What a wonderful afternoon/evening it has been in Seattle! What an incredible group of MODs I had the pleasure & joy to spend my time with! Now I am tucked into the hotel, early flight out in the morning. So night y'owl, sleep well & good dreams. I love you all! 😊

Lynda CGood night, Marsha. What model of Sony camera do you have? I need to think about replacing our old digital camera. I'm not a great photographer and don't need anything with a lot of "bells and whistles"; but I'm looking for something that takes good everyday pictures.Today, 22:01:00 - Flag - Like - ReplyMarsha Anderson

It's a Sony Steady Shot. I'm not sure you can get it anymore..this was over 2 years ago. But really anything will work. I have a simple one...has a dial for different settings, uses a card, and is very nice IMO.

Do your homework online, if you see one. Get extra cards....and LOTS of batteries! I use rechargeable ones and have tons. I have a carrying case full of batteries ready to go, cannot be without them!

Good luck, and like I said, shop around, do your homework and experiment. Delete will be your best freind! LOL

Thanks, Marsha. I never buy anything like that without a lot of research. I will be replacing a 10 yr. old Sony Cyber-shot. It was very expensive at the time. I have loved it, but it is only 3.3 mega pixels, it is heavy and a little bulky and we are having some problems with it. We only recently replaced the battery which charges in the camera and lasts for a long time before needing to be recharged. I'm hoping to find something where I don't have to carry around a lot of spare batteries.

Good luck. For one that has a battery like that, I'd be doing alot of research too!

Just checking in. It was a long day, but a great one, since I got to meet Bionc Woman today and enjoy an informative visit to the California Raptor Center at UC Davis. These birds are so beautiful and fierce. We were able to see lots of live birds, including owls, eagles, hawks, and kestrels. There was a very informative presentation on raptor anatomy, adaptations, and rehabilitation. It was really worthwhile.

Today I was really missing the owlets, their bobbing heads, and the way they peeked out the door. I miss the whole experience, really. The owls, Carlos, staying up late to watch for deliveries, and yes, even the songs!! It's so quiet! It totally makes sense that so many of us would feel this way, since we've been doing this for several months now. Watching the owls and chatting became a major part of our lives. ok, I better stop this now...the tears are coming.

Hi Elliott! That's what I finally figured out. I did it out of not knowing what else to do at the time. I got a B.S. in Computer Science back in '83 and it is quite useless in this day and age. When I was a senior they had just figured out how to use a CRT... It was like science fiction. We had been using teletype machines (which would wiggle and jiggle themselves down the aisle if you didn't hold them between your legs), and the good 'ol IBM card readers (which really didn't work well when walking between classes in the pouring rain (Rochester, NY) which was all the time, except for when it was snowing mountains full. 😊

I think I'm just going to lurk off and on for a while. I have some other computer work to catch up on. I just posted 2 recipes on Facebook. One is for the Gingersnaps that I make and the other is for Apple Walnut Squares (I think the recipe may have come from another MOD here, but I don't remember who it was). They are both rather lengthy recipes so I'd rather not try to post them here. If anyone isn't on FB, perhaps someone with screenshot skills can post it from FB to here for you.

So many interesting things there, morning glory, so save the link. The wiki was put together by several people from this chat room and is still updated and maintained by a few people here. All of the info on the 2nd clutch - stats, videoa, links, etc. - is listed on the Navigator as "Second Clutch". There is lots of poetry, haikus, slide presentations, children's pages, educational links and references. As Kathryn said, you could spend days or weeks checking it all out. It has become a wonderful resource and sort of a chronological history of Molly, McGee and all the owlets.

I've missed you all and our fine feathered friends this week! Hope you're all doing good and I can see...still having fun!? I didn't say goodbye the other night because we all know it's not goodbye (wasn't last time either) and I didn't give a speech either (you can thank me later...monetarily, if you prefer). Glad to see you all here.

Hello MOD's! I can't wait to go walking through the basement and see all the fun today.... SEAMOD's . I like that. I'm betting you guys there had a fabulous time. Hope there are PIC! I'll be popping in and out - first breakfast at the pub, then when I get back I'm on deck for an author interview on FB. A book launch for an anthology I'm part of. So, I'll just pop in when I can.

