Latrippi Reticulating membrane! I thank for pointing that out and explaining. My vocabulary is increasing in unexpected ways, lol! Today, 09/15/42 - Like - Book

Cat The reticulating membrane doesn't close from top to bottom... it goes kinda from the top inner eye diagonally. Did you know that owl don't have "eyebags"? I mean, their eyes in their skulls are not round... They are sort of long and bell-shaped, with it esmerelda they sure are beginning to get their faces raw. Today, 09/12/22 - Like - Book

Cat You can kind of infer their birth order from the size of their face feathers. Of these three, the one in the front seems youngest, the one sitting hi Today, 09/10/39 - Like - Book

Here they have a friend who grew up on a farm. I was telling her about this website and the controversy of the nest box on a steel pole will flagging to get back up. She said they always had a barn owl nest in one of their metal barn buildings. It nested on a steel girder, and when they fell down onto the tractor equipment, and hid among the tools and tires stacked against the wall. It wasn't until they could fly, after 15 days in the barn, that they would fly back up to the nest. So, maybe these owlets will hide in Carbo's yard if they can't get back in the box.
If they make a down sorry enough.
