling. Dudley was never recovered.

pursja, and others who have problems with the jays and other large birds eating all of the suet out of your feeders, her is one that hangs upside down. The smaller birds can access it just fine, but the larger ones aren't able to as well. I'm sure there are similar ones out there if you do a Google search.

I fed birds years ago. From a hanging basket-like feeder I put peanuts in the shell...jays only would eat them (not salted, bird peanuts). When the jays finished the peanuts, they left...then cardinals came to eat the sunflower seeds...and later little birds, chickadees, and such came to eat grains...they each enjoyed their food and then left. The jays and the peanuts were fun, and just a little messy...not too bad. Sometimes they carried the shell to a tree and I would see them underneath on the ground.

 OMG, I saw Carrie fly off this morning before I went to church but was sure she would be back in box when I got home. Good for her. I guess that I and thousands of others out there will now have to cope with the OWs- Owl Withdrawal. What to do first thing in the morning and last thing at night? Their cries for food got very annoying but somehow I will miss them. My cat says, good riddance, now pay more attention to me! It has been a wonderful experience and all thanks to Carlos and family.

One question.....Does anyone know if the Cafe Press and other Molly websites will be shut down on the 20th? If so I as well as others should download the many precious things that can be printed out. Pursja! I thought I had them all here! I have two suet feeders up. One is a double cake one. That is where the Jays go! My single one is where the chickadees, towhees, and woodpeckers go. But the squirrel has discovered it too! They seem to know which is which!

When I was a little girl...I found two baby blue jays...and actually had luck raising them...They grew to be handsome birds..and use to like to pick at my teeth...as they like shiny objects...My mom called the newspaper..and I have a nice picture, thanks to her thoughtfulness. It broke my heart when my dad took them to a bird sanctuary (he said?). We were on a family vacation in Maine...and that's where they were turned loose..

They are the bullies in the playground arent they? just when all the little birds are eating nicely down swoops the big blue bully grabs, sometimes cracks open the sunflower seeds between his feet and it seems as if he has a bottomless pit, oh and we have 2 families 3 in one group,and they wait for the one family to finish. WE have only the western scrub jays here..

They can be raucous, quarrelsome devils, pursja, but they are beautiful. I don't have a ready reference, but there are suet feeders where the "basket" holder hangs face down. The smaller birds - woodpeckers, chickadees, etc. can access it fine, but the blue jays, etc. can't. I'll check it out and look for you later today with the info. It sounds like all your birds are happy with you today. 😊

As obnoxious and pushy as they are, Blue Jays earn their keep in the world of smaller birds by being often the first ones to raise the alarm when trouble is about. So they do have a redeeming social value!

I just saw this on the blog and HAD to share it here. Bravo to the Royals!!

"The San Marcos Community Foundation is accepting grant requests now through November 3 for monies from the newly established "Wildlife Fund." There is currently $9,000 available... The special fund was established in March 2010 following a surge of interest in "Molly the Owl"... the Royals began receiving several donations, which they generously diverted to the San Marcos Community Foundation. The foundation established the Wildlife Fund in order to ensure that the monies generated in response to Molly the Owl would go back into wildlife preservation and education in San Marcos."

Hello all...as thrilled as I am to see Carrie has gone on her way I am dissapointed that I missed her fledging. I was up early, then at 9:15 am. (6:15 San Marcos time) I figured it was safe to take my dogs for a hike. Well Im back 2 hojrs later and Carrie is gone!! I guess she wanted out before the break of day; not that that stopped her before. 😊 When I returned I had to actually turn up the volume to ensure she really wasn't there. 😞 Well I'll certainly miss our little buddies but I'm so please to know they have all gone on their way (befoe Carlos & Donna are on their way 😊) and are happy and healthy!

I think he and Donna will both be back to talk to us, Judy. Yes, seeing Ashley and Carrie fledge is a mixed blessing. We all cheered them from the start to reach this point and now that they have we have mixed emotions. I hope that you know the chat room will stay open after the cameras go down. There will be frequent postings and discussions about some of the other barn owl web cams as new families are started around the world. Hopefully in the Spring there will be anothr new family here as well.