Also the Hornby Island Eagle nest. That is my favorite anyway! There are no Eagles nesting there right now, it is too late in the season, but one came by and checked it out this morning! Also love the sound of the wind and the surf. http://www.sportsmansparadiseonline.com/Bald_Eagle_Nest_Cam2.html

Yes, the eagles nest will be a good one to watch later this winter. They usually nest sometime from January to March, but have been adding to or rebuilding their nest a little lately I believe.

Over the winter, I would recommend the NABC (North American Bear Center) in Ely, MN. One of the bears they follow has probably (finally!) selected her den for the winter. She has a yearling daughter with her. They have broadcast streaming video & audio. It won't get exciting until January when the cub starts moving around while mom is pretty dozey.

Their rehabbed bears can be seen here:<http://www.bear.org/website/live-cameras/nabc-webcam.html>

But the "den cam" is pretty exciting and the little cubs are just adorable!

Okay, I am sitting here crying about Carrie...so I know that feeling well. I was wondering if I needed a psychiatrist to get thru this separation period. Then decided I needed one just for asking that question! Imagine going in and saying, "Look. My owls left and I feel abandoned." They might lock me up. I think we all feel it. We are happy they grew up so beautiful, but like all parents, are having trouble letting go. We have to tell ourselves they will be back when Molly returns in the spring. We will see them again. And we will have new babies to love. Hang tight. You have not lost us. 😊 😊

Good evening folks. Have only stopped by from time to time today here and on the hummingbird site. What a pleasant day of chat you have all had - nice photos, too of the MOD group in Seattle. Bionic Woman's visit to the raptor center and many screen shots of Phoebe the hummingbird on that site, too. Much earlier today morning glory posted a "dream". Cheryl Owen copied it and I'm reposting it below.

Thanks, Lynda. What I did to save the "assembled" version thanks to Cheryl, is, I clicked on it, then it enlarged itself. I then "saved" it to documents.

Hi all, I just arrived home from a wonderful meetup with the Bionic Woman at the California Raptor Center. It was a fascinating experience. I learned so much from the docents, and loved seeing the live birds.

I must say thanks to Peri for suggesting this outing, and for posting and sharing her fabulous photos. (I didn't bring my camera! 😞) We are hoping to have a larger group of MODs get together there in a few weeks for a guided tour.

Good evening. I didn't get as much done as I'd planned this afternoon...what else is new? I sat on the couch to read a magazine and look at a catalog, and fell asleep. Then I took a couple very long walks with the dogs, since the rain stopped, the sun came out, and it was really nice out. I looked at the MOD meet picture below...what a great picture! I've met Pursja, she's so sweet (and her Sweetie too), but it would be nice to meet the others in the picture. I'm going to eat something, and then either watch a DVD, or read. But I'll be back, I know y'owl know that!

The wait extended because the rain prevented the roofer from finishing jobs ahead of mine. Once the roofers got here they were fast and worked very hard in freezing temps.

We also have a lot of these tiny little screech owls here in AR. They are only about 6 inches tall. One of them batted himself unconscious on the side of our chicken house and my husband brought him in for me to see. I used to have a picture of him but couldn't find it so here is a link to see one.

<http://davesgarden.com/guides/birdfiles/showimage/198/>

We also have great horned and barn owls and barred owls.

It's amazing that there is always something to be done with the cleaning, shopping, cooking, playing with Juni, and walking the dog. A grandma's work is never done!

Sweet and funny story, before I REALLY go this time:

Yrs past, one of our Boxer's, Amy, had ventricle fib- (all purge, no binge- in heart function)

We had a pace maker put in.

(Yes, we are those people.)

At A&M college- cheap as chips.

But the vet said because it was in her neck- she could no longer go to dog park's-for IF dog's fight- they go for the neck.

And- she could no longer wear a collar-

to which I replied:

That's ok. Amy is the only female I KNOW who really does look good completely naked.

