So sad, but Mom's know best. I watched a momma bird fliing a dead baby out of her nest about a month ago, after I was trying to figure out how to get it out of the nest. I knew it could not stay there, it would decay, and be not healthy for the rest of babies. So you all have to know Molly knew best!! Let's all just enjoy the rest and move on in our blessed day that we have and thanks carlos for all you do!!!! 🙂 Today, 08:57:08 - Flag - Like - Reply Karen in Sebring I haven't the words to express my sadness. Thank you to Carlos and Donna for bringing us the beauty and even the sadness of nature. This was my escape my peaceful escape and it seems different now. The way nature really is, not how I fantasized it to be. I hope the other owlets will be strong and make it to fly away on their own. But I won't be able to waatch as often, it has been so emotional. My Ashley is really getting big. So sorry to hear the loss of one of our babies. I just tuned in here and saw the posts. Molly still looks sad. With the babies moving around beneath her she doesn't seem interested in paying attention to them right now.

Hopefully she will perk up soon. Today, 08:47:41 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by adanyeljb(ny)

This isn't what I expected when I logged in this morning. How sad for everyone.

I think one of the things that pulled us all in everyday to watch Molly and her family was the feeling that this was a happy land where nothing bad could happen. The fires and floods and wars and acrimony of the world did not intrude here. We also fell in love with the Royals, a family straight out of a fifties sitcom. The reality, that this too is not a perfect world, hit us all hard today. There is a lesson here for all of us, lets grow stronger and closer and move on

It's been a long nite, and I watched Molly hold her baby in her mouth. I thought she was trying to revive her by shaking her. Luckily. placement of camera made it difficult to see it being eaten. What I thought was quaint was Molly calling to McGee and he responded with 2 treats within 10 minutes of each other, but she wasn't intereste in eating or feeding. She continued to call him and when he came, she went out of the Owl Box and sat on the perch while he sat on top of the

I woke up with a headache, not enough sleep and not enough A/C, so I hoped it would be an opportunity to see McGee, but instead I see posts about the death of an owlet. I feel bad for the people who feel bad, like I felt when two of Owliver's and Owlivia's clutch died. I was attached to Molly the first time, but truly these raptors are not exactly the kind of animal I would feel attachment for, like a beloved dog. I lost three of my favorite people in the last decade, plus other relatives I knew better when I was a child, plus some musicians I had met, and through it all, you deal with the living, and mourn the loss and get on with it all. Although I cried in the middle of the night, I do not, by any means, compare this to our cat of 15 years being put to sleep a few months ago, or the death of our dogs after 14 and 15 years, or, of course, the death of a loved one. I only thought that if it was Jody, that she was named after Carlos' sister

Was she wanting comfort from McGee? If so, he responded. It was quite something to watch. I cried through the whole scene. And after watching since the middle of the last 4 owlets, I was finally inspired to join all you MODS! To rest now as the sun comes up over the mountains I love so much. Hi Merritt, remember you and JH are different people. Just let him be. I read back and I don't think any bad news would have been handled any differently than it was. An animal can seem quite fine and within a few minutes be down for the count--that's what happened with our cat almost a month ago. There will be confusion about what's going on and when things became clear, apologies were made. It's not your job to pursue if people don't want to accept that you owned up to a mistake. I'm not really buying the "it will attract predators" part. After all, there are dead treats in the pantry all the time, and let's face it folks, dead meat is dead

I am CERTAIN as I look into that intelligent face and eyes, that there are emotions. Perhaps not the same as ours, but emotions nonetheless. Scientists have proven that even BUGS seem to display facsimiles of emotions. Our species is so narrow minded in what we perceive as intelligence. Because animals can't do higher math does not mean they are unintelligent. They know what they need to know to survive in their niche. What might they think of us that we can't fly and locate our own prey - that might seem inferior to THEM. It is all a matter of perspective. Many prefer to think animals don't have feelings so exploitation of meat, whatever the source. If a dead mouse wouldn't attract a predator, a dead owlet wouldn't either. So there must be another reason.

I first read the owlet news and commented this morning using my cell phone, so my post is missing the owlosaurusmoth avatar. It is very sad, even though we know it should not be unexpected. 4 owlets from 6 eggs in the first clutch, then the successful hatching of all 4 eggs in this clutch. Molly has had amazing success. We will surely all feel sadness and I understand some of the regular chat people will feel it acutely.
Honestly, I don't know if owls feel sadness. I've seen dogs lose pups and go on with their remaining babes as if nothing happened, and those of us who live with dogs know they can be happy, sad, and a dozen other emotions. Perhaps this is more natural an occurrence for her than we want it to be. What did she feel when her eggs didn't hatch? I just don't know.
Deepest condolences to Cheryl's neighbor who lost his wife this morning.

