Judy R Greetings from water logged Iowa. I've had water come in the basement Tues and Wed nights. Lots of pumping and shop vac. My arms are sore and I'm pooped. We are not as bad off as most. I haven't been on as much as I would like.. but see only one treat and a new baby. Hooray ! Sure hope McGee steps it up a bit. Anyway.. welcome to Kelly.. contrats to M & M. I saw we had a visitor last night again. I'm just about convinced it's one of the owls from the first clutch, probably Wesley. She had such an attachment to the Royal playground. At the very least, it's got to be a young owl to be kept getting run off almost every day and still keep coming back. My only doubt is that Owlo posted some great information yesterday that I scanned over that said the average time that owls are totally independent is five to seven weeks after the final fledge. For Wesley, that would have been the very end of July, but we know Wesley was anything but average!

Hi Burnee. Yes, we're sure got an interesting twist to the plot-line of the second clutch! Lots of visits from mystery owls this time, unlike any we've ever seen before. Of course, we didn't have an outside view at this stage of the first clutch, but still. It's sure new drama for us. 😊

I just had a thought. During their first clutch we didn't see other owls coming around, at least that I can recall.

At the same time as Molly was raising her first clutch, not far from our Owl Box, was "Owliver and Owliver". So their not so little little ones are probably around the area still, as are our 4. So we could also be seeing some of the owl(ets) from "Owliver and Owliver" in addition to our 4 fledglings.

Also, Molly and McGee went viral around the net earlier this year, and Carlos has said that many more owl boxes have been put up. So there may be more competition for food. And next year if Molly and McGee return, we will probably continue to see more visiting owls.

Today, 04:32:45 – Flag – Like – ReplyMerritt

Linda, O and O are 12 miles away, and a barn owls hunting grounds extend about 5 miles. That may not be offspring of O & O after all if they are hanging around their parents' house like M&M's kids are hanging here (or as we suspect they are). See what I'm saying?

The owl will probably be ID'd as McGee, but she certainly didn't act like it was him.

Today, 04:21:41 – Flag – Like – ReplyMerritt

I confess I was watching. I looked up when I heard her chirruping to "him," saw an owl on the roof, saw that owl fly down to the playground, saw her get up off the nest and charge out the door and run that other owl off! Started out sounding like it might be McGee, but sure didn't end up looking like him.

That looks like one of her kids from the previous clutch. Molly doesn't look too distressed about it. There was no ruckus just a flashing feathery show.

tigermo really... I even bought 2 of the electric mouse -rat traps and only caught one in each one and now nothing... that was over 100 bucks for the 2 of them. The feed store said to bait the traps every night and let them get used to eating off of them... and then one night... set them all and ambush them. I will try the vanilla flavoring. They don't care about cheese... so far plain old bread is their choice. Weird!! Today, 02:54:39 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Chris (Happy Birthday Kelly) in Olympia, WA tigermo Doesn't work here... I have chickens so I get the critters... I smush peanutbutter on the traps... in the morning, the peanutbutter is gone and the trap doesn't even go off... I have put goodies in nylon squares and make them up like the things you put on a table at a wedding... they chew it open and eat the treats. I have probably gotten 20 traps thinking there is something wrong. I tie food and nuts to the traps and get nothing... so far the dental floss with 4 wraps worked to get 2. Debbie in NC (trusting in Molly and McGee) They don't have much a sense of taste or smell from my understanding. Most raptors don't or else they couldn't eat what they do. I doubt they can taste the difference. Today, 02:34:29 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Kathryn R (aka Big Fish), Cheryl Owen

Mary Danielle Seif I was actually curious about this and looked it up! Apparently birds generally can only taste "bitter" or "sweet" things depending on their species. Debbie in NC (trusting in Molly and McGee) She just did a flyabout to stretch her wings and do her 'business'. It's very doubtful she would be hunting for several reasons. One, they don't normally hunt near the nest. Two, she wasn't gone long enough. Three, her instinct tells her to get back to the nest and not to hunt. It's too risky. McGee is the provider and has always done a great job. She will start hunting once they get bigger. They both have to hunt to keep up with the kid's needs! Lastly, if she were that hungry, she would be making a LOT of noise, non-stop. She let McGee know they have another mouth to feed. All is good in the owl world. Linda B Right. You couldn't mute the first commercial. But after it played through, you could mute the video after that. Then the next commercial would be muted. I have my computer volume set to about 40% and adjust the volume of the videos using the volume control for the flash video windows. If I want to hear the peeps louder, I turn up the video window to full volume. When Molly starts shrieking, I turn the volume almost all the way down, but I can still hear. Today, 04:16:45 - Flag - Like - Reply

Linda B However, with the inability to adjust even the volume on the small video window, when the commercials played the volume was whatever my computer was set at, which was extremely loud. I live in an apartment and I can't have sound blasting like that because I'll get complaints about noise. I do understand the need for commercials, but even a television allows volume to be lowered when commercials are on. I didn't see why they chose to discontinue to the volume control on the video window here. It just didn't make any sense to me. Today, 04:16:52 - Flag - Like - Reply

Goodnight Everyone and Newy, including tiny new Kelly. After all these months, tonight was my first hatching - missed some of the others last Spring and earlier this week by less than an hour! - AND it was my first time watching Molly hork. It may be a sad comment on my life but that was pretty exciting! It was not one of her most feminine moments but it was certainly owl-ish and fascinating.