Everyone laughed

Her husband was a neat freak. So when they married I knew it was only a matter of time. They have been divorced for a very long time. Dual custody. Now Syd is 19, very very clean. Alex is 17 next week, and I went into his room looking for a ruler. Fork lift is needed. Then I went into Jenna's room. Front loader there for sure. She is 13. I have a solution. But it requires me moving in for a month or so. Oh, I might add, Jennifer does her best to keep her house clean. She bought it and has done a real good job so far. So WHY??? Is there even an answer? My mother would have grounded me for years!! Just venting.

Throwing something out here for comments. When I was growing up, we each had our own room. Which we cleaned "or else". Even in to high school. My parents were very adamant about that and as kids we took that into adulthood. I passed this on to my daughters. Only two of them actually picked up on it. Jennifer, the youngest and whose house I am sitting on, was the one child I couldn't get to clean her room, so I adopted the: if-the-door-is-shut-I-can't-see-the-mess attitude. I worked graveyards and very long hard hours so that solution worked for me.

When she bought her own house (there is a history leading up to this, which isn't very pretty), she had worked her job for about 3 years and was in a program with MOCA (a state run very good program here in MO) who helped her buy it. Very nice house in a very nice neighborhood. One of the proudest moments in my life! Anyhow, she works to keep it clean. Without help from the teens, two of whom live at their dad's 3 1/2 days a week. And at his house you take off your shoes at the door. so you KNOW their rooms there are spotless. I think it is because she lost control long ago and now it is too late. I know what I would do and it has a lot to do with the trash dumpster. And, as my family knows, that is a fact not a threat.

My daughter just called and while we were talking she said "Just a minute, Ralph is at the door"...Ralph is a roadrunner (not a pet) comes into her office for a treat, and she can hold him (see photo)...Ralph brought Rhoda, his mate and four fledglings to see her awhile back, but they weren't as brave...I visited last year and saw her call them from across the golf course...Cooome Heeere!, and two of them came running! Sooo remarkable! They live in the wild, but come "see" her...follow her golf cart, etc. Had to tell all of you MODS about Ralph the Roadrunner!

Didn't you post a picture the other day? I think that is soooo neat!! Hrumpf! As you know I am babysitting Maxi and Lucy while my daughter is away. Lucy is almost 3 months or so. She is a pistol!! She keeps bringing foam rubber from somewhere and I can't find where!! These three, I have my velcro Dinky with me, crack me up! When they are sure someone is around they move as one unit from the patio to the front door and back again. Like a little black cloud!

OK: ended up leaving the dog at the clinic for several hours to get onto lasix (his heart is enlarged-just the start of congestive heart failure), he's back home now, really lethargic, am cooking him a bit of rice and hamburger to tempt his appetite so we can get him to eat a bit and give him his insulin shot. Good grief, and now we give him the lasix by mouth 2x a day (he's very uncooperative--have to use a dropper or syringe). It's so sad, his days of being a playful chihuahua are really numbered now I'm afraid.

Helen, can the lasix med be added to or mixed in peanut butter?
FYI- many yrs, many dogs- all seem to like PB and "nothing" falls out, like w cheese or hot dog.
Pretty strong taste- would hide the med.
Maybe see if he will take a little first.
Sure cou;ld make meds easier...

The Bionic Woman

Good afternoon Fellow MODs - I just got back from the "Northern CA MODs Get Together (if you can call two of us a meet!). I had a great time visiting with Josie. As most of you know when meeting up with others, I found I have a lot in common with her (others). I will post pictures after they download.

FYI - I am organizing another meet on either Nov 13 or Nov 20 at 10am at the UCDavis Raptor Center. We can have a guided tour with docents if we can get more than 6 people together. Cost = $4. per person. (date is not sent because the docents need to verify what dates they are available. I will have more info by Wednesday.

We had a great time at the center, then went to lunch and spent 2 hours chatting away.

