Good morning, y'owl.
<Big Yawn> I wonder why I didn't get much sleep last night.

I'll be lurking all day long.
Have a great day, everyone.

Just been lurking these past few days. In my book it says no nesting materials used by barn owls. Is that stuff past feedings?

Morning folks, was on MUCH earlier but had to go back and take a nap. I cleared out my history and it took my avatar with it so had to find a new one. I know its almost noon for some of you! Just now getting fresh coffee here! sigh!! Lots of smurf posts in middle of night saying we had a 3rd egg hatching but I see not true. I swear I thought I saw her eating egg shell though. Wishful thinking? Today is my SIL's birthday so want one hatched today for him. Oh well, not a biggie...off to the shower to finish waking up!

 Good morning!! Just to clarify for the newbies, there is a big difference between misinformation and smurf drivers. Misinformation is what happens when someone speculates/misreads/misinterprets out loud (as I did a while back w/ Elliott's post) and the next 12 readers take their post as gospel. As in anything, we need to try to always make educated posts, or at least note that our post is our opinion/hypothesis/interpretation, not word. A smurf, on the other hand, posts malicious/controversial/inappropriate things simply because they have nothing better in their life to do. A true smurf - NOT one that's just slightly annoying and immature - should be flagged and IGNORED. If their comments are flagged enough, they will be banned. No need to engage. In both situations, using common sense should prevail. I just wanted to clear up the difference between the two very different types of posts (and people).

 ...cont....I'm not saying that smurfs can't/didn't post misinformation, but typically they are totally different animals (so to speak). I would hate to think that well-meaning, misinformed viewers were being flagged because of....misinformation. 🙄

 Contented little chirps coming from the owl box. Babies Ashley and Carrie now have food in their tummies and mom is keeping them warm and safe next to their next two siblings soon to arrive.
 The chirping you hear coming from an egg soon to hatch sounds more like "help get me out of this thing" totally different than what we are hearing now. I kind of doubt there will be another hatching before tomorrow but then again they have sure surprised us a lot this clutch.
 Stay tuned as who know what will happen next.

buy one in a health food store or co-operative -- basically you make one cup of salty water, and pour it in one nostril, and out the other, over the sink or tub....it washes out all the pollen and germs you breathe in

For those of wondering how much more beneficial a rabbit is than a mouse for Molly, here's information compiled by Carlos. Additional estimate courtesy James Hill and yours truly.

MOUSE UNIT EQUIVALENTS
1 mouse = 1 mouse unit (≈20g)
1 gopher = 10 mouse units
1 rat = 16 mouse units
1 rabbit or 1 possum = 24 mouse units
1 carlos = 3,000 mouse units
1 polar bear = 32,000 mouse units
1 cow = 36,250 mouse units
1 space shuttle orbiter (organic bits only) ≈ 1,000,000 mouse units

Jill, PRT SCR captures the picture, then you have to paste it somewhere (Word works) and then right click on that to Save it to your computer as a picture.
Far, Far easier and faster to download Cropper because you can set that to save as a .bmp file directly to your computer. It automatically saves all pictures to a file folder in your Documents folder called Cropper. Download it, follow the instructions and you'll be using it within minutes.

I was so ecstatic to catch the action last night, Ingrid! Since the beginning I've yet to see a birth 😊 but you know what? Those times are always captured by so many people that I don't feel like I'm totally missing out. However, times like last night (and the food delivery-retraction-redelivery) are so unusual to witness and they aren't always captured in a way that tells the whole story. So all in all, I'm thrilled that I've gotten to experience some of our more exciting and uncommon events with my own two eyes.

I know it's fun to make jokes about it but, Social Monogamy is a rarity in the animal world, and becoming more rare with each new study. A few here seem to honestly think that there is something wrong with the idea that McGee may have interests other than just this one nest. It would probably be wise to stop comparing human emotional dependence with the instinctual behavior of wild animals. After all, the sole purpose in a wild animal's life is to create more life.