It's been great but I've finally just gotten a good look at Kelly, so now I'm going to make use of the finally cleared off skies and go look for meteors for a few minutes before bed.

What is truly fascinating to think about, Merritt, IF these what i call social Idiots would put more energy into doing something positive, it would benefit them and people around them. I just do not understand why people do stuff like that, especially when they can not stand up and own up to it with their true identity. What a waste of energy that could go to something positive. I guess it's just because they can't, JL. People who do that aren't into doing much of anything positive for anyone around them. Their energies are spent on hate, anger and deception. Whether on the street, in the workplace, in the community they live in or here in the chat room they are among us and it is up to all of us to continue to make the world a better place - which most of us here are doing every day.

Thanks, Merritt. Someone who is determined and truly malicious will always find a way to work around the safeguards, and there are those types in the world. Fortunately, many are just opportunists who jump on the chance to mess up someone else's good time and then move along when it gets boring or difficult.

That's the one I use and have been recommending it here for the past several days. I think you'll really like it! Quick to download, easy to use. You can set the output on a clip to go directly to bmp file, then attach it here quickly. You just position the clip 'shadow' over the image you want (set it up and leave it over the owl cam), then hit enter and it capture the picture and sends it to the Cropper folder. When you download it and run the file it sets up the cropper folder in your Documents folder so it's easy to find. You can take pictures as fast as you can hit enter! You'll love it!

Glad to share! I laughed when I read that you had trouble finding where the pictures went: so did I. Took me several frustrating minutes to find them. Don't even remember how I did finally locate them. That's why I mentioned the Documents folder in the post above. If you know where to look, it's easy. If...

I couldn't figure out how to find a link on a forum she was trying to communicate with me. It was more confusing than the download... lol. I get so frustrated that I could cry messing with stuff like this. I brought my computer down into my garage...so I am cleaning while listening to the owl box!  No it hasn't. Last night I had it muted because of the commercials. It happened sometime today. At first they changed the text box too to remove the ability to add YouTube and font formatting. They gave that back to us, but now the ability to mute the small video window is gone 😞

 Nice try, JT, I've been trying to "help" as well. The real answer is that 200 people on that same question, too. When Carlos chooses to come on live he'll address the questions he wants to (can read, how do they do that? Repost every 20 seconds?) I don't think I'll be wasting the space to try to divert the newbies/Jr. MODs; sorry if I'm slow on the uptake and dozens of you are already into this practice; I'm old, I'm not stupid, but I'm slow.

Love your enthusiasm (sp-it's late) as well as so many others; PLEASE check out all Molly's web-info, when it's slow - and it is much of the day... fact of this comment is that owlets do not need to eat for 24 hours after hatching. McGee showed up within minutes of that mark after Ashley; now there are other mouths to feed but no one is allowed to fret over Kelly for a day, that's the rule.

Caryn, the chat rooms are completely different. This site on SPO just has a connection to Carlos' live camera feed. They don't directly broadcast it, they just link to it. Carlos contracts with another website to upload his video and his chat room is there. Click on the live Molly cam to go to that site. It just takes one click of your mouse and you go there, just like clicking on any other link on a web page.

That U stream site actually has two different chats. There are two tabs to the right of the Molly cam there. First you'll see what's called the Social Stream and that's basically like Twitter. Single comments are made and posted and set out to the people following it. But there's also a tab called Chat which is slower and more conversational, except that it's still single comment. You can't nest questions and answers like you can here. Check it out!

I don't think the Bloomingdale's/Macy comparison is the same. SPO does not stream live video on their own. Most of their streams are from Ustream. I haven't looked at all their feeds, but I don't think it would matter if Carlos came here.

can molly see right out of the box or does she have to step out to see out???

Lynda C
She has to step to the door (see outside view in OB2) to see out. That's the only way into and out of the owl box.

Owlo (Yea! I saw a hatching!)
Super owl vision? LOL. Sorry, I guess you mean are there openings she can see through? There are some spaces at the top that air can flow in and out but I don't think she can see through them. But barn owls have very, very sensitive and accurate hearing. She probably knows exactly where McGee is and can hear every owl or bat that flies over.

The door is up front and to the left of her. She's along the back wall. Her tail is touching the wall where the door is located. She can see somewhat but I think she mostly relies on her amazing hearing.

Molly can see thru the doorway, but that is at an odd angle for her in the position she is in. She wouldn't have that big of a field of view. However, her sense of hearing is fabulous, so she is very aware of her surroundings outside the box.