Yes! it was actually one of my customers in the afternoon, having had to run next door in the morning to help my neighbour who's wife had collapsed (and sadly died by the time I got there despite our efforts to revive her), I got back home to see Kelly pass away and be consumed, eventually got to work and had to fish a dead mouse out my first customers pool, moved on to my next customer and inadvertently hedge trimmed a wasp nest and was stung multiple times on my neck - at which point I burst into tears and my customer sat me down and made me a 'nice cup of tea' it will not go down as one of my better days 😊

Go take a hot shower and get yourself toasty warm. No rain here today, but blustery wind and high temp was 40 degrees. I can't imagine sittina outside at a soccer game. I even put the flannel sheets on the bed when I chanced it today. I'm hopeful of aettina outside for another day to take care of the mountains of Fall leaves that are all over the yard again, but not if this weather keeps up. I'd have to dig out my old snowmobile suit to do it !!! We did have a few snowflakes in the air yesterday and some snow on some of the higher mountains already. In fact, with their snow making equipment, one of our ski areas about 20 miles from here opened one trail this weekend. The first in the nation to open a trail they said !!

If you haven't checked it out already, Janet, click on the link below OB2 (Live hummingbird nest cam). A Channel Island Allen hummingbird is in the process of building her nest and will lay eggs in it when she finishes. A lot of folks from this chat room are watching the site. It is amazing to see how she is weaving the nest material and sticking it together with spider web. It will be a good site to watch for several weeks.

You're very welcome, YTQ. I came across it by accident a year or two ago. I love it!! I left a post for you several days ago about the idea that came up when the quilt presentation was done during the picnic in CA for the quilters here to make quilt blocks to put together for Carlos & Donna. I would still be glad to make a block. But, the thought occurred to me that, even though it would be a nice gesture, Carlos & Donna have SO much stuff that has been presented to them over past months and probably don't need another quilt. I think what I would like to do is make a youth or baby quilt or two with owl theme fabrics and donate them to the Linus Project or other charitable cause. I would somehow like to be able to contact Carlos and Donna to let them know the quilts were done and donated as a thanks to them. Your thoughts???

That sounds like a very nice gesture! In fact PERFECT! I do donation quilts a lot. The latest were Downy quilts. Have you heard of that project? And are you on the quilt board? A lot of the members have done Linus and Downy. It's a Site to Behold! 12-13 thousand members, and even experienced quilters can find new information.

Good Afternoon, everyone (or evening, as the case may be). Trying to sort some stuff today; it's a REALLY big job. 😞

This is only a drop in the bucket, so to speak, but does anyone here collect Red Rose Tea figurines or postcards? Some of the postcards go back to the 1940s. I would like to give them to someone who would really like them. Free of charge, of course.

Anyone?

I hope no one objects to my posting this here. Most of you have probably seen it before. But, as we near the end of National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, the picture is worth a thousand words. Having lost two sisters, ultimately as a result of their breast cancer, and knowing that many here are breast cancer survivors or have Moms, daughters, sisters or friends who are, finding the cure is most important to me.

I can hardly wait for my large prints! The calendars arrived pretty quickly, but I suspect because the prints are larger, they might take longer, plus they are likely to get caught at the US/Canada border customs.

Just back for a few. Shortly after I signed on earlier I lost all access to my computer. DH had called Dell about a problem he was having with the laptop. Apparently something was corrupted, so I had to sign on to their "remote" access and the technician took control of both computers and did something to clear both computers of any problems. It took over an hour for the technician to accomplish whatever it was and he just called back and put us through some steps to see if everything was working OK. That's scary, knowing that someone can do that 😱. Although I have read stories about bad things happening when people do that, we have had wonderful service, response and feel safe with the Dell Company.

Hi Lynda! Sorry to hear about your computer problems. I don't like giving remote access either. I think they can only check the line to your house (they can see the router or bridge) but nothing beyond that without your consent. Just take good notes: the guy's name, time you called, etc so if something happens you know who it was you allowed on your network.

There are also ways to protect (lock other people out to keep them from snooping) your files when you allow remote sharing. If I let you on my computer you would only be able to see whatever I put in my public folder that is there to allow sharing only what you want to share.

Good morning, Marla! I saw the Legend of the Guardians twice...once in 3-d and then in 2-d...it's definitely worth seeing either way so enjoy!

