Thanks to the Royals and the lovely job they have all done for us and given us so many hours, I mean MANY hours of enjoyment. They are awesome people. I wish I could have the opportunity to meet them.

I'm having deja vu feelings after the first clutch fledged and the camera was ready to shut down. Only this time...no Molly returning to save the day at the last minute! I'm going to have to get a prescription of Zowloft to get through this depression. Really though, sad for me that I can't watch the owls, but happy for these wonderful creatures, glad for all you fantastic MODs, and so, so thankful for the Royal family to have given such a beautiful gift to all of us. Life is beautiful. Enjoy every moment and all of God's creatures. Love y'owl.

I hope we're all back next February or so for another glorious owl and owlet experience, but at the same time realize it is a huge commitment for the Royals. I know we'll all have to adjust to life without these beautiful owls to watch and enjoy after these many months. Love to the Royals, all the MODS and our very famous and favorite owls! My husband, Bryan came home just in the nick of time to witness the live "farewell". He has been a great ear to me and has patiently listened to all my babbling about Mollyland and all that goes with it. He was very sweet and held my hand and shared in the "special moment" of viewing the photos. I could tell he finally captured a glimpse of why I caught MOD. After it was over....He stood up and said "I am not sure if I can cope with you while you are going through MOD

He kept us updated via the blog after the first clutch. He let us know that all of the owlets had left and didn't return, not even to the palms. So he will likely do that again so that we know they all made it successfully.

Ok, listen -- life is full of possibilities, I mean, who would have ever thought it was possible for an owl to pay for a kid's college education, just think...we are only limited by our lack of vision. Remember when the owlets thought all there was to life was what was within those four walls?

I wasn't too thrilled with all the commercialism, but it helped pay for several years of Austin's college education, and the San Marcos wildlife fund benefitted. I can't argue with that! I pat them on the back for a good job!

Unfortunately, I've been a Certified "Lurker and Liker" with this clutch. Here's a fairly recent picture -- not the greatest but you can see what she looks like. Many years ago, the legends says, when the owners of a bar in Key West called Sloppy Joes lost their lease the patrons just picked up their bar stools and carried them around the corner to a new spot. Same patrons, same drinks, same friendships. Just a different place for a while.

The bar - the original Sloppy Joe's - was indeed Hemingways hangout. The current Sloppy Joes is where they all moved to but I still like the original which is now called Captain Tony's. I don't think they've cleaned the restrooms since Hemingway's days there but it's a cool place anyway.

Yes, think of all the friendships here. Seriously. Would any of us even have glanced another's way on the street? Given a smile or nod?

Probably not...not that we are unfriendly folk...just that we are in our own "spaces", oblivious to the world around us. That, imo, is perhaps the best gift Carlos gave. The gift of unexpected friendships literally around the world. Think about it. He made the world just a smidge smaller with his silly little owl box.

Kim, I think you hit the nail on the head; not only do they still have access to the owls, but I'm sure 8 months is a long time to entertain thousands of visitors to your house. They deserve a long, quiet vacation and some serious down time. I'm not sure Carlos can do that but I feel if he bugs Donna too much she may just hit him over the head to shut him up. 😊 Just joking about the last part. I'm so grateful for all they have done for us.

Sort of a "re-mix" of my post last night:

I share all of the poignant comments and tears on the closing of this chapter of Molly and McGee, but I hope there will be other chapters or sequels to this experience. Mixed with the sadness will be joy that these two small creatures have nearly reached their maturity and will soar to new beginnings with the wind beneath their wings. If we take nothing more away from this experience, let it be a better understanding of nature and the world around us - of the owls who have inhabited this owl box, of Carlos & family who are good people doing good things and of the people we have come to meet in this chat room. Let each of us take those special moments with us in our hearts and minds and know that it only takes a bit of kindness and love to make the whole world a better place.

Hi all

What an adventure this has been. I've been here since the first clutch and wanted th thank the Royals for their generosity, hard work and knowledge of all things owls. I also wanted to thank all the MODs of their humor, patience, repeated shared information, and kindness. I take comfort in knowing I can visit here anytime I need my spirits lifted. It has been an amazing journey, and such a mix of emotions. Hard to believe this is the end, but comforting to know that it is really a beginning for the beautiful birds. Godspeed and Ride the Winds!