While just fairly new with this second clutch, I want to thank everyone for a wonderful and special place this chat room came to be for me. While I am not good with all the names that made coming here a joy and blessing, I want to thank each and every one from the bottom of my heart. At first I didn't think that I wouldn't cry yet I haven't stopped. They are tears of joy and am so amazed on how nature works. If the world perhaps can take note I can only imagine how much more great it could be. No wars, murders, all the "bad "stuff". So with all my ramblin' thank you ALL, thank you Carlos, Donna, Austin and all that made this city girl see how wonderful life really is. Have fun at the picnic and know that my thoughts and prayers will be with you all...

You know, when people start saying "the sky is falling; the sky is falling," it's only natural to take a look even though you know it's not true. So when some people started saying, "carrie's in trouble; Carrie's in trouble," it was natural to look a little more closely, even though you know it is not true.

To all of you "Sky is falling people," I just wanna say:

😊😊 ...aren't you glad you were wrong.

For me, it was the drumbeat. How many ways can it be said that Carrie may not/wasn't going to make it? I think everyone was concerned, but I was so much more inclined to let it play out (for the good or the ill), that the pot-stirring speculation got my entire goat. I must say, too, that I was not entirely happy with my own reaction, at times, out of exasperation with sky-is-falling remarks.

Your worry and concern was just that, BF. It's OK to be concerned and worried. You have been here in the chat for quite a while and I think most people here understood that's what it was. I agree with Joan and YTO, it's not OK to come here just to spew hate, discontent and purposely rile people up and then leave again.

I must say, that I believe there was cause for concern. There were times when I think she was very hungry and showing signs of stress. Why would we not be concerned? But, i/we trusted Molly and McGee. And, ultimately, Carrie. She looked great overnight, and I am thrilled that we saw her feed and fledge this morning.

Deb--agreed. She looked a little worse than lonely/forlorn to me as the evening started, last night. The lovely ballet that she did on the roof was SO reassuring--it showed that her skills were on a par with Ashley's, even as it thrilled with its grace and lightness of being. She was finally ready, and I did sleep better, last night!

I'm so happy that Carrie and Ashley have fledged, but I'm going to miss watching them. Every morning before work, I'd get up as early as I could to watch the drama unfolding in the owl box. Like all of you, I've laughed, cried, and driven everyone around me crazy with all my talk of owls. Thank you to everyone for your knowledge, humor and compassion. The fabric for this shirt was especially designed by VacaDude, the eComic creator. <http://www.vacadude.com/> He has said this is a one time design just for Carlos. The shirt was presented to Carlos during the first clutch. I think I heard that a piece of this fabric is going to be auctioned off at the picnic tonight. I agree with you. It is a great desiqn. VacaDude has done a couple of other designs that can be found at:

I only live about 5 miles north of the Mexico border and with our mountains here and the San Pedro river in the valley, we get a lot of species here that aren't seen in other parts of AZ. It's been a wonderful experience. If anyone is interested, search the web for banders in your area.

Although we can't be sure, they most likely will not spend another night in the box. The first brood owlets came back to the 'playground' to spend some time calling for food, so perhaps Carrie and/or Ashley will, too.

Good morning from Orange Beach AL.
Hubby and I are down for a few days enjoying the last days of summer. Every morning we like to have our coffee on the balcony and watch the sunrise and the Ospreys dip down and catch their breakfast. Yesterday hubby came running into the kitchen and yelled "Come quick, you won't believe it" What? "there was the most beautiful barn owl that almost flew right onto our balcony...he tipped his wing and looked right at me as if to say "Good morning" I can't believe that I missed it!... 😞 😞 I should have been expecting it tho, because the name of our building is THE PALMS!Now I am checking every palm tree that we pass...Ha

It is a wonderful, bittersweet day and a day to be thankful for this experience and all of the wonderful people and owls, kestrels, rats and rodents of all description, bunnies and cats. This owl world has been engineered by, designed by and generously gifted by the the Royals and they are royal to me. With all of the bad things in the world, they have managed to bring together people from all over the world to celebrate nature, life, and create a community of caring, loving people. Love to the Royals and all of the rest of you. Thanks for the pictures, humor, memories, owl facts, overnight postings, and camaraderie. You will be missed and never forgotten.