Today, 07:08:53 - Flaq - Like - Reply Liked by ____George Jan (Bayonne NJ) Mornin', folks. Sad to hear of the death of the little one - it's never easy for us humans to deal with because we automatically think about our own young ones when we hear of it. I'm reminded of the time, not so long ago, when women gave birth to many babies because the death rate was so high among newborns. We didn't have the lifesaving control over our children then as we do now. We lived more by the natural laws that govern Molly and all living creatures - and yet, we survived. People mourned the loss of their infants but the urgent need to care for the living put it in perspective. It was life; death is a part of life. Molly will adjust to the new situation and we, like her, will move on. We must. There are hungry owlets to feed and care for. To paraphrase an old monarchial pronouncement: An owlet is dead. She fell more often than not or was knocked over in the process of getting her feeding spot when Molly was ripping at the next bite to give out. I saw her eat but not as much as she might have needed or needs if it's her that lives still. I didn't wish to say something as to not sound like a WART but this death might have been the result of an injury as well. The eating was just something I was feeling bad about but thought she would toughen up and get her fill eventually.      Ch my, I just wrote a long response and it told me it was too long and erased what I had written... ACK!
           Basically, as a newbie, I have no clue how to control my comments history or even see anyone else's... I signed in wiht my Twitter and just added a connection to my Facebook... so maybe the guests don't know how either, and are not hiding anything purposefully?
           And newbies really don't know what's normal and if they are concerned, it's just lack of experience. Maybe there are scaremongers, but the times I've been concerned, I swear it was just because of being new and not understanding.
           Overall, I love this experience SO much, and all of you more experienced fans who make such kind reassurances are MUCH appreciated!

          Hi Laurie!! There is a big difference between Newbies asking questions and people scaremongering - once you've been on here a while you can quite easily \ see \ who's \ who! \ I \ have \ no \ problem \ with \ people \ asking \ questions \ and \ I \ can \ fully \ understand \ when \ people \ are \ worried \ about \ the \ owlets \ because they're not moving etc but it is perfectly normal - when they have been fed they fall into what we call food comas!! Nothing to worry about at all. And as for the comment history - you have to actually specify that you don't want your comments to show - so that normally says it all!!

we saw her lift the lifeless baby and shake it with her beak... after a few attempts to get movement she carried it to the other end of the box where you can see (by the door) and came back without it in her beak anymore.

I know what I saw, and don't patronize. Look below, when it happened others had the same reaction. I hope it's not dead as well, but having over 100 animals on my farm, I can usually tell if something doesn't look right. Let's hope you're right, but you don't have to be nasty about it. Those of us who saw what happened are concerned, and anguished. I've watched both clutches as well.

          Pretty RUDE I'd say Merritt., I also saw it shaking the lifeless body of the baby and it was not moving. It may not have expired but to Liz and I it looked like it was not moving when Molly was moving it around. I guess everyone should stop posting then for 24 hours as I see most assume things when

CatnapCrafts, aka Jo (ostentatious and inappropriate!)

Cheryl, I enjoyed soccer as a pre-teen in the early 70's. Equal opportunity to sports for girls was a big issue in the US at that time, and soccer was one thing I enjoyed playing and wasn't complete rubbish at. Fast forward to 2004-ish.... my son was in high school and dating a girl who played soccer for the school team. It got me interested in watching the sport again. At the same time, we began receiving "Fox Soccer Channel" -- a sister network to Sky Sports -- on our cable system.... Today, 02:38:33 - Flag - Like - ReplyLiked by Cheryl Owen (2 more sleeps to NY) Cheryl Owen (2 more sleeps to NY) So is your trip out to the UK soon the first time you will have seen Chelsea play 'live' then?

We did actually see them "live" in a pre-season friendly versus AC Milan.... 5 years ago, I think? Their pre-season tour brought them to Boston.

CatnapCrafts, aka Jo (ostentatious and inappropriate!)
.... I came across a replay of a Premier League match and was hooked. I latched onto Chelsea on their return to glory days. Reminded me of our local Boston Red Sox baseball team. And Mourinho was great fun to watch. I knew about West Hamfrom "Ground Force" and Tommy Walsh, of all things. Followed them back up the table. There's nothing like promotion and relegation in American pro sports. My DH, who's a nut for all things sport, really started to take an interest in English football about two seasons ago. Now he's hooked.... Today, 02:45:38 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Cheryl Owen (2 more sleeps to NY)

                    I'm thinking that if the last visitor was McGee, she may have reacted the way she did because she was feeding the babies. He may have wanted some bonding time and she told him to come back later. The rat they were eating has apparently been in the pantry most of the day. I didn't see the owl on the branch with any food. Carlos was talking at the time and said that McGee was here and he would stop talking. He has a better view than us and he thought it be McGee.