An owl coughs up a pellet, you can see one on the left near the wall in front of Molly. A pellet is made up of the fur and bones of the animals Molly and all owls eat. They eat the whole animal and can't digest the material that is "horked" in the pellet.
Today, 00:17:23 - Flag - Like - Reply

Debbie in NC (happy for owlet #3)

An owl pellet. Because they eat their prey whole, there are non digestible parts (fur, bones mostly) that are formed into a pellet which they 'spit out' or 'hork' as some here have named it. You can purchase owl pellets and dissect them. They are actually very clean and come sterilized. Kids like to do them because they can match up the bones and discover what the owl ate. Most owl pellets come with a chart of various prey so you can figure it out. I use them in my biology class. It's a lot of fun.

She tears the food into small pieces and puts it in their mouths. As they get older, they will start picking at the food themselves. Eventually, they will learn to swallow it whole. It won't be long before they do that either. They will swallow a mouse that's almost their size. Amazing to watch it!

I know with alot of new folks here that there may be some confusion with the names and knowing if they are male or female. We will not know if they are male or female for some time. The Royals have predominately picked names that could be used for either male or female. Hope that clears things up a bit. 😊

So glad I was still watching! I missed the first 2....I'm so excited. Jade is here too and she got to witness it with me. We need a smiley with "happy tears"...I know I'm a big whimp...but, I cry easy. Anyway, now I can go to sleep very happy.

The pellets the owl spits up which consist of the remains of the critters they have eaten.

Owlo (Yea! I saw a hatching!)

The owls swallow much of their prey whole, digest everything they can, compress the rest and then expel it. Expelling the pellet has been termed horking by the Molly watchers. We've been calling it that so long that I think we all believe it's a real word now!

Hork is a made up word that Molly watchers use. The real term is to cast.
HORR (verb) To expel a shiny black pellet composed of bones, fur and other indigestible parts of a meal.
Owls eat their prey in its entirety so anything not digestible comes back up. See the large black tem on the right of the screen?

It is the regurgitated food that the owl has eaten. As I understand it, everything digests except the fur and bones. She will regurgitate it and then may fluff the fur for the nest and eat the bones to replenish her calcium supply. She is an excellent recycler! Some "oldtimers", please correct me if I am wrong.

If they are like chickens, an owlet sucks the egg yolk up into its body at some point during development. The rich fat sustains it for the first day or so of life outside the shell. Yes, I did one of those "Stages of Embryonic development for a school science fair a lifetime ago; my family was in the business of hatching chicks.

I didn't see any crack, Owl. Apparently there has been a "spot" on the egg for a couple of days and thought to be blood or something smeared on it. The "spot" doesn't look any different to me than it did yesterday - no bigger and pretty much the same shape. Just my opinion - which isn't always right

Dee, check with your local wildlife center before you make a decision on putting up an owl box, because if you heard a Hoot-Hoot, you may have Great Horned Owls in your area. Great Horned Owls do not nest in boxes, but use trees and high platforms similar to eagles. There are many different species of owls and it would be best to find out what kind before you build/buy a box.

 Yes.
 Max, Pattison, Austin and Wesley

Max & Wesley were girls. Austin a boy. Pattison was 2 tone, so could have been either. It was never 100% confirmed.

 Yes, back in February and the first family - Max, Austin, Pattison and Wesley fledged a few weeks before these eggs were laid. Check this site and scroll back to see pictures of the last family and the new one. You will have to click back through "Previos" many time to see all of the great pictures that Carlos (the owner of the owl box) took. <http://mollysbox.wordpress.com/blog/> Another good reference is here <http://mollyowl.pbworks.com/>

 I also have a picture we made of my mom, me, my daughter and two granddaughter's hands...far right is mom (90) then me, my daughter & two granddaughters all reaching to her hand...if any of you have several generations of females, it makes a lovely keepsake to hand down...I really, really smile when I look at it....mom is 91 and still doing very well...we're so blessed really, don't wait...if you're lucky enough to have 4 of 5 generations, do it now.....my son-in-law took it and we did it in black & white in a black and silver frame....sooooo elegant....

 Priceless, butterfly. There is so much meaning there - the first thing that came to my mind was of generations handing down their love and their wisdom. A treasured memory for you !!

 the first one I saw was of 5 generations with the oldest hand palm up and the rest palm down, symbolizing holding on to each other...enough of this info....lol

 This is lovely. Wish I had thought of this, but do have some photos of 3 generation of women in our family. Ours are too spread out to get 4 generations at once.

This reminds me - I wrote each of my parents for their 70th birthday a tribute of sorts sharing memories, and thanking them for things they had taught me. Was SO glad I had done this when my dad passed away at 75. Then I read those tributes which we had made into plaques at each of their funerals. But I was so glad I had said those things to them while they were still alive.

 Good idea, Chris. All too often it is easy to say, "I should do that someday." If we wait too long he opportunity to do it is gone.

 I have the Father's Day Special Photo too. It's waiting to be hung in my hall as soon as I get it painted. May be spring before that happens. LOL OH!!! We'll have a 3rd clutch by then. LOL

I love the hands photo!!! I'll have to do that with my granddaughter, mom and DIL. Does she count???