Most people think it's a kiddie film but it's great for adults too. Have a great day! 😊

While I stood there by the side of the road, the strangest thing happened. A huge CAR came along carrying all the rest of the residents of MODVILLE. The driver had on a green helmet and looked absolutely feline! She shouted she was taking all to find the ROYAL couple who had left the castle. THE END to a silly tale! Wish I could have named each and every precious MOD. I know I would have been looking for my name and felt left out if I didn't see it. LOVE to you all.

In the distance I saw a large bluff and sitting on the top, a magnificent Lion named George who kept his right paw warm in an owl muff so his trigger finger would stay ready to capture the next great shot! Then I heard classical music wafting from somewhere nearby. I asked Lynn, Lynda, and Linda, three beautiful sisters from whence came these haunting sounds. They pointed to a lovely cottage a little ways away and told of a wise and gifted person who resided there. The story goes that this intriguing person had studied in literature and the fine arts in Switzerland some years ago. Jann the English lass said she had great admiration for this wonderful and mysterious character.

Just a note...all prices are still marked down at cafe press. The 20% discount is gone. Maybe I misunderstood Carlos. I thought that all the prices had been cut for the sale that ended at midnight PDT on the 20th. And that they would go back to the regular prices after that.

If you find yourself confused and thinking I've gone off the deep end, I'm trying to post a make believe dream. I hit "reply" under the first part but it didn't go below. Oh well. I'm having fun in my insanity. As a friend of mine used to say she was going to write a book entitled "Joy in My Insanity!" 😊

So cute. I just found that hummingbird camera earlier today and posted a link to it. I only got a fleeting glimpse. The bird showed up for about 10 seconds and then left. Thanks for the picture. It's strange to see one sitting still and not buzzing around at the speed of light! lol

She's very pretty! I love her colours.

The forest was quite spooky and I found myself imagining I heard a Tiger named Mo. Then I saw a gorgeous white horse and many beautiful cats and dogs. As night gave way to the Dawn, I found myself in a field of flowers where many tiny Phoebes flitted from one blossom to the next. There was a golden haired young Irish maiden named Colleen juggling balls, laughing and talking to her friends, Roni, whose lawyerly advice she took from time to time, Ingrid with an arm full of red and yellow tulips, Baxter, Cinda, and Kristi! I then realized it wasn't just a field but part of a farm and purdy Becky was there waving to Jean going down the street in her Model T.

There was a peaceful silence from the castle where for so long the same music had heard endlessly. Now there was quiet and young Prince Austin was now able to devote himself to his studies. I looked about me and admired the soft, Feathery, Amber Lights which cast a lovely glow on the streets of MOD. As with the way of dreams I next found myself in a lovely woods which seemed filled with strange and beautiful creatures. There in the trees large eyes watched me. They seemed so very familiar! I saw two young owls sitting on a branch and as crazy as this sound the younger begged for coffee and donuts from the older sibling!

Last night in dreams I walked the streets of Mod in the land of Pursja. In the beginning of the dream, I had just emerged from a very long climb up stairs from a deep basement where many treasures lay and where chords of "Sounds of Silence" still echoed. At the street level I saw that I was very near the castle of King Carlos and Queen Donna. I sat on a nearby bench to catch my breath and read a new spaper. "The Daily Hork" announced that the King and Queen had just left for an extended visit to a beautiful island country!

Good Morning. Debating on whether to grocery shop today. I hate to grocery shop on Saturdays. Too busy!!! My hubby came home on Thursday afternoon, a day early, without notice. Got me off my schedule for the end of the week. He loves college football and our team isn't on a TV station we get. So we are going to a sports bar to watch the game this afternoon. We have Dish Network and they have stopped carrying the FOX channels, otherwise we would get the game. We pay extra for those channels and don't get them now. I wish they would get this mess straightened out.

Still missing the owls & Carlos. Wish we would get some little update. Maybe next week, Carlos will post something. Have a good day!!!

Here are my recipes for today. My Mom's Easy Fudge, and my Aunt Dorothy's Shortbread...