Good Morning, Janeen & all MODS (a second time). Was just thinking as I got dressed for 10:30 Mass about the word "common" in the Molly Owl song.

The quote from C. S. Lewis came to mind. "When the ordinary begins to look extraordinary, perhaps you are seeing it for the first time."

I'm thinking of the colors in the owls' feathers and the beauty of Ashley's ballerina dance on the house top.

Good morning every one. I came on just in time to see Carrie for a few minutes before she flew off. Boy she sure was torn between the box and her family. So glad she chose them. If she does indeed stay out of the box, how fitting that she fledged on the same day as the picnic, another thing to add to what I'm sure will be a wonderful celebration. GOD bless Molly, Mcgee, Ashley, Carrie, the Royals and all of you here.

I was surprised to know owls don't see as well in the dark as some of us think..they rely on sound of the scurrying creatures in hunting them. All the bobbing and weaving up and down is taking a sort of measurement of space....that is what I read.

The biggest problem they have is that their eyes are fixed so they can't move them - the bobbing and weaving is their way of focusing!

Yes, there is a fair amount of lore associated with owls that continues to be repeated over and over. Granted their night vision is superior to ours, but it is often overstated by many. The same applies to their hearing at times. It is very specialized, but it is not super natural. I find the truth about how both systems work together fascinating, even more so than the exaggerated claims that get passed around. The owls have evolved to use the same basic tools that we have but in much more sophisticated ways.

Bear with me folks! Most of you have seen these before. If so, I won't feel bad if you ignore and just move on to the next posting. 😊 I had a rough day yesterday but today feel renewed and "full of spit and vinegar" (my dad used to say that). In these final days I'm going to post the poems several times for those who may not have seen them. I added a word search for those of you who enjoy puzzles. It started out a wonderful day and will continue! I love you guys! 😊

Hate to leave, but gotta go cook the grits for breakfast, and hubby may want some of that bacon he bought, so better tear myself away. This is such a delightful way to spend time, helps forget step-daughter's terminal cancer, youngest daughter's heart wrenching financial situation, at least for a little while. Hope you'll have a wonderful day, hope to tune in later, maybe get to see some of the picnic too. Wonder what Carrie sees on the ground?

The weather has been wet and cold overnight for the past several nights. The lower activity is probably a direct result of that. Wouldn't be surprised if Ashley spent just as much time sitting in the palm tree, squawking just like Carrie has here.

Owls of the United States & Canada by Wayne Lynch seems to be very informative and is well written. He dispels a lot of myth and hype about owls and explains the fundamentals behind their abilities and behavior. The first chapter is available as a free download from Amazon and Chapter 2 is available as a preview on Google Books (linked above).

That social gathering of the Georgia MOD that was just shown really gives a feeling of closeness with them. Maybe Molly really will bring us all together in peace & harmony. Google Dr. Masaru Emoto when you can. I tried to put a website up but couldn't do it. Fascinating!!! He's done experiments showing the power of words over water. The crystalline structure is actually affected by positive/negative vibes! 😲 Love it when science proves what we all think. 😊 So glad our Carrie got food & we witnessed it! HAPPY BIRTHDAY, Annie!

Good Morning from Sunny, cool Lex. Ky... Well, I am looking fwd to better week though the portents are not there.

Last Sunday, one combine burned in the field, this week, the other one has been sitting outside our front barn broken down. It appears there is no hope of reclassification because the cause of engine failure cannot be found. We still have 100 acres to go. And, Jim the combine guy, has 500 more acres waiting for him on other clients farms...

