 Hi I just discovered this link! Someone just now told me about it. Apparently, someone put it in a comment a few hours ago, and a friend saw it and told me about this. WOW! Great link! I think I'll hang out here because I'd really like to be able to be on neutralground, which this seems to be. And we could talk about ANY owls and any owl boxes if we want. This is what I've been hoping for.

A guess: It's hotter at the back of the box and cooler in the front, because the door lets in air and breezes. So owlets pant in the back and look more comfortable in the front. And every now and then a back-box owlet pushes up to the front to get cooler, and all the others get jostled out of the way.

They don't have anything with photos and chat. The regular e-book is more of the story of Molly and will be illustrated. Folks keep asking for a coffee table type of book, but there is nothing like that in the works yet. We can always hope. The problem is that would take a long time to publish and by the time it came out, people might be on to the next big thing and it might not sell.

I know, Chris, but the first time I heard about it I thought about an old Twilight Zone episode - one of my favorites - about aliens who convince Earthlings to join them on their spaceship. They keep showing a book called "To Serve Mankind" and the humans think the aliens are there to help. Turns out that it's a cookbook. It was pretty funny... maybe you had to be there...

Owlosaurus
They may start as early as next week, but there's a range of days from 50-60+ so we won't know for sure until it happens. It should be exciting though! I think we'll see lots more wing flapping and hopping/jumping inside the nest as they get closer to the time to fly. Even jumping out onto the porch, then back into the box.

hysterical!!! now i have to start watching that one!!! i noticed one of my dog's bones (the kind you get in the meat department, real, halfbones) was sitting ontop of our fence. the past two mornings i have seen a squirrel sitting on the fence with that bone in his hand(not a small bone) just chewing away. It took a double look the first time i looked out the window!!!

 Kim, are you asking how to take a screen picture? Expand the picture to full screen by clicking on the little icon with 4 arrows on it under the video box. Then watch until you see the picture you want. When you do, press CTRL and PRT SCR at the same time. There! You've just taken a picture! Paste it into Paint and save it to a folder on your computer.

You might want to click on your Start button and check under Accessories to see if you have a Snipping Tool, but I think that takes too long and makes it hard to capture the picture you want. Others really like using it though. Try both ways until you get the pictures you want.

Owosaurus - Saw your ? down below, but thought I'd answer up here.
Both squirrels are in there today it seems 😊 Not sure when the other one came back... I didn't get up until the middle of the day today 😊 ...due to my EMOD (I was up until almost 6am). But they seem to just be itching and scratching as usual. No babies yet.

The storks on the otherhand - I think there are 2 babies now people are saying, but it is kind of hard to see with the wind blowing the camera - and messing with the "view".

Blessings to you Owlo!

Brie, this is a little advice: you need to stop asking where people live. Telling people where you live on the internet can be a bad idea, especially if you are a young girl. This is a good time for 'don't ask, don't tell' even though this seems like a nice, safe place.

Now I amunable to locate this creation. Does anyone know if it still exists? Has it been updated? Sorry, I can't remember who created this work of art.

To answer the question about Wesley...remember that he's a full week behind Max. I don't believe he can actually stand up like the others. His legs probably aren't strong enough yet. The others will sleep standing, but he sleeps laying down like the others did when they were younger. He is really just fine, just a little behind because of his age.

Thanks Becky. I know people are concerned about Wes and have been from the beginning. But I think your response really captures the most important point to remember: these owlets are growing and changing daily. We all comment on that rapid change. A week ago none of them were standing up straight and tall. In another week, Maxie may be testing her wings for the first time and Wes will be standing tall staring out the door with a "Wha...? Are you CRAZY, Max?!" look on his/her face.

Darting across the sky with a mouse or rat in tow.
They'd rather have a rabbit, This I surely know.
Game is getting scarce, They've eaten everything in sight
I'm doing all I can by hunting every night
I see the end is near, I then can have a beer,
They'll all be flying soon, soaring toward the moon.
When they spot their prey, it's "sorry mouse, this ain't your day"
Hey Molly, come with me! I found another tree
Another clutch? we'll see! don't what comes naturally

I have a dumb question so here goes will the first fledge take place at night or during the day?
Today, 11:21:04 - Flag - Like - Reply

That is a good question. On the one hand, daytime would be good because we could see it more clearly, however, nighttime would be safer for the owlets as fewer predators. Hmm...any answer from those who have researched this?