Fudge

3 cups semi-sweet chocolate chips

1 14oz can Eagle sweetened milk

1/2 cup nuts, optional

Dash of salt

1 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Mix chips, milk, and salt in sauce pan.

Melt over med-low heat

Take off heat and add vanilla

I put this in foil lined 8X8 pans

Let cool, and cut

Scottish Shortbread

1 pound butter, softened

1 cup sugar

5 cups flour

Cream butter and sugar

Add 1 cup of flour at a time

Press firmly in jelly roll pan

Bake at 350 for 30 - 35 minutes

Cut as soon as it comes out of oven

 Back here for a minute. I need to put up a few "fall decorations" around my house. I love decorating a little 5' tree with fake fall leave and picks. I usually place it somewhere near the front door. Trying to have the day filled with that and a little housework. I can't believe how dust can take over in just a couple of days. Good morning MODs, just warming up my second cup of coffee, waiting for pain meds to kick in. I have already checked the crawl space (thanks Roni for that imagery) and glad to see the Seattle Mods are having a great time. Plans today include a quick run out to shop (my sanity trip) and we have a play tonight at the Walnut Street Theater in Philadelphia this evening. I should do some more baking today as I have a few packages to send out Monday before we leave; I send pound cakes as birthday presents to my brothers, SIL's, BIL, their significant others and all the nieces and nephews. Also have to get a package ready with Christmas presents to ship to Poland, they take six weeks to get there. Better get on my "horse" and start moving. Have a great day and I lurk when I can. 😊

Sounds like you really love it - I'll have to come visit you one day and sample some 😊😊 I'm planning on making the raw apple cake again either today or tomorrow - and possibly some other bits and pieces - and definitely cooking the first proper roast dinner of the season tomorrow - yummy!!

Good morning Roni, love your new name for the basement; the Crawl Space. I think we all started at this site to see the wonder of nature up close and personal; and what we found was the company. This became such a social group, even before people thought of meeting in person. The social aspect of this chat site ruffled some feathers with the "purists" who only came to see owls, research everything that was available and "teach" the social group. As far as a psychiatrist, if they weren't a MOD, it would cost a fortune to explain why this works. 😊

Good morning MODs; had to take dog to vet this morning; he coughed and snuffled all night, didn't get much sleep. He has congestive heart failure, early stages, we found out about it two weeks ago. Know that we will have to let him go soon, and we are both devastated, although we went through it with our last dog, a Lhasa. Right now he is at the vets getting Lasix, ready to come home at 2 CDT. Did you all realize Daylight Saving ends Nov 7th? Oh well, excuse the glum post. Just felt like sharing. Glad everyone is having a good day.

You know, Helen, this room is filled with people who have large hearts and understand this kind of loss. Everyone in here has either owned a dog or cat, or several or hundreds of each. We all know the unconditional love that comes from them, and the terrible sense of loss when they pass on. This is the perfect place to be to be comforted by those who can truly share the feelings you have. Stay with us. We will all get thru it together.

Morning, YOW!...I missed ya'll yesterday...day was full...best part was learning how to use KJClipit...Molly landing avatar is example I have some art work in mind...some silly, some serious, now I can go to work on it...except life and obligations seem to be piling up The two sisters I am tutoring in sacramento, one, Hitzuary, now needs tutoring in 4th grade, composition, math and social studies... Teachers had me come with her mother to conference...now I will be going to Georgetown to work with her on Wed. afternoons... Her parents had written her off as not being as smart as the younger sister..the problem was she is fluent in Spanish and struggled in 1st, 2nd, and third grades translating concepts in her mind from Spanish to English and miss understood work...parents just thought she was not smart to enough to be concerned about...

Really heartbreaking...now I am in the restoration business!

On the FB page, they wrote about the owlet hopping out because of mites. They had him checked out, and returned him to the nest.

Hello! I just finished watching Comanche Moon, a Larry McMurtrey prequel to Lonesome Dove. Anyone still up?

Howdy! It was two DVDs, so it took awhile. I really like Larry McMurtrey's books, I had not seen this film yet. I think it was a mini-series.