Good Morning y'owl. Just checking in on hotel computer to see what Carrie has been up to this morning. Looks like to me same thing she was doing last night. Only from comments (now WAY down in basement) she did the "dance" like Ashley so suspicions she might not spend today in box? She looked ready to fledge last night they thought. Our girl is almost wearing her big girl pants all the time, 😞

Good Morning all. When I went to bed last night, Carrie was in the same place doing the same thing! It's funny 'cause it's as if She's still in the same spot doing the same thing. 😊 I was afraid she would have taken off last night. I guess Ashley won't be coming back. 😞 I had a funny thought about Ashley...She's out with mom and dad learing the "ropes" of owl living, and she's out in the hunting fields flying around thinking...this is soooooo much fun, way coool, now way am I going back to that box. Look forward to seeing coverage of the picnic today. I thought I wasn't going to be home, but my plans changed for the day and now I can. Gee...won't that be fun! 😊😊 Well off to the basement to catch up...

Good Morning MODS. I don't know how many of you remember my post from yesterday morning, but I am a vet assistant and we held our annual Blessing of the Animals yesterday afternoon at the clinic. I wore my Molly & McKee button and also the one with the four owlets from the first clutch. The priest not only blessed my new kitten (and myself) but then he came back and blessed the owls!!!! I almost cried. Seems he had heard about Molly. It was very nice. Since being here from the first clutch, I will miss this adventure and everyone here. Hoping the best for Carlos, Donna and everyone who made all of this possible.

And who knows, maybe we can do this again next year?!? 😊

Hello...did some basement diving and appears we are once again missing the food. She must be getting it from somewhere or she wouldn't be standing!

Just read the email from Kathy Fry about the card being sent. I was hoping she wa able to edit out the Illinois creep who made the nasty comments, but it appears it's still in there.

Let's hope Carrie flies off as sunrise to joint he others for the day and then gets some hunting lessons in!

Frightened or content to stay wehre she is... it's so hard to tell. She doesn't seem agitated at all, so that's good. Now that Ashley is hunting with Molly and McGee she probably won't associate the owl box with food quite so much. She may visit for a few minutes but her interest will be in the hunting fields. As she learns to hunt on her own, M&M will spend more time working with Carrie.

Good Morning. I just was reading in the basement and saw one item of confusion that I could clear up. Cheryl (not Cheryl Owen) posted this in response as to why Carlos might be wanting to offer a CafePress sale right now -

"Also, there is a huge investment in some of the items and they have to clear them out before they lose their big audience or they may be stuck with a lot of surplus items. I don't blame them, but I know what you mean."

Colleen

CafePress shopkeepers do not have an inventory at all. You simply upload your artwork, put it on the virtual items at CafePress, and pay a fee for a premium shop (around $60 p/year). As custom items are ordered, CafePress makes the items and ships them out to the customer. Carlos would never get stuck with any surplus items from there.... just so you know.

I was thinking the same thing yesterday Colleen, but figured I had already been negative enough about buying 'stuff' and didn't want to bring up one more thing. Since you mentioned it I will take this opportunity to once again encourage anyone who buys the owl box souvenirs to also think about contributing to your local wildlife services. Lots of great organizations out there in desperate need of funds. I'm not saying you shouldn't buy anything from Carlos, CafePress, Vacadude, etc, just that it would be nice to contribute locally as well. (OK, I'm off my soapbox now! Back to doing laundry...)

Would Carlos have to pre-order the cafePress stuff though? I thought they just supplied the photos and then Cafe Press added them to the items as and when people ordered them, as far as I can tell all the 'items' are pretty standard throughout cafe press so they would have a large stock of all of them anyway - its just the photos that are different??

Today, 04:44:16 - Flag - Like - Reply

CafePress just has a large "blank item" inventory waiting for items to be ordered and printed on them. Carlos doesn't have to pre-order anything. Once in a while CafePress will run out of a blank item, and then nobody can sell (or buy) that type of item until CafePress gets more in stock, but that doesn't happen very often. I'm not putting Carlos down with this, but just wanted people to understand how it works.

Colleen, that all makes a lot of sense. Especially when they have blank items (t-shirts, cups, etc) and when an order comes in, they just print it and ship it out. Maybe just a way to sell more before he loses viewers and interest. But if he offers a huge discount, maybe it will help people who haven't gotten anything, have an opportunity to buy some memories and make them happy. Good morning to you Colleen.