Every article I have found on the subject of barn owl fledging has mentioned that it takes place at night, but I don't know if this is the norm or if it's accidental to the articles I found. It will certainly be interesting to find out.

We've heard that they'll take their first flights at night when the adults will be there to watch over them. When the time is right Moly and McGee will entice them from the box. After that they may try their wings during the day. We'll have to keep watching to see what happens!!!

Hi Carol, sources vary as to when fledging begins, but most say from 50 to 60 days. Fledging for barn owls is a long process. It begins with the first step out of the nest, progresses to "branching," where they hop around and flap their wings, and ends one to two months later by flying away for good. Max is 44 days old today.

 I just got back from lunch and will check out your Sheltie page now! I don't get dopey sentimental about many things but I can't see a Sheltie or a Norwegian Elkhound without it happening. We raised, trained and loved Elkhounds for a long time, then finally decided it might be fun to have a smart dog who actually cared what we thought! LOL So we found a Sheltie who needed rescuing. They've now been part of our lives for over 20 years and I can't imagine being without them

 Oh Colleen, they are beautiful! Thanks for sharing those pictures.
 Our Sheltie is 13 and starting to show her age. It's hard because she's the only one we brought home as a small puppy and she's always been our babydog. She's a bi-color. The other's we've had all started as rescues before they became family so were a bit older; one was 5 when he came to us. They were all tri-colors and I teared up a little looking at your tri-color pictures.

 Carbs, you don't have to leave the screen, just take your cursor down to the left bottom and click on Start, then click on All Programs. From there click on Accessories and when that opens, you click on Snipping Tool and it pops up on the right side of the screen we are on. From there you just click on New on the left side of the Snipping Box and I choose Rectangle and then just click on it and follow the prompts. You can do all of this in seconds. But, no editing can be done with this method. Once you take the photo click on the Save and then you must retrieve it when you click on Add Images under the post box. It is fast and easy. Got to go but good luck...

 Hey hi, purdyfarms! I just this second bogged-on to check on the owlets and last night's carnage. I see those adorable owlets sleeping peaceful with blood and guts all around!
 Hap is hanging in!! Saturday, when we start the cortisone treatment. I have to wear her of her arthritis med, which is an NSAID and doesn't go well with steroids. So she's going to be in pain this week. I'm giving her leg messages and putting cold and heat on the leg.
 If anyone has tips, let me know. I never got a chance to ask Zesty last night, whose dog had also torn an ACL, what she did. But I think I will get a 2nd opinion, if the cortisone doesn't work.
 Thank you SO MUCH for your concern - people on this site are just wonderful. Have a great day.... see you later, got to go to work!

 We've been through this too, with an ancient Elkhound and then again with an elderly Sheltie. Never easy to see our old babies in pain. We always did whatever we could to make them as comfortable as possible. Dogs are so resilient! The cortisone worked very well for one of our and not so great for the other but it's definitely worth a try. We did be for first 48 hours, then heat therapy after that.

If you have windows and a PC, there should be a "Printscreen" or "print scrn" butt on the upper right corner of your keyboard. Push that key. It will not look like anything happened. Then open a program like "Paint" or "Photoshop" and got to "edit" and then "Paste". It will put the screen shot you took in the program. From there you can edit it.

There are other ways to do this, but this is what most of us do.

For those having trouble printing screens (I was not able to get that to work on my laptop), if you have "snipping tool" in your accessories, you can click on that and it will pop up on your video screen. Capture and crop as you want it, and then click "Save As" to your computer. Name it for reference and then you're all set.

