Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

A really interesting thing to do with children, & look around in woods or underneath nest boxes to find raptor pellets. Soak them in water to reveal the diet of your feathered friends. One of my owls had 3 mouse /vole skulls in a single pellet+all the other bones!

Off until this evening. Some wonderful, unusual screen captures today - thanks all. I've ordered a mouse pad (because I REALLY need one) and the hard-cover book, which I will read and donate to our local library. I guess I'm a "scrooge", but I don't need any more mugs or T-shirts. I have 3 shelves totally full of various cookbooks in a kitchen cabinet and there comes a time in our "Golden Years" when we think more about downsizing "stuff" and less about collecting it. My best "memory books" about this experience are stored neatly in the Wiki site <http://mollyowlnetworks.com/> and on Carlos's BLOG <http://mollyowl.wordpress.com/blog/>. See y'awl later

Raining raining raining here in Oregon. Went to one of our local parks on the river yesterday. (Willamette River here in Oregon) .. The park is completely under water. Could barely see the tops of the fences of the baseball park. I was in shock. I've never seen that in June before.

Just popped in for a moment and happened to look at blue box stats again. I see that the book, Moly the Owl by Eric Blehm can now be ordered in HARDBACK version. Just thought everyone might like to know. I really don't have time to scan the basement to see if this information has been posted or not so please excuse me if this is common knowledge in the chat room already and disregard my message. Also wanted to say hello to the daytime MODS and glad to see Austin and Wesley spending the day together again. I can't spend much of today on here, but hope to check on the owlets once in a while when I can "sneak" it in - I am sure some of you can relate to having to do this. 😊 Will be here tonight to watch though. Have a great day everyone 😊!

Currently you can go back about 4685 items - or as far as your browser/pc can handle it.
It's very memory intensive to go back more than about 12 hours, sometimes it's impossible to go that far without getting corrupt data.

James, I did miss the video chat. Had to help DH wash motorhome and other stuff to get done. I guess I was just so excited about being able to order the hardback version even though I ordered the E-version. I understand the hardback version will not have as many photos, is that correct? Or maybe I have it backwards. Wouldn't surprise me. So nice to know you guys talked about me. Makes me feel not forgotten anyway if you did. 😊 And while I have your attention James, I just want to thank you again for suggesting Google Chrome. It is soooo much better and does not freeze up when the chat room is bombarded at night. The video feeds have to refresh on their own periodically at night but Chrome is the best. So keep capturing and creating wonderful renditions of captures and I will look later..

The two versions of the book will each be slightly different. the eBook will have many more pages and more adult content. The hardcover will be primarily a children's book, 48 pages, but it will have some special content not in the eBook. The first edition of the hardcover will be autographed by Carbs, Donna, the author and illustrator, for those who pre-order in the next few days.

See you later on...

James - I was on it immediately and pre-ordered and paid. Thanks for the update on the e-book and hardcover version. One last thing and then I will leave you alone - Do you suggest saving the e-book to a CD or DVD? I may not even have it printed and am thinking I just will want to watch on computer or TV screen. So need to know the best format to save it on. Thanks James and I always appreciate all your help with questions.

Part 2 for James: Ran out of character space in last post. I keep meaning to ask if we go into the PDF's of the chat room and see captures/photos we like, are we able to click on them and save to our computer? I am hoping so since I cannot spend all that much time on here today to scan the basement to hoard photos. Thanks James and chat with you guys later...

Yes to saving the PDF of the eBook on a CD. Actually I'd back it up to a couple CDs and maybe a couple different computers. It can only be printed 1 time, but you should be able to save it, open it, and read it as many times as you like.

No to being able to click on any of the photos in the PDFs of our chat. Sorry, there is no way to facilitate that. BUT, we have been collecting hundreds of images for a massive slideshow gallery.

See the Moly Wiki Slideshow here - Moly \(the Owl's Wiki / Photos Photos Photos\) It's random, so no two viewings should be the same. Images can be clicked on to open the actual storage gallery, from which you can download and save any you want to keep.

Also, I was aware and have viewed all your hard work in the wiki of the side show and was not thinking clearly when I posted my question on being able to save photos people have contributed. Sorry about that!! 😊 Just one more thing to sit and digest in my not so spare time. See ya later - have to continue on with my day at hand here. Thanks again James!

I don't think Austin is waiting for Wesley to be ready to move out of the box - I think its the other way round! We have had our BB house up for many years... 15 or more. I'm sure we did reading at that time on the specifics of location. We have our bluebird house on a tree... I'd say it's about 6 feet off the ground. It is probably 15-20 feet from our front door. The birds raise there several times during the year... our goings and comings doesn't seem to bother them. I have a birdbath close by... they enjoy it very much, as do other birds.

I think so if it was Molly or McGee, but I think the babies would just be scared and would cower, which of course no one wants them to be scared. So I'm glad Carlos would never do that.

So hot that I can almost smell the gag-shag on the floor.

I hope they're getting enough water from their rat-snacks.

The other day it looked even hotter in the owl box, Kasey - they were panting and opening their wings. When they went out that night, they had the opportunity to stay out in the palm tree, but they didn't. It's hard for us to realize that they don't think like we do. But they're equipped with the ability to maintain their body temperature (which is 104 degrees F.) in the owl box.