Incidentally your measuring system is much easier than ours for recipes! I've actually got some proper measuring 'cups' and did actually use them when I made this yesterday - its so much easier than having to mess about with the scales and weighing everything 😊

Thanks so much for the recipe - I'm in apple country where I live. I will try the cake and think of Molly and the owlettes (and the wonderful people on the chat). Next week I'll be so lost as I've so enjoyed this experience and won't know what to do with my time. I don't know any of you very well, but I will miss you all. Thanks for the experience!

They do typically mate for life, but it's the male who chooses the nest site. He calls to the female and she either joins him in the nest or rejects it. Then he has to find a new site more to her liking. Once she accepts it, he starts delivering food to her there, even before her eggs are laid. So romantic!

I used to have a tree with a hollow in it. While I lived there, an owl would come to that hollow every year in March. I never got close enough to see if there was a nest, but the little owl was beautiful to see. I will bet that Molly and Mcgee return again this spring to nest in the box. Sure hope that Carlos and Donna will continue to share if I am correct.

I think by then he will be missing this. And I don't think he would have installed all of this equipment if he didn't intent to use it again. For the first clutch all of the servers, monitors, etc were set up all over their dining room table with cables running across the floor and out the wall.

Then he came back for this clutch with Command Central! I don't think there'a any question about him coming back, if the owls do. And I think the owls will!

I am more a 'lurker' than on the chat. I too am watching as this well could be our ill Carrie's last time at the owl box. Mixed feelings like all the rest, sure will miss them. Didn't see first clutch.

Walela and Jane - I posted this last night but I'll repeat it here.

For those thinking that if Carrie flies tonight she won't come back, it's not likely to happen like that. The last clutch continued to come back to the Playground for several days using it as a gathering place. From there they would take off on hunting flights with McGee and continued to receive deliveries from both Molly and McGee there. Until they leave the area for good, they are likely to hang out around the box. They probably have at last 2 weeks of hunting practice before they disperse

That's true. I started with the owls in the middle of 1st clutch? (my mind is blank on spelling clutch?)

Wish i would have seen the first clutch!! Didn't hear about this until I heard it on NBC. I got here to see the last two eggs hatch and was very sad those two didn't make it!!! I too have been more of a lurker then a poster. First experience with a chat room and took awhile for me to feel more comfortable here!!

I keep thinking Carrie will finally leave and I won't see her again, so I am just hanging on here.

Shouldn't NY and Maine be waking up soon? Maybe not on Sunday...

Thanks KB for listing the stats. I am still here, listening to Carrie's cries. But there hasn't been much going on here on the chat. I slept most of the day on Sat, unfortunately, so now I am either, not wanting to sleep (afraid I'll miss something) or not able to go to sleep.

I'm still here, checking in. I figured this may be her last night in the box so I was going to stay up and watch the goings on. Stubborn little bugger that she is.

I was going to do that too but faded early. I set the alarm to get up about now but the dog took care of that anyway. I should just trust her to get me up about 5:30.

I just added the last fly-about based on comments from the chat. She was out 11 minutes which is plenty of time for a meal. We've seen how fast they can swallow a mouse or even a rat.

I didn't realize that she was gone that long. Seemed shorter at the time. That is plenty of time to gobble down a rodent. 😊

Come on Carrie, baby. The rest of them are out there stuffing their faces with fat, juicy rodents and you need to get out there and get your share. Don't leave it all to them. Fly, little girl!

Does anybody remember the little squable on the porch when Carrie got knocked off and had to struggle to get back up? (before she took her first flight) I saw her right wing holding her up on that perch in front of the porch as she worked her way back up. I have a feeling that she might have had a sore wing and that slowed her down. But she flies and she looks strong now.

I remember that... I wasn't so much concerned with her wing, as her leg. It wouldn't surprise me if she was a bit sore after that episode. She looks good tonight. Just hoping for more in the way of calories.

I have lived here for 25 years. I love this town. Close enough to Sacramento and serious shopping if that is your thing. 1.5 hours to the mountains or the beach. A little hot in summer, but otherwise fantastic.