I just purchased more items of Carrie & Ashley. Back in August I purchased the coffee table book, but since I've been around for all of Ashely and Carrie's growing up I've grown very attached to them. So I had to get something with their pics on it. So what better way to see them every morning with my coffee? a coffee mug with their pics. I knew this day would come but did it have to come so soon? I loved meeting everyone from all over the planet. I will be around and check in from time to time. My kudo's to all those who gave posted the early morning stats and evening stats. For those who just listen when someone had a problem or there was illness or tragedy in their lives....you are true friends. I am proud to have been part of the MOD's and hope to see you in another clutch.

I'm going to let my guard down for a couple of minutes. I came upon this website as a suggestion from my husband.

Neither one of us expected to be so hooked and addicted to this owl family. It has been an absolutely wonderful and educational experience. Along the way I got to know so many of you. Your personal ups and downs. I have been blessed by all of you and I look forward to M&M returning. Be safe and God Bless. 😊

Interesting to see the mood swings in this group day by day...Now it is all these goodbyes....But it is not. We have our memories, the chat will still be here, all the photos & chat on the wiki & blogs...plus all that many of you have bought from cafepress...OK, I'll be quiet now....

Glad I got on here in time to hear Carlos as he turns the cameras off. Planted somewhere around 50 trees, have that many more to do. Then sprayed them all with stinky stuff so my deer won't be eating them! Showered since I smelled like the stinky stuff, now making dinner & relaxing for the rest of the night.

Hello everyone, checking in. Won't say goodbye yet but know if will be difficult to post in the next few minutes. It was lots of fun, great to meet everyone, and seeing the owls grow up was (2 times!) a great experience. I've had that silly Molly song in my head yesterday and today! 😊 But it was fun. If I don't catch up with you in the near future, be well, be good, God bless, and deet-deet-deet!!! 😊😊😊

I will miss everyone sooo much and of course what brought us together in the first place. To George and Car, and Deb, and Annie..and all the names this fibromite can't remember right now...I love and care for you all! You too, tigermo! Me and my cats say : "talk at ya'Owl, again soon". So long to all. Will be checking the blog and hoping Carlos will be kind enough to let us see the next clutch. Like most, I've learned more about barn owls than I thought there was to learn. I've mostly lurked and made a few comments, but I know all of your names well and have enjoyed your conversations and gotten to know you in that way. I especially loved seeing your photos on the group cards! Take care until spring!

Hi all, I just wanted to say how much I have loved all of you on this sight. I have been mostly lurking during both clutches, never did figure out to post an avatar, so I am still just a grey head. M&M, the Royals and all six of the owlets have been such a gift. But one of the best things about this ride are the MOD's. Thank you to Chris (loved your puns), James, Car, Lady K, Becky (your apple bread is the best) and all of the other MOD's who have added so much enjoyment. Let's hope we meet again watching over a new brood with Molly and Magee. Until then, I wish you all health, happiness, and the awareness to treasure each day as the gift that it is. Love you all. This has been marvelous. I honestly can't say I've been sad (except once briefly) but I mute any sentimental music & don't watch any sentimental videos. Of course, maybe eating 4 pieces of key lime pie in 4 days + a pound of great fudge might be a sign of repressed sadness. 😊

I think I drove everyone nuts because they didn't know what I was talking about. If I said something happened at 9:30 pm. they would ask me, "How can that be, 9:30 pm hasn't come yet ?? 😞 😊 😊"

 I don't know what I am going to do tomorrow when I babysit my grandkids. The 2 yr old goes to the computer and says owls, owls, then she waves and keep saying hello. She not going to be happy with grandma (she calls me MeMe) 😊😊😊

 My 18month olds do the same thing. In fact, if they are in the other room and hear Carlos' voice, they come running and say, "Ayeeee! Ayeeee!" (their speak for "owl"). I played the DVD for them today. They LOVED it. 😊 sad to see all this end. the only bright side is now i will be able to get to bed at a decent hour to get up at 5am for work. since i live in fla. there's a 3hr difference and i'm up till 12 or 1 am just sitting here watching. hope to see this again for the 3rd clutch. i missed the first one and didn't realize how attached i would get to two little owls that i could only watch from afar.

I'm feeling pretty empty right now. Not sad, just a feeling that something is missing forever. I also feel a great sense of contentment knowing that things are as they should be with the owls. We have truly witnessed a wonder of nature that I for one wont ever forget! We cannot thank carlos and donna enough for their time, effort and enthusiasm!!! I will pop in often but I am mainly a lurker. I cant forget to thank all of you for your patience, humor, knowledge and everything else in this room to make it what it is. I hope and pray we will have this again in the spring, but I hope more to have you all here to lift me when I'm down, laugh and cry with me and hope we are forever connected because of one very UNcommon barnow!!!! Love to you all!

