Hi Barb, it's not the kid getting whacked one, but another one that starts off with a mom and her little daughter in a car. You'll see it eventually if you refresh often enough, I'm sure.

Dorothy:

I posted this below but want to be sure you saw it:

Just curious, but you know that the live picture of Molly above is Owl Box 1, right? And the Owl Box 2 we are talking about is the outside view. I just want to be sure we are talking about the same thing. If you clicked on one of the links to OB2, then tried to change it to a 2, it would go to the same outside view. There's only 1 outside view and 1 inside view, right now.

There were pains in places I hadn't know I could even have, ha. I'm going to keep up the punishment for a bit. I hope we get to do this again with Molly soon and sweet dreams to all.

allen races the 2 miles to mom's and wayne is making circles around the car. when he cranked the car and started backing up....the snake ran up the windshield out from under the hood, so when he turned around...the snake was on the windshield looking in at him..... so he jumps out of the car and then the tail of the snake falls in the crack of the open door so he couldn't close the door. he begins banging on the hood trying to get the snake to leave...then he lost sight and didn't know if he went IN the car or off the car.....oh gosh...i can't breathe im dying lol now....

The act of mating serves two purposes, Robin. Even after the eggs have been laid the male will continue to mate with the female - not for fertilizing the eggs this time, but for keeping their bond strong for the coming months of parenthood.

Went to a party yesterday. Got a copy of these wonderful brownies.

Karen's Heart-Stopping Mint Brownies

Cake Layer:

1 c. flour, 1 c. sugar, 1/2 c. softened butter, 4 eggs, 1 1/2 c. Hershey's Syrup.Mix together.Bake in a greased 13 x 9 pan at 350 for 25-30 mins.Cool

Mint Cream Center:

2 c. powdered sugar, 1/2 c. softened butter, 1 T. water, 1/2- 3/4 t. mint extract, 3 drops green food coloring. Mix together and spread over cooled brownie layer.Chill in refrigerator.

Chocolate Topping:

6 T. butter, 1 c. semi-sweet chocolate chips.Melt together and stir until smooth. Pour and spread over mint layer.Chill.Remove from fridge about 15 mins.

before cutting so that the chocolate won't crack.

Merritt Hi Ian, I've been thinking something all day that I'm gonna share with you now that you mention this. I'm wondering if this is really Molly. Her feathers do look different to me, and even the calls she is making tonight don't sound the same to me. McGee could very well have a new mate. He's the one who picks the site and brings the food to it. If this is Molly that's terrific, but there is a chance it might just be another. I believe I have mentioned here about our bluebird... there is now a fourth or fifth nesting for this year. I don't know if its the same pair of bluebirds having all these clutches. A little update... the last clutch fledged about July 8... I cleaned the house the next day... in a matter of no more than 3-4 days a new nest was built... today I checked and there are 4 beautiful blue eggs in the nest. Also, today, hubby spotted the last fledglings on the ground under a redwood tree beside our house... they were excitedly fluttering about watching a parent with food up in the tree... the parent bird flew to another nearby tree and the babies followed. The bird watching goes on... Beverly

The eggs have been laid over the past several days, Jen. Probably the best place for you to catch up and give you a timeline is the blog <http://mollysbox.wordpress.com/blog/>. Carlos has said he will not be broadcasting 24/7 again this time. It does give a few regular updates (noted on the blog) and the broadcast of Molly today is a total surprise. There will also be a McGee Watch tonight at 8:30 PDT - probably the outside camera. Here is the site for ordering the hard-cover book <http://www.ericblehm.com/>

Darlene, I would wrap them in aluminum foil in a package sized to fit a skillet or pan, add some water and steam them in the foil so that they don't dry out. Bring water to boil, cover and reduce heat to barely simmering. Shouldn't take too long unless you have lots and lots of leftovers. If you do, call and DH and I can help you get rid of them. 😊

As one they grew up around chickens, I will hazard a guess that she sits to lay as the hens do... They get up and pace after laying, could be strutting...at least some do and certainly do all the shuffling and settling moves that Molly does when getting back on the nest...

Here's an egg-laying question. I didn't get to see Molly lay her eggs either time. Do owls lay an egg all at once or is it a lengthy process? And are they standing or squatting when laying? I am just one of those "city folks" who don't know these things. Hope that doesn't sound silly, but was just wondering.

I doubt if she would be standing, Connie - it would be kind of risky for the egg just plopping down on the floor. I'm speculating here, but it seems to me that she would be squatting the same way she is sitting on the eggs now. I envision her slowly rising up a bit when the egg starts coming out to allow that to happen. I do know that eggs are soft within the bird and harden after they are laid - I don't know how long that process takes, but if she lays an egg the way I envisioned it, the egg has a total 'soft' landing!