A good point, well made James 😊 ... and as far as this box is concerned all that actually matters is that McGee brings in enough food for Molly and the babies - and even if the strange owl is his 'bit on the side' - she is not nesting at the moment which means McGee is not having to 'provide' for her. So all his hunting is either for himself or Molly and the kids. (I'd still like to think its an owl from the previous brood though 😊 😊 😊)

I think it goes back to how we make everything a story. In my mind, even you are either a human or more of a humanities person. As humans, we make sense of the world by writing its story. So where does this owl fit in the story of Molly and McGee? Most people want the story to be Molly meets McGee. They raise 2 broods. He brings food. She's her Prince Charming. It's a perfect love story. They don't want an intruder owl who doesn't fit into the perfect story. Yes, I know that is a total humanization of the owls. But that is what many people are wont to do. That being said, you all have taught me to look more scientifically at the process, and I do appreciate that. Nothing profound - just felt like typing! 😊

Owlosaurus (Mousies in the pantry...)
Kristi, what you say is true. And I can see it from both sides (degrees in microbiology and anthropology/sociology) but I feel compelled to keep bringing in the science side for a reason. Many people read these shows up and take the comments to extremes. A late food delivery turns into 'the owls are starving!' and 'McGee is drunk outside a tavern'. A strange owl showing up with McGee and it turns into 'he's a cat' and 'Oh poor Molly'. None of these things is true but WAY too many people take them as true and the stories expand. This isn't a romance novel or the Lifetime channel. It's real life. Real owl life.

Turning McGee into a bad guy for just doing what an owl does, doesn't seem right to me. Molly tears the heads off bunnies and she's a good owl. McGee makes more owlets and he's a good owl.

Kristi from VA - grateful for Owlo and others!

And that is why I am glad you and others are here. I would fall into that trap ... quickly! I would turn it into a bad romance novel ... even though I don't read them. I am so grateful that there are people here who force me to turn my thinking and look at the whole thing in a different way. I may be an old dog, but I am always willing to learn something new. I am getting better! I used to be the first one to get worked up when Molly didn't get food right away. I am much more calm now, and I am forcing myself to look at things scientifically. I guess I just understand why people write what they do. I teach history, and it's all about the story. It's getting there! A few more clutches, and I'll be good!

Barb - check out the Cornell Ornithology Lab website for good info on your question but in a nutsheel (eggshell?) the female has spots on her breast/belly, and a dark area on her face from crown toward beak - the male is very pale on chest and all white on face.

Cat - those who have closely compared pictures of the visitor to pictures of Wes say it was definitely not Wes. One of the reasons Carlos thinks it's a different owl is that when Molly got aggressive the owl went into the mimosa tree and the owlets never did that. Different look, different behavior = different owl.

Good Monday morning, very unusual chilly for this time of year at my house. Woke up to 55° and I love it. Will heat up again by later in the week but loving a cooler August for a change.

Trying to scroll down to see what happened after I shut down last night. Looks like some food was delivered (thank goodness) and another possible peeping going on. Never a dull moment in this wonderful owl box.

Another owl showing up. Oh my I need more details on that scoop.

Eve (let's just go with Miss Crabby Pants)

1:00am-ish est (aka the time I said goodnight but didn't log off - yay!)...Bird shows up and perches outside box. Appears to be McGee. While perched, two clearly visible owls do fly-bys, maybe even three, but the third could've been #1 or 2 circling. Perched owl enters box. Lots of squawks, wings, legs.

No bonding. Said owl is shown the door with fervor. Great speculation as to who all of these characters were. Carlos indicated on chat last night that he thought the "intruder" was, in fact, McGee. Others think it was her. In case you care, my vote is that it was McGee.

Just dropped by for an update on happenings in the owl box. Only went back a few pages into the "basement" - thanks all for your good records of food deliveries this morning. I see there is still no confirmation or conclusion on who the other female owl was. I was here for a while after the appearance of McGee (and I do think it was McGee!) and the other owl. The chat room sure was busy with herbillites - how many owls, who came when it happened and it was. My thoughts -- We may never know for certain who the female was or exactly what possibilities there meant. What is of interest is that it and who it gives us one more "window" on owl behavior that we haven't seen before. Glad to see all his calm, quiet and that the pantry is well stocked today. Be back later this evening.