                           Carlos' view is the same as ours, right off the computer screen. He only has a better view in the daytime or if he is shooting still photographs. But I think we all thought it was McGee until Molly took an aggressive stance and the other owl was chased off.

She leaves at night on breaks of a few minutes, which will get longer as the owlets get older. At this stage of the clutch, she will not hunt for the owlets, but she will after she leaves the nest. Her feeding of the owlets is governed by instinct, but if a shortage of food develops, she will feed herself first.

Do you think Molly ever thinks this bite is all mine? back off my sweet babies! :) Does she ever leave on breaks?

You are so right Frances!!! One thing we are concerned about right now is none of the family have been told by her doctors what she should and shouldn't have. She said when they told her they were going to inject the dye, she remembered she had been told not to ever let anyone inject her with the dye again. She couldn't remember why or which doctor told her that and trusted that these doctors were doing the right thing. She felt so bad when they did it, she just wanted to feel better and not argue with them about it.

        DWD - Glad your mother is feeling better. The contrast dye is what caused my mother-in-law's kidney problem when she had angioplasty, but her kidneys started functioning again, so keep hoping for the best. My mother-in-law wouldn't test but once a day and she was living with us!! We had to fight her sometimes to even get her to do that. And she would eat whatever she wanted no matter what we said. She was very stubborn. So sometimes you just can't make people take care of themselves even if it is for their own good. And dealing with all the doctors can be very difficult, even when one is right there. I will continue to be praying for all of you.

Thanks Chris. Mom first had dye when she had a stint put in. She doesn't eat right either. Has always had a sweet tooth and loves starches. I just hope she has learned a lesson. I did tell my brother they needed to keep notes in a journal so that when he left and my sister was there, she would know what doctor had said what. I'm just not happy with the hospital and staff right now.

They like it that way. My theory is that the smell of the "gag shag" probably covers up the smell of "fresh baby owlet" from preditors, as well as being

        Today, 01:36:20 - Flag - Like - Reply
        The pellets are used for bedding. When they dry Molly will pick them apart and use the fur and fluff as an added layer to the "gag shag" (bedding). She won't clean it out as that's the way the owls like it.

     No, if you watch closely, when they are going to "cuddle," Molly's tail tends to go up and her wings are held closely. A defensive posture is somewhat different, with the wings out more and the head down more.

OK, the sock feet and reclined position really is the real me, but here is one of the mug. Note the ever present coffee cup.
The other shot is Kathryn's train of owlets. Didn't know what you were looking for, so this is just a quick pass.

        Not using PS. Just a free simple editor called Photoscape.
         The only thing done to the image was to add a vignette and a little selective darken/lightening. No filters. \stackrel{	extstyle 	ex

Yes it does, JL. It's just so odd to me that a certain expert was adamant that barn owls do not lie down. She said she's observed 100s of them. How can she have missed this, when every owl we've seen in just 6 months does this very thing.

Lynda - A quick method to clean your keyboard (since you didn't like the ant idea).

Only half joking here. I've washed keyboards before. You just have to make certain there is no power/batteries connected, and you need to let them dry completely inside and out before plugging them back in. I know some geeks who wash them in the dish washer (no heat) and they get by just fine. Laptops excluded, of course.

It's beautiful! Today, 01:02:50 - Flag - Like - Reply Lynda C A story to lighten up things. Most of yuo probably know that you can make S'mores in the microwave (just be careful that the marshmallows don't blow up !!). Seeing that large "hork" made me a bit hungry and I remembered I had all the ingredients for S'mores. So I made two of them, came back to the computer and staretd eating the yummy morsels right over the keyboard. DON'T EVER do that !!! I now have a mixture of warm, gooey marshmallow and melted Hersey bar drips all over the keyboard - not to mention Graham cracker crumbs. . I've wiped off the tops of the keys, but what to do with the mess that is in between the keys 😮 😕 😃 Yesterday, 23:58:49 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Merritt Jan (Bayonne NJ) Michelle JL Duest And 5 more Lady Kathleen 1000 Hire a mouse. I have enough of those around already, Kathleen. Being surrounded by woods and acres of grass, the field mice have a field day in our garage. I think I've solved the problem by using a small artist's brush dampened with an all purpose cleaner. Such a dumb thing for me to do in the first place 😕

                           Isopropyl alcohol is a good cleaning fluid to use on keyboard spills. Here we buy it from the chemist in small bottles.
                           Apply sparingly with a cotton bud and leave to dry.