Since things will just continue to be busy, let me say I have met some wonderful folks on this site. I am very content that Molly & McGee will be back next spring, so it is more the people here and Carlos that I will miss. Thanks for giving me a chance to share with all of you. I have learned so much about owls and about chat rooms and software and wiki management, etc. Gee, 😊 it was Fun and I was a part of it!!

OK guys.

I must say this again. How much this has meant to me. When I lost my fur kid Molly, you all helped me through it. I've shed happy tears. I've laughed until I had tears rolling down my face. My husband comes in here to see what the heck is going on. Then I have to tell him and start laughing all over again! Have goose bumps as I read everyones comments. This is definitely a nice warm place to be.

Thank you Thank you Thank you.

A few days after Holly passed, I had a dream that she was standing in a doorway with gold light shining behind it. She had a squeaky toy in her mouth and she looked like she was smiling! She was blind when she died but in the dream her eyes were shining. She was so happy... It made me happy.

The time sure has gone by fast...I'm just as emotional...actually, I think I'm more this time. Last time, I was thinking "it's summer and I can spend lots of time outside, watching the birds and wildlife, looking at my garden, going for walks. I think that's part of the reason I'm sadder, because it's getting darker earlier, colder. I do enjoy watching the cardinals in the winter, though. I'll think of Jan!

The night before the cameras went down on the first clutch, I was a wreck. I was depressed about the whole experience being over. I thought I would never connect with the people from the chat again. I didn't know if Carlos would ever turn on the cameras again or if owls would return to the nest box. But I was so ready to get some sleep and to turn my attention back to my job! Like I said: I was a wreck.

But within a few days I realized the chat would continue and that many of us are connected in a way that can't be severed by flipping a switch on a camera. And then the owls immediately returned and I knew this once-in-a-lifetime event might not be as fleeting as I feared. So 4 months later and we're back to the same spot. This time though I am not sad. I'm confident the owls will be back, the people will be back and the fun will continue. Next time we'll have an army of owl watchers saying "Don't worry, the owls will be fine!"

Wonderful, Owlo--I missed the first clutch, but certainly understand what you're saying. Although it's too bad we can't get postcards from our favorite owlets to let us know they're OK, that's about the only drawback, just now. I'm looking forward to the continuation of the chat...the fact that we filled pages and pages while an empty box was on display is proof that there will be plenty to talk about in the wake of this marvelous look into owl life. If the next clutch is the first time I see you, again, stay well in the meantime. Hasta la vista!

I am back from the vets... I have a headache. My cat is fine... but a family with 2 little boys and M&D came in, they all went into the room and then the little boys came out and said that their cat was going to die. He was 13 and sick... I could hear their mom crying really hard.... next thing I see guys walking across the parking lot with flowers. The florist was right there, so I ran over and got some flowers for the boys to give their mom... I was crying the whole way. I went back to pay for the flowers and on the way back to my car... the man pointed me out to his wife. She was still crying.... We hugged and I told her I was sorry.... boy did I wish I had a copy of Rainbow Bridge for her! I wish she was a MOD! Then I come home to say good-bye to our Owl Box. Got my kleenex ready! I love this box!!!

I just recently ran across this show for the first time. It's been in continuous production since 1957, with the same host.

After viewing a few episodes I now can't get enough. Thought you may enjoy it.

WOW what a dive into the basement that was. been there the whole day! lots of stuff going on. sorry to see some lingering acrimony about Carlos and the merchandise. i really don't understand all the fuss. we wanted stuff and we got it. and it's sold with such affection, who could get upset?all of your pics are great. everyone has such interesting lives - even if you think you don't. i know i'm kinda spazzy. i do tend to jump-in on threads all the time. i want to like and chat about everything. please forgive me. i just find you all endlessly fascinating!!!

barb/sarasota: you are the only person i've "met" in a very long time that had connections to Bisbee. my grandparents met there. he was working for the railroad and g'ma was the town operator. he was also part owner in a turquoise mine, thus my love of rocks.

Linda, ignore my last post. I went insane for a sec. Been watching the empty nest all day, like everyone else. Trying to give Ed away. They should have named him Chatty Cathy. LOL And I am really not in the mood. I tell him, when you get like this don't say anything important, I am not listeneing. He just says: HUH?