When my oldest went into 1st grade, she didn't want to get on the bus. It was like trying to get a cat in a cat carrier! 😞 😞. Ended up driving her to school with the youngest one in a soggy diaper. Good morning!
Just signing on for the first time today. Glad to see treats were delivered. Sad to hear McGee is still hanging out with another owl. There is quite a bit of documentation about polygamy in barn owls, but I was hoping McGee would avoid that path. She's probably a groupie who knows he's a star. It's so hard for famous couples to stay true... too many temptations I guess.

They are owls. They will behave like owls typically behave. Making moral judgments may be unavoidable for many but we are just here to observe and learn. We've become attached to these owls and have anthropomorphised them not just into humans but into a human family structure. McGee has been here twice now that we know of with another female and pictures have shown that she is not likely one of the previous brood. Owls can be polygamous and still adequately provide for two families.

The previous visit was well documented in this chat with lots of photos.

No third owlet yet, Ashely born 8/6th and Carrie 8/8th. Info box at top of screen has not been updated, may not be this time around. Molly certainly had an easier time turning the eggs when some of them did not have wings, legs and heads. 😊 Maybe with McGees schedule of food drops and the warmer weather Molly will do more of the hunting after all the eggs have hatched.

I've only viewed this site since learning of it over the weekend. I've caught all three feedings but I see some devoted listeners regularly miss them. I keep my laptop by my bedside. When McGee stops by, there is such a racket that I immediately awaken. Maybe I'm just a light sleeper...30 years of being an obstetrician will do that to you. I only wish more of my patients and their baby's daddies would be as responsible and devoted to their offspring as Molly and McGee. I hate to introduce politics into this, but the "welfare state" tends to squash notions of personal responsibility. I know "animals" are said to operate on "instinct", but I wonder if that instinct could be extinguished if we "lndy" dropped off a rat whenever we thought McGee was running late. Pretty soon, McGee might lose his role and whatever he might imprint. Then, who is to teach the fledglings the way of the owl world? OK, enough of my soapbox, back to the fun part.

I think I see what you are seeing! I didn't see it delivered so don't know what shape it was in, but in the cam it does appear that the fur is moving a little. Owl breath making it move? Movement of the owl box? Or... is it still alive? Guess we'll have to keep watching!

Afternoon Everybody! I've been a little way in the basement and as far as I can figure this is what happened overnight (I wasn't going to do one of these today as James had made such a good job of the one below ☺ but as I'm here! I only skipped through so if I've missed anything or got anything wrong please let me know!
22.06pm McGee turns up empty handed - but in the company of 'Her' - Molly isn't happy and tells him so in no uncertain terms and won't even let him in to see the new baby
2.25am McGee finally arrives with a mouse - Molly forgives him and does let him in this time
5.00am McGee turns up again and delivers a rat - everyone appears to be fed and happy - and quiet!

Don't think anybody knows for sure until photos can be examined. 3 owls came and one of them tried to enter the owlbox, but Molly jumped up and attacked the owl and sent him/her packing. The other 2 just did flybys. Some think the attacked owl was McGee without food, others think it was that female again from the other night.

Theres been another owl spotted quite often round the owl box - we think its a female from the previous brood - neither Molly nor McGee seem particularly bothered about it - unless it sits on the fledge ledge - then Molly chases it off!

What's in a name? I guess this clutch we'll tend to say "she" and "her" until the owllets are ready to fledge and their feather coloring is distinct. I had a precous female cockatiel for almost 20 years that had a "male" name so I referred to it as "he" and "him"... even when she laid an egg!

Someone is being tenderly feed, Maybe latter in day when sun has warmed the box Molly will standup more. Owlets seem more alert earlier than Max but he was born back in March when it was cool. I wonder if the weather, warmth is influencing McGees decision on how much food to bring?

Can't sleep, so came to see how the girl was!!! I wasn't around this early during the first clutch. Seems so strange to see her so still. Once they start growing, she never has a moments peace. So, it is nice to see her have so much quiet time!!!