From all the other barn owl cams I've watched, eggs are usually laid a day or two apart. It seems that it can be beneficial to have them a few days apart because a day makes a big difference in their maturity. For example, the owlets at the Nicasio school were only one day apart and they were all fighting to get out of the box at the same time. They were essentially the same age. Remember how much difference there was between Max and Wesley? Guess, spreading them out helps with the 'pecking order' to some degree and gives each owlet their own time to shine and reach various milestones.

No one is making us watch these owls and no one certainly twisted all of the people's arms who chose to purchase Molly merchandise. The Royals and the others who helped provide us with Molly's First Clutch/Family's Journey have spent countless hours providing us with so much enjoyment, camaraderie and friendship/fellowship & most of all knowledge and awareness of Barn Owls first and peaked our interest of other owl species as well. If I were you, I would be deleting your post as I believe you are out numbered here... I'm just say'in. Check out this great poster created by Kathleen in this chat room. Someone (maybe Jan ??) would something several days ago about the normal temperature for an owl (was it 104 degrees ?) - so even though it is pretty warm in the owl box, she wouldn't be as adversely affected by the temps as we would be. Is that right ? ?

Owls would not live in this climate if they could not safely reproduce. Molly is in the nest box for weeks before she lays an egg. She would know well in advance whether the temperature is safe to raise a clutch or not.

I'm hoping she is restless because she is getting ready to lay egg #5. But it is probably just the heat and humidity. I know several of us can relate to that feeling!

I was at a place with a very slow connection, so I saw the e-mails that she was on, but the stream was terrible. so, I hustled home to my temp housing where the signal is much stronger, and how fabulous is this?! (Greetings y'owl from Peterborough, N.H. I have not seen any owl boxes up here, but they sure do have a lot of ready-made habitat.) Yay, Molly.

Well, I'm getting ready to talk to the managing director of the theatre to see if we shouldn't install one. There is a bunch of rabbits living under the scene shop, and the farm next door is complaining about the damage to their gardens, so it might just be time for an owl box. We all know what an owl's favorite snack is. Might be too late in the season for New England, though. I'll have to see what the locals have to say.

 There are other ways to do this, but this is what I do. If you have windows and a PC, there should be a "Printscreen" or "printscrn" button on the upper right corner of your keyboard. Push that key. It will not look like anything happened. Then open a program like "Paint" or "Photoshop" and go to "Edit" and then "Paste New Image". It will put the screen shot you took in the program. From there you can edit it using the crop feature (look under tools or in the side toolbar). Then you save it somewhere that you can find it later as a photo (usually jpg or png) and if you want to share it, there is an "Add Images" button under the comment box.

Newer computers have a program under the Applications tab called Snipping Tool. Works even better, faster, easier than Print Screen. If you don't have Snipping Tool, Google Cropper and download that. I like it even better than Snip!
 This site will tell you about Cropper and has a link to their home page: Cropper.

To take a screenshot on a Mac just hit 'control+shift+3' at the same time and a screenshot pops up on your desk top, to size one, hit 'control+shift+4' and a sizer thingle will pop up, just hold that to the left corner of the picture you want to take and drag... WaLaLa, a picture on your desktop PoPs Up

I was thinking that Carlos signed off on the deal as long as Austin said it was all him and then we'd not expect more from them. He might have even said he can do it periodically while they're gone...as long as it's got his name attached and his responsibility. Please let that be what it is!!

No, he just is feeling generous today. It is ongoing upkeep of the cameras that is the issue. They can't do that while on their trip, and it takes a lot of time and energy. If you remember, every time they have gone away for even a day or two the cameras or the computers go down for some reason.

Colleen...Teeny (who is 6 or 7) & her daughter Milk (4 or 5) don't have any fear of me. Started with Teeny's grandmother when I first moved in here. I would be throwing rocks into a wheelbarrow, lean back to rest & she (Mama) would be laying a few feet away. She is long gone. I occasionally see her daughter & Teeny's mother, Sister, who also has no fear of me. It is a family thing, I guess, learned behavior. Now Milk's babies...Teeny has a baby but rarely brings it in so it will probably be cautious of me. As my sweetie says "I live in a zoo!" Most of the squirrels here have no fear of me either.

Also (more water creatures), the whale watches have been extraordinarily good the last few weeks....Jim and I will probably go out one day next week and maybe I can get some good photos to show you. The most common ones around here are the humpback whales. Sometimes they're very curious and will come right up to the boat...a little unnerving, but exciting! The captains of the whale watch boats have named many of the humpbacks and can recognize them by the markings on the tail fins.