Hello fellow MODs! So here we are. Gathering for our "best wishes" sendoff (don't like to say good-bye, it's too final) to the Royals & Owls. I see Carrie must have checked into the Palm Tree Inn today. That's great. Looking forward to the next clutch. Hope you are all well & happy this evening. I plan on to continue using this venue to chat with you all.

Is Carlos giving away freebies?

I'm trying to think of things to do to help me through withdrawals these first few days... I know, I can still chat and watch other sites, like the TA owls, the potted plant owls, the Australia birds... I mean when I'm not at the computer. I guess I'll try to stay busy, but I'm really feeling it right now. Why do I have to be so emotional?

No...I think we've all learned that appearances can be deceiving...though she seems to have golden female coloring and a spotted chest, it isn't until they go through their final molt at closer to a year old,,,that we see their final coloration...and, even then, the only way to tell for certain is blood testing...or observing a female laying eggs...lol...! PLEASE someone correct me if any of this is NOT correct...I'm remembering the final molt info. from the first clutch.

Good evening from the East Coast. It's 6pm here and time to start the vigil for the West Coast 6pm, not the happiest of thoughts but we all know that good things sometimes come to an end. We have to look forward to the Spring and remember all the great times we have had here this year. Who knew what a wonderful ride this was going to be back in February; it almost sounded silly if you talked to people who didn't understand committing hours a day to watch a owl sit on eggs. Fortunately we knew better! The Royals have given us entertainment that you couldn't put a price on, and with the first clutch, and education far surpassing any book out there; unfortunately the second clutch brought some sadness along with the joy, nature not always kind. The joy of getting to know all the MODs was a total bonus. Sit tight and fasten your seat belts for the finale. Love ya all, Barb

Cook and drain the spinach. Set aside. Cook the onion in oleo until soft. Meanwhile, bring chicken broth to boil and add the Cremora and stir to blend well. Add the cooked onion. Add rice, potato and carrots. Cook 15 minutes. Add spinach, simmer 15 minutes until vegetables are done. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Enjoy!!!

I see Carrie spent the night with us and then went to join her family today. Guess this morning when I saw her hunched and fluffed up in the rain is the last time I will see her.

Fly happy and free Carrie! I hope you thrive and become a Mom and raise your own owlets.

See you all next spring when the cameras turn back on. *crosses fingers that Molly & McGee return*

I have been lurking and reading, and just having my computer on to the Owl Box at home and at school. Some of the students would come in to the office to see how the owlets are doing. I am so going to miss the owl box. I will be in withdrawals the rest of the week!

I hated the thought of worrying about her if she stayed in the owl box another day - wondering if she was ever going to fledge and not be able to watch. So I know it is a great thing she finally flew off to be with them. But selfishly, I sure am going to miss seeing that cute little face. Wow, did she ever win my heart.

Carlos was saying this morning that between TV and radio and the net and everything else... Molly has reached 40 MILLION people. That's unbelievable... some rock stars dont even get that.

3 Hours and counting.....gave up on tissues... going to just bring out the old fashion crying towel. Not that I'm not happy that the owls are all fine and will be living free and being owls and that Carlos and Donna will be getting much deserved vacations... but tell me something... how can happy feel so bad?

Because we don't just cry when we are sad. We cry when we are happy, sad, emotional, touched, we just cry. It means this experience touched us, and good for us! That makes us real 😊 I will cry too, but it is a good cry, bittersweet. And okay-

When I think of how exciting it will be to watch another clutch it helps erase some of today's pain. Whether Molly moves in or one of her daughters', there has to be a clutch in the future.

I've been looking forward to catching up with you! I went to Central for first grade and then to Forest Hill too. Small world, right! My husbands sister lived on Greenbriar for many years. I grew up across the street from Grace Episcopal Church (near the library) on King Street. Do you remember where that is? I now live on Ervin Road - two blocks down from where Senator Sam lived.

Cripes, Kate, I just deleted my own reply to you! So here it is again. I'm guessing you moved from Central to Forest Hill when Central was torn down. When was that--mid 70s? And I know where Grace Spiscopal is; those were lovely houses on King Street. My aunt worked in the library, down in the basement mending books with a fat lady whose name I can't remember. Was Mrs. McVey still there when you were growing up, or had she retired already? I know Ruth Setzer was still there then.

And I do know where Senator Sam's house is. I had a lot of friends in that neighborhood.

We must get together!

You can plant them now, Becky, or overwinter them in the little tray. It's going to take them at least two years to get to the size that they will flower. Maybe planting them in a pot would help them get more nutrition for the roots.