 Sorry to see you go. This is a fun experience. Lots of people love memorabilia and want something more than memories. These items have come about because people have requested them. People wanted a mug and a t-shirt and then they started asking about other things. Then people wanted things with actual photographs of the owls/owllets on it instead of cartoon drawings, so Carlos started offering that.
 The songs are from fellow MODS. The original "Molly Barn Owl" song was written by a teacher and she and her class of elementary school kids recorded it and sent it to Carlos to thank him for a fun learning experience. Now another Molly fan wrote a song and sent it to Carlos.
 No one is expected to pay to watch this experience. If you want to just watch it, go right ahead. The viewing experience is entirely FREE without obligation.

 For those wanting to do easy and fast screen captures, try the utility that I use. It's called UOSU and it is only a 1 button click to make a screen capture.
<http://www.brothersoft.com/uosu---u0-screen-shot-utility-236529.html>

It's very easy to use. Here are the directions:
 1. Download the file and unzip it anywhere on the hard drive you like. I put it into "My Documents"
 2. Open the newly created UOSU folder.
 3. Double click the UOSU.EXE file.
 4. Browse to the folder where you want your screen captures to be saved.
 5. Assign a key to use. The default is "ESC". I just left it at that for my use.

 The images are saved as .BMP files, which are huge!!! But you can have them automatically saved as .JPG files by moving the .dll file from the UOSU folder to your WINDOWS32 SYSTEMS folder. I did this because .BMP files are so large that you can quickly fill up your hard drive with images, and most sites won't allow for such large uploading of images.

Now I can take as many screen captures as I want without having to have my graphic program open and pasting each one into the graphic program. I simply press ESC and the image is saved as a .JPG file to a folder inside MY DOCUMENTS and I can edit them at my leisure when time permits.

I've been using this program for going on 8 years or so, and I absolutely swear by it.

 Oh yeah. Once you pick the key and the folder, you don't have to worry about it anymore. After that all you have to do is double click the .exe file when you want to use the program, and then screen capture away!

 Let me know how you like the program. When I first got a computer I had no idea how to do screen captures and when I finally learned about the print screen, I found it too cumbersome to do when I wanted to take multiple screen captures. This is so quick and easy and even though I still use print screen for one or two screen captures, when I am watching Molly, I have UOSU open and at the ready.

It's tough to make a real comparison. This time, we've got the OB2 camera showing that McGee spends quite a bit of "nearly" time just outside the box. On the other hand, we've also got McGee presumably still spending time with his first set, which he didn't have to do last time around.

 When the owl (McGee?) landed on the roof and then onto the platform, Molly was calling him. She did both sounds implying she was both asking McGee to come in and also to have some food. Perhaps when he walked in without the platform, she ran him off at the door. She is very relaxed now so I think she is waiting for McGee to return with food.

 Last night Ashley was practically screaming with hunger, and, if I recall correctly, kept it up and may have even increased her vocalizations when McGee came round with food. And I think that whenever that was caused them to get quieter instead of excited. Like perhaps they sensed someone other than dad? Or, perhaps I'm assigning far too much importance to what was probably a visit by dad.

 From everything I've read, barn owls are not very territorial or aggressive with each other. Even if it was a stranger owl, Molly's got things in hand. She even looks pretty calm.

 I saw Molly chase off what we assumed was McGee. It could have been that other female. That female showed up a few nights ago and was making her way into the box when Molly ran her off. I don't think that was McGee tonight. Molly was protecting her babies & eggs. I did see other owls flying by. Not sure how many. At least 2. This is so weird!!!! Wish it was in color so we could see the owls better.

That almost certainly was McGee. She has met him like that in the past, early in last clutch. Everyone was surprised then also. If memory serves, he usually returned with food not long after. But any other owl would have never made it in that door, IMHO.

He also flew off in the exact same direction that he almost always takes when hunting. Remember all the swoops past the camera when he was hunting for the owlets before before?

 I think that's very possible. I was almost positive it was McGee when it landed on the top of the box because of the noises she made, the love chirrup. That same owl tried to enter and she definitely attacked it and chased it away.
 I also saw another owl flying about at the same time.

