                minute 11:38, where Molly reaches under her and pulls out half of the egg shell. When she does this, the owlet flips out of the shell!

                           It is interesting to note that Molly seems hardly to have taken note of the last hatching. She freed the owlet from the shell, dealt with the shell, and simply resumed her brooding position.

                                   Lemme tell you about the time when I was 7 months pregnant at the age of 24, living on a farm (renting), and trying to help pull a calf out of his mother.
                                    The owner of the farm was on vacation, I had never done it before, and I couldn't get anyone to help. It was before cell phones, so couldn't get the farmer. I don't remember who I called, but someone told us what to do. It involved a rope. All I remember is my (now-ex) husband and I pulling that calf out. And he and his mother were fine.
                                    I have since then seen lots of things born/hatched and helped in a few, but that was the most notable.

Thanks for sharing! I think you tie the rope around the legs, right? How did you do that and not go into labor yourself!? The video of all of my 3 boys being born is quite interesting and always distoted enough that I don't get the whole show. For example, my middle boy's video was a show of my aunt's eyeball!! She was handed the camera and turned it on and shot the whole thing backwards!! I did not see that birth but my aunt has pretty eyes.

                                   Yep, put the rope around it's hind legs. It was not turned correctly and we probably should have turned it, but just did the best we could. If we didn't, the mother cow was going to die. She'd labored way too long and was not doing well. It was remarkable how well she did afterwards, though.
                                    Me and labor...well, I was strong and young. I did have both daughters too early but with my first it wasnt because of that. Basically, I just held the rope and sat back. My center of gravity was low at that time anyhow. \stackrel{	extstyle 	ex

Yes, it's a little funny now but at the time I was pretty upset as I'd had an allergic reaction to the drugs and couldn't open my eyes one bit to even watch the birth in a mirror. I got a nice piece of jewelry out of it (DH had handed the cam to a woman that never owned one=jewelry). 🤒

                           I am fine. It was not and swollen, plus I hadn't had a tetnus? shot for 14 years. Iwoke up to that and a really bad lower back ache.... My Birthday must have caught up with me... lol I am back on the Canal and am heading to the Deli for "Ho Summer Night".
                           They are having a couple of bands and a antique car and motorcycle show... plus some cold beer to soak my finger in! It's 96 here!

"Hunt for dinner"? Man alive, that cabin really is remote!
                           Seeing as mayonnaise contains egg, it will certainly, and permanently, scar an owl. (Or a chicklet.)

I didn't think it was national as I turned it on when Carlos said that, but I turned volume way down so I could hear Carlos.

Was it national Fox News, or San Diego Fox 5? If anyone finds the link on the internet, let me know.

Since there was no news on at that time in DC I have no idea what she was watching. 🙂 Only choice is Fox report (national) and it hasn't been on that.

                           On a PC, click on the printscreen button. It will not look like anything has happened. open a program like Word, Paint, PhotoShop, etc. and Paste. Then you can name and save the file as a jpg file.

                           Carol, please. The new owlet right under Molly where she should be. Who knows what you're looking at but it is not the new owlet. I saw Molly settle down on Jody (the new owlet) soon after she was hatched. She's still there, warm and safe.

Sorry for being so short with you, Carol. I had you confused with someone with a name very much like yours who has been here a long time whom I thought should know better than to worry about whether Molly is taking care of her newly hatched owlet. Molly has never once left a newborn unattended, \ and \ I \ had \ seen \ where \ you \ had \ asked \ about \ it \ several \ times \ below. \ I'm \ glad \ you \ are \ trying \ to \ learn. \ Soon \ you'll \ be \ answering \ questions

                    Well all you junior and senior MODs little Jody is now with us now. What a great event. I know you all felt the excitement I did and this is the second clutch I've had the pleasure of watching. I did miss all the hatches except this one so you can imagine how exciting it was in this house. The fun has just begun though because they take us for an exciting ride through their antics. Now we can settle down and just enjoy the stages they will go through. We can also thank the Royals for such a wonderful experience. I'll be signing off for now and will lurk off and on so remember, be kind to yourselves and each other.

Can someone reply the link of the video of the hatch?

That was great. My 2 year old grandson was so excited he was running around the house. Saying the baby is here

The owlets can eat raw meat from day one!! Actually once hatched they don't need feeding for 12-24 hours as they still have a yolk sac which gives them enough nourishment for that time so you won't see the newest owlet being fed straight after its hatched. After that though Molly tears the treats up into tiny pieces and feeds it straight to them. Mollys digestion doesn't change at all - In fact once Molly has eaten a large amount she will be unable to eat any more until she has produced a pellet - its the same for the owlets - they produce pellets quite early on, and the gagshag will just get deeper and deeper!!! So does that mean you don't like anthropomorphism?

Just completed my time travel back to 11AM, and I see the mother ship made a brief drop-off. For the record: I give two thumbs way up to sliced bread, apple

Also a great spot for a breath of fresh air in the midst of the city: Bryant Park. It's just behind the NY Public Library at 42nd St and 5th Ave. Lovely shade and outdoor seating. Perfect to rest the feet, enjoy a snack, and have a people-watch.  \\

Cheryl, if the weather cooperates and you have time, a Circle Line cruise around Manhattan is quite nice. I took Momon one several years ago. She grew up in Brooklyn and had never done the trip in her 70+ years!

                            Both HF and Molly's Box (http://mollysbox.wordpress.com/) are using a website called weatherusa.net. For some reason it's temps do not agree with