The window would be fine, Tigermo, and then transplant them into a pot for the first year. They might spend the first year just growing roots, or they might send up little shoots this coming spring. I really don't know; I've never deliberately grown any of these things. I kept a pot for myself, so we can all compare notes and decide what we think is the best next step.

I think it's cool that somebody clear across the continent would WANT some tiger lilies from my yard! I hope they flourish for you. Also the mimosas and hellebores, which are still sitting here waiting for me to take them to the PO.

The lyrics to one of my favorite songs are very appropriate today:

If We Knew

If we knew we would yearn, to do the best we can

With each passing moment, know that each of life's offerings to be earned

If we knew

If we knew at each turn, what each step would bring

We would prize the soft whispers, of the ones who would wish us only good

If we knew

If we knew from the start how it was, we would realise, that nothing is lost

And I believe we'd strive, whatever the cost, and I believe

One by one, we'll come home, be together

One by one, we'll come home, where we'll stay

There's a star in the dark waiting for us

There's a rose at the close of the day

Has anybody out there ever heard of the singer "Shawn Phillips"? I first heard him sing when I was a senior in high school back in 1972. When I mow the grass, I listen to his music and during this day of sadness with the cameras going down, he certainly has helped me through the day. He still gives concerts. We heard him in Ann Arbor two years ago but his 2010 tour wasn't in Michigan this time around. Anyway, I was just wondering if you knew his music. It is so wonderful.

 I just saw him last month... I didn't like him that much. Spent too much time tuning his guitars all night! He had a rack of about 8 guitars on stage. The venue was small (less than 100 people). I hadn't heard of him before but it was part of a singer/songer writers series I go to. Many people there were really into him...like he's a legend. But, different strokes for different folks. Then I saw Dave Alvin and the Guilty Women the next week...FABULOUS!

So there you have it.

Oh, he was so good in the old days when he had his band. Yea, he has gotten old like all of us and has his ways. But I guess you have to be a long time fan to really appreciate his voice and talent on all of his strings. He usually has a small crowd and does private shows too. I wish I could afford to have one in my house. 😊 Anyway he was so nice to listen to today.

Old One - Assateague, VA or Assaateague, MD? Only asking because I grew up on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. Those horses are magnificent creatures! How incredible that you get to work with them. Any birders near enough - there is a very nice wildlife trail on Chincoteague, four to six miles long, that is only open to traffic for a very short time period, I believe in November, around Thanksgiving. At least, I think that's still the case.

Maryland. The horses on the VA side are owned by the Chincoteague fire company. And the activities offered on the VA side are a little different than the ones at the National Seashore.

Speaking of unusual bird photos, my daughter is a "Roadrunner Whisperer"...she has a roadrunner Ralph who comes to her across the golf course she manages, eats from her hand, brings his mate and new babies to her, and even comes inside the office with her and she can pick him up! These photos are from November 2009, and he is still there!

 Hi Patsy. A "hork" is the pellet the owl "coughs" up. It is the undigestable parts of the rodents they eat...bones, fur, etc.

Legends say that hummingbirds float free of time, carrying our hopes for love, joy and celebration.

The hummingbird's delicate grace reminds us that life is rich, beauty is everywhere, every personal connection has meaning and that laughter is life's sweetest creation.

Hope it brings a smile to your faces!

Do you all remember the last time Carlos and Donna were saying good bye? That was when Molly and McGee came back in the owl box. That was so exciting we were beside ourselves. Then Carlos kept on saying "no I'm not going to broadcast".. What an evening that was and how exciting it is that he did broadcast another clutch. We are so blessed.

I'll never forget that night as long as I live, Darlene! Here we all were, sniffing and being bummed out - and out of nowhere, boom! Back in the box! Then there was all that noise coming out of it, and the chat went completely silent. Every single one of us was listening, and staring at the screen, and saying stuff to ourselves like, "Hey! What the . . . ?" or, "Hey, isn't that . . . ?" And slowly or quickly, it dawned on all of us what was going on. I laughed so hard I was sore for a week, and I thought the same thing: Carlos was a day too late in turning off the camera. And of course he denied everything the next day (he wanted to go on vacation!) That was so great - you couldn't script something like that if you tried!