OMG! I heard her squawking & came over to look at her; I thought maybe she was calling McG. Something made me come back a few minutes later, and she had gotten up and left the house. The baby was chirping, then got quiet & very still. (I got worried). I saw her fly away & a minute later she flew back, landed on the perch and stepped in the house. I saw her BIG FOOT, and she walked over and sat back down on the owlettes. I only saw one though. This was at 9:45 PST. So exciting -- after all day of just sitting! Suffered through leaving 15 minutes before the 1st feeding last night (nooo), then rushing out the door right after seeing that #2, Carrie, had hatched and not being able to stay and catch a peek and then walking in the door just now (finally) only to find that McGee has run off with the other woman, all 4 eggs have hatched and fledged and the rat/mouse population in San Marcus dried up! Sometimes when you cut and paste it picks up other things (like formatting). So if you cut and then paste it someplace like a blank email or NotePad, and then cut and paste again, it gets rid of the formatting and you won't go over that 1000 character limit. Just a trick some of us have found.

Hi Cheryl. No worries. I believe McGee brought the treat around 3 or 3:30am so she and Ashley ate. Soon you will know everything and be completely hooked just like the rest of us tuning in to see how they are doing, if they've eaten, etc. There are many knowledgeable people on this site that post great info. You will learn more and more each time you visit. Here is a link to learn more about their owls: <http://mollysbox.wordpress.com/> and click on the blog to catch up on news, or other info cheryl, Molly can probably feed herself quite well in 5 minutes. We saw Ashley eat her weight in food 24 hours after hatching, completely normal. Carrie's not due to eat at all today, McGee has what? 4 hours until he's "late" for Ashley. Tis all good MODs, and if it weren't, worrying won't change anything a lick. Focus on the good - look what we get to do.

You don't have to necessarily have to "like" every answer, but it gives folks a clue that you have seen their answer. And, you probably know that you can click on "reply" to post a comment under someone's post. Sweet dreams 😊

For anyone new who may be wondering about the pellets. Here is an old video of Max (1st owlet from 1st clutch coughing up a pellet).

The second video is an old replay on here but the people are hilarious and then the owl coughs up a pellet.

Molly is not weak or hungry at all, cheryl. She may be a little tired because one of her eggs hatched yesterday and another one this morning. So she has been busy caring for those two owlets and trying to make sure that she turns and keeps the other two eggs warm. McGee came last night with food and I think there is still some left in the "pantry" (the other end of the owl box. Not to worry. Things are fine.

It's amazing to see them eat the rabbit (head first!). Owls eat most of their food whole, and digest all but the bones and hair. Those are compressed into a pellet, that the owl regurgitates before eating the next meal. You will see quite a bit of pellet barfing if you watch very long. The floor gets quite deep in them!

To us that is a stanky mouse to her that is like filet mignon. The San Marcos area (within approximately 5 miles of the owlbox) is practically rodent free I bet. Wait until McGee brings the live ones that run around the box. Now that is something to see.

One of the moderators over at U-stream just got hearing aids and was in wonder over all he/she was now able to hear. Showed up online and asked to hear the Molly Song, so Carlos played it for him/her. Very nice of him to do that. Ok, even after switching to Chrome, I'm still having computer problems. Some issues have been resolved, but the video is still horrible. This only happens with moving objects (like Carlos speaking or Molly moving around). The object in motion (and a bit outside of that object) goes horribly pixelated. And by "gues," I mean it will be clear-looking and will progress to a worse and worse resolution until it's nothing but squares, then it will jump back to good. This cycle happens over the course of several seconds...like a pulse. ANY clue what's going on here? I can't take any pictures! 😊 Here is an example (hopefully it helps)..

How old is your computer? A lot of the video quality depends on your video card and amount of RAM and video memory. It also depends on the bandwidth from your ISP.

First, check the speed of your internet service provider (isp). You can do this by going to speedtest.net. It takes at least 3mbps to smoothly stream video. Then, go to crucial.com and do a check on the memory in your computer. I have an old toshiba laptop that was freezing constantly and added memory from Crucial by myself. It's really easy to do on both desktops and laptops, crucial even does a test on your computer and tells you what kind of memory to get and what your computer's capacity is. Mine is nice and zippy now! No more freezing. (ps. I don't work for crucial...)

Re the ISP speed, to the best of my knowledge nothing's changed here and I had fantastic video thru the entire first clutch. It was only when I came back that I started having issues. I don't notice it on other video, but I don't know if something such as a YouTube video is equal to streaming video in TechieLand. I will definitely check out your links, though. Thank you for those!