I don't think it's as hot as it looks. Here's the current temp in San Marcos, CA. 69 degrees. Being in the sun, I'm sure the box is warmer but it has openings at the top to vent heat and it's almost certainly catching some breeze.

PSA for the PDF: The hardcover version of Eric Behm's Molly the Owl is a go! It will be 48 pages and out in early October. To pre-order the hardcover book go to: http://www.ericblehm.com

Questions? Be sure to scroll down for FAQ: http://www.ericblehm.com/#FAQ
Please pre-order it now, so they know how many to have printed. The first edition will be signed by Eric and Donna and Austin (Carlos' grandson)! There are also Molly bookmarks available.

Note: The e-book will be longer and include a section at the end for adult readers -- a timeline and material from the chat rooms.

Sylvia Hix I just finished the book last night. Incredible story. The way she described her deep relationship with her Wesley mirrored the relationship I had with my dear sweet Willow. She was a special cat with whom I had the honor and privilege of having with me for 18 years. I shed buckets of tears as I held her in my arms, saying over and over, "mama loves you" and kissing her head a 100 times as she received an intravenous concoction to put her to sleep. Stacey described that telepathic: "I know you and I know you know me and I know you know that I know how much we love each other."

The book was great on so many levels and a very good read as I've been tuned in here. Love, Kathleen

I have a stupid cat story!! I have one of those soap magic automatic soap dispensers by my kitchen sink. I was doing dishes one day, and Sunny comes up and sticks his head under it! Of course he got soap on him that I had to wash off! I have a chime on mine that chimes when the soap is done pouring out. I think he wanted to see where the noise was coming from! Ahh, the dreaded "You Like me, I like you" syndrome strikes again. 😊 (Sally Field, slightly misquoted, as is usual on the internets http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sally_Field#Film)
Believe it or not, I actually do spend considerable time doing other blue marks. Sometimes I will like a post for PDFs and other things, so I don't always get to like something as I see it happening, at least not with my usual blue mark. Other times I will like a post only as a bookmark, making it easy for me to locate something I may disagree with, but ultimately want to stay on top of. So no, no one can associate my Likes and Dislikes as anything more than acknowledgement that I have simply clicked my mouse button while reading. 😊
That said, I do really like your sense of humor and have enjoyed your participation here. Keep at it! Link to image below - http://i.kit.com/blob/Action/8f9b9d6f5_hkvs.jpg

Good afternoon from Maine. Just a quick visit. I can see there will be a lot of questions today - How can I order the hard cover of the book? 😊
Duly noted and bookmarked here!! I didn't scroll far enough to see if there were any questions about signing the group card, but I believe it will be sent to Carlos at 3:00 p.m today (assume that is PDT) - so there is still time to sign it. There are now 2265 messages - awesome - and I saw a lot of familiar avatars there. I had an email from groupcards.com last night that said the average number of signatures is ten (10)

Wesley had a little fit last night. She was alone for awhile and she was letting everyone know she didn't care for that. It wasn't long after all her squawking that Austin came back. I'm thinking Wesley is the hold up and her brother is keeping her company until she's ready to leave.

Also have the Back Yard Barn Owls video to watch when I get OWL cravings. This should get me through the summer and winter until with crossed fingers Molly will be back and Carlos will have had enough rest to do this all over again.

Good morning! I see there are some great pics of all 4 together last night. I captured a good one I'd like to share, too. It was taken while the 4 seemed to be a bit spooked. Of course, that's what I thought, anyhow. I could be very wrong. But their conversation made me think...well, just look at the pic and see what YOU think....

Good morning, Jan (and hello, James-son), and everyone else. Jan, being the birder you are, here are the yard stats this morning: eight downies with fledglings at the feeders, house wren babies cheeping in their little house as the parents come and go, two wb nuthatches (hope babies come soon) some cardinals, pair of Carolina wrens w/fledglings, 1tmice (tons), chickadees (not many this year compared to usual--do you have any ideas on that?), jays, crows, and grackles, catbird, ... and here's what I'm excited about... the red bellied WPs are coming to the feeder again and taking food off to the woods for the babies--I SO want the babies to start coming to the yard! And we heard the barred owls calling last night--always a treat.

I'm beaming them all right to your living room!

Morning, Natalie, Jan, and anyone else I missed earlier. I just returned from my morning coffee in the porch swing. Had a Carolina wren land on the swing with me, right after it snatched a spider from under the eave. Stayed only long enough to get a good look at me and then flew but, as luck would have it, a nearby blue jay noticed the "connection" the wren and I had, so he came to investigate. Expecting breakfast, I'm sure. He hopped up on the porch and looked at me sort of the way these owls look at a bug on the wall. Head tilt, two steps, head tilt, another hop, head tilt... Wish I had my camera in hand, the encounter was quite comical. 😊

Why, thank you, Natalie! I'll take every single one of them. It's heartening to hear that bird life in all its glory is exploding around you! I'm sure the red-bellies will bring the young'ns as soon as they've fledged. A consistent source of food is just what they need for those hungry little bellies (pun intended). Sounds like you're soon to have fledging chaos in your yard before too long! As for the chickadees, it's impossible for me to guess why their numbers are down. So many variables - but you can always check with your local Audubon Society to see if they have any stats on it.