                         If you have a regular standard keyboard. WHEN IT OFF....You can gentley pull the keys off and clean the area underneath them. Be sure to put them back in the right spots or we'll never be able to read your posts. I know this from experience back in college...it does work. Use a q-tip and a tiny bit of alcohol to do the cleaning, it dries faster than water. Hope this helps you. You can vac or blow the crumbs out.
                           Thanks for the laugh btw.!

                    When I just came on the site, the small screen showing the box from outside was there and suddenly this blasting annoying commercial came on - and it doesn't run the whole way through, but doesn't shut up and keeps repeating the words to the commercial. Does anyone else have that problem. I can't get rid of it for a long time and finally it goes away and the outside of Molly and McGee's box comes one.
                    It's crazy. She get anything to eat yet from Papa McGee?

Molly and the owlets have been eating well all day and this evening. McGee delivered three rodents last night and early morning. The ads do come onto OB2 when you open the site and sometimes when you refresh. The can be annoying and loud, but the advertisers are paying U Stream (the site that is broadcasting the video) and that allows U Stream to continue to broadcast the owl box 24/7. A hint - turn down your volume when yo come onto the site. While the ads can be annoying, the option is not seeing this wonderful web cam of Molly and family and I don't mind a few ads now and then.

                           No, McGee has not been yet.
                           Most people tend to skip right over an entire paragraph of bold text. It's a little like that loud ad you mentioned.

                           Hedwig died in Book 7, which was published in 2007. I doubt if they ever met since Molly might not have even been born then. 😃

I know, I could not believe she let Hedwig die... I think Molly and Magee are magic... Maybe they are Carlos and Donna's post owls.

                         No, but I think I will try to forget about the ones I'm not sure I've lost so as to not be heartbroken and the owlet shots were mostly black'n'whites so...
                           I think I lucked out with not losing anything too important but there is the unknown. I still had my Jody Hatch pictures so that was good. I just don't remember if there were any personal shots lost. I'm blurring it out in my mind again as I type. 😃 Thanks for asking, Merritt.

It's a terrible thing to see a tree go down - for whatever reason. Each and every one is so precious - all those years spent growing, all the shelter and oxygen it has given us, it seems like a crime is being committed. But boy, when they get old and start dropping limbs, it can be very dangerous. We had a huge old Swamp Maple in our front yard when I was little. It was dying but my father couldn't bring himself to have it cut down - we all loved it so much. But one night a fierce storm blew down one of it's two huge secondary limbs and it squashed our car flat as a pancake! It has to be done sometimes, but I don't want to watch! A combination of animal fur and small bones that owls "hork" (cough up) as a pellet. When it dries Molly will pull it apart for bedding. Thee are also some feathers there as Molly has been going through a summer molt.

DWD in Atlanta

Thanks so much for asking!!! I have had many phone calls today and the info just keeps changing!!! OMG!!! I am so MAD!!! My sister has been on many overnight trips with mom and checks in with her several times a week. Since mom hasn't felt so good in several month's Tracy always asks how her blood sugar levels are in the mornings. Mom always tells her, Yes, she has checked and it was good. Lo and behold, during questions in the ER last night, she has not taken her blood sugar since FEBRUARY!!!

She had a Cat scan last night and ultra sound today on her kidneys. They injected her with dye that she isn't supposed to have. My brother & sister have talk3d to the doctors about that. The doctor has been trying to track down the Cat scan. Says he can't find them. WHAT??? Yesterday, 22:20:48 – Flag – Like – Reply Liked by Christina SigPod (torn 'tween 2 worlds) WLynda C Kristi from VA

If you didn't have the words in Atlanta right after your name, I would swear that was the hospital up here. I swear you need a homing pigeon to find anything. And I understand how frustrating it is when you are trying to oversee the health care of your parents. Been there. I'll be thinking of you. I do hope that dye didn't do to much harm! Oh, and don't you love it how you can ask and get one story and then the dr. gets a completely different story! Yesterday, 22:25:44 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Market Lynda C

Thanks Kristi!!! Sometimes I wonder about that hospital and why on earth they took her to that one. But as long as they get her well and she gets home in a few days, I won't complain. I did tell my brother that they needed a journal to keep track of everything they were told, so when the next sibling $comes in they know all the in; s and out's of the day when they weren't there. \ I just hope mom has learned a lesson and tests her blood from now on!!!$ Yesterday, 22:36:17 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Christina SigPod (torn 'tween 2 worlds) We Lynda C

I'm really not "stressed" - but I am "distressed", Susan. I, too, know that the owls are healthy and well-fed and have never doubted that.