Hello everyone. I'm home for lunch in hopes of seeing our Carrie one last time. But alas, she has truly fledged. What a perfect time for her to fly off. Sorry. Was fixing lunch. No I didn't have a camera with me on that visit. I do have photos on my website of the horses just around the corner from me, but they are not Arabians.

http://www.imhphoto.com/Animals/A-Neighbors-Horses/9076448\_rC7u6#518214018\_bhYNq

As for the camera - if I were buying a compact right now it would be the G11. I have a G2 also. Love the flip out viewfinder and wouldn't give that up. I think the G11 has a flip out screen as well, after they did away with it for some reason earlier.

Yes, he was a broke 24 year old waiter... and now makes over 300k a month. I flew to Florida for a special training that he put on for us. I recorded him and all the speakers. I figured out how to zip them and can now email them to my team. I have know him for 16 years next month. He has a heart of gold and helps many. One woman posted, way back during the first brood, that watching the owls opened her eyes to the living things around her. She said that now when she walks to work, she hears and sees birds she never saw before. They were there all along, but she never looked until now. I thought that was really neat!

After all is said and done, TByrd and Lynda - this is the best effect of all from watching Molly and family. The 'grass roots' level - literally. Far and beyond anything else people might take away from this site, heightened awareness is the most valuable because it passes on to the children, family and friends. It will be an enduring legacy long after the keepsakes end up in the attic.

Kathleen I see Mary Pat (was it?) commented that your Avataria reminded her of a Klimt painting! I have thought that a million times and meant to make the SAME remark. The painting I specifically think of is the iconic second portrait of Adele Bloch-Bauer. (<http://s3.artknowledge.com/files/GustavKlimtAdeleBlochBauerI.jpg>).

Just this weekend, I saw a wonderful documentary on the Ovation channel, recounting how Adele's niece, Mrs. Maria Altman, recovered that portrait and several other Klimts from the Austrian government after a long legal battle. The Klimts had of course been stolen from the Bloch-Bauers by the Nazis. The paintings were sold at auction for a total in excess of I believe $140 million dollars. Maria, who was by then in her 80's, had ended up a seamstress in Los Angeles. A lovely, lovely woman who wanted only what was rightfully belonged to her children.

Beautiful horses and gorgeous photos. I love to watch these horses run. We once surveyed a large wooded property with a huge pasture on one side. At the end was a very small paddock with one Arabian shut up inside. The horse watched us closely as we worked and made our way around the property, and he kept calling to us every so often. Eventually we got to the stable and he seemed really excited to see us. About that time the owner drove up in her car and asked if he was behaving himself. Apparently he has a way of convincing the local kids to turn him loose. She opened the gate and he went charging full steam across the pasture. Must have run for 20 minutes, kicking and prancing most of the way.

It was, Jan. I grew up visiting with my grandfather at a race track, where he drove one of the maintenance tractors. I had frequent access to the stables and track operations. So essentially my only contact with horses at an early age was with high strung and unpredictable horses which never appeared to be enjoying themselves. Naturally I witnessed a lot of uncomfortable sights there, so seeing one run just for the sake of running is always a thrill.

I have to share what just happened to me when I went out to trim the mailbox shrub. There is a part of the shrub in the back that has some dead limbs from someone knocking it over this summer and as I was looking through the branches.... lo and behold an empty byrd's nest. I didn't even know it was there.

Another fledged family until spring. 😊 Kinda bitter sweet huh?

Actually I was going to trim off the dead branches but after I saw the nest I ceased all operation so as not to disturb it. It won't need trimming during the winter anyway. It will keep the green leaves it has but won't grow anymore during the cold. Even then I will try not to disturb it next year. I really don't know what the birds were but I did see lots of different ones hanging around the shrub. Now I know why. I sure wish I could have seen the babies.

I think it's a delightful instance of serendipity that humans, without realizing it, have landscaped their yards with the perfect kinds of nesting places that Cardinals prefer. Add a feeder and Voila! You'll have a Cardinal family/families around for life! And what a way to start each day with a smile.

That's interesting, HF. While in FL last winter the cardinals would do the same thing on our car. One would also perch in a nearly dead orange tree next to a utility shed in back of our place. It would flutter quickly up to the window of the U-shed, click on the window and back to a branch over and over and over again. I thought at first it was pecking at insects, but no sign of any webs or insects there. I saw similar behavior at a timber harvesting operation here in Maine one time, too. The cardinals thoroughly enjoyed perching on the large mirror frames of the logging trucks and look at themselves.

I also got to see W. Dennis at a book signing, when I was a kid, and had him autograph a copy of Brightly of the Grand Canyon. I was disappointed, recently, to see that the Margarite Henry books are now illustrated by someone else.