Merritt you don't have to leave the screen, just take your cursor down to the left bot tom and click on Start, then click on All Programs. From there click on Accessories and when that opens, you click on Snipping Tool and it pops up on the right side of the screen we are on. From there you just click on New on the left side of the Snipping Box and I choose Rect angle and then just click on it and follow the prompts. You can do all of this in seconds. But, no editing can be done with this method. Once you take the photo click on the Save and then you must retrieve it when you click on Add Images under the post box. It is fast and easy. Got ta go but good luck...

Where do the owls go after they leave the nest? Do they come back for a while, or do they leave for good once they fledged?
Today, 09:12:44 - Flag - Like - Reply

Merritt
Sources vary as to when fledging begins, but most say from 50 to 60 days. Fledging for barn owls is a long process. It begins with the first step out of the nest, progresses to "branching," where they hop around and flap their wings, and ends one to two months later by flying away for good. Max is 44 days old today.

Yesterday they did not sleep much at all. Maybe that was OK for Max and Pattison, but a stress on Wesley and now he is sleeping it off (so to speak). Can't recall what type of sleep patterns Max exhibited a week to 10 days ago, but it may have been similar to what we now see in Wesley. Anyone have any ideas on that?

I seem to remember a number of people worrying when the owlets would be just sitting and laying on the floor sleeping for long hours just a couple of weeks ago. I think Wesley is just younger - and needs more rest to grow. 😊

What concerns me is that the owlets are clearly old enough to sleep standing up, which they will probably do for the rest of their lives. Seeing one in the down position so often, after having learned to sleep in a standing position, is a little worrying. I often wonder about whether they ever ingest rats or mice that have been fed poison.

Cat, I don't think they are clearly old enough to sleep standing up when you look at this chart. Wesley is 37 days old today. Take a look at the owlet in this chart that is 35 days old. They are all still very immature. Click on the chart if you want to increase the size of it.

Um, then again, he's not prone like he was yesterday (assuming it's the same one as yesterday). So, count me as a worry wart for a moment there.

Good morning everyone. Have to run some errands in just a second. But here's a note to let you know the PDF from last night's chat is now on the wiki. This file captures the chat from 10pmPDT until 8am this morning.

It's sad to me that he has to preface every statement with, "I'm not an expert..." to answer every single question. Guess he needs to just run a disclaimer at the top of the screen so that he's allowed to talk. All this time he's spent to share these owls with us - all the live video, the round-the-dock-updates, the interviews and sessions with schools. The positive feedback he has received far exceeds the negative but I definitely don't blame him for not wanting to do this again.

I would do the same thing if I were Carbs. he is not an expert. he is learning along with us and is understanding as he goes along. he is doing the responsible thing by saying that.

Absolutely, and don't think he's ever claimed to be anything other than a retired, nature-and-bird-loving man who, with his wife, wanted to show others Molly and family. I think it's wonderful he has offered so much of his time to "meet" with these groups, especially the schools. He didn't have to do any of this, even after the phenomenon began. Which is why I said given the criticism he has received, he should just run a disclaimer indicating his lack of expertise across the live feed. 😊

Personally I have been quiet put off by what has been said from a few, I have found it to be quiet insulting, to anyone who can read, listen and who can think for themselves.

I think both Donna and Carbs have acted very classy from what I have heard and seen, they both continue to just be themselves and do so, so very much when you sit down and think about it. It has been truly amazing to watch and be a part of. They are definitely in the group of 'givers' of this world, and may it continue to enrich their lives as they have enriched so many others... that is all I have to say about that.

Merrit, you're here! Just passing through: I'm so embarrassed about last night, ask you to do a summary of events! It's for the Timeline. You often do it anyway without being formal about it so I grab them (jump down to last weekend):

<http://mollyowl.cbworks.com/Timeline>

Let me know if you'd rather not be quoted like that. I meant, if we get a new habit started of late nighters leaving a summary, that would be great. I don't have time to comb through the PDF's anymore. Sadly!

Nancy, he mentioned during a previous interview for those who were interested in doing a session (i.e. schools), could contact him. Have to have a SKYPE connection, I believe.

Hi all. Please have patience with my question. I've only been able to check in periodically the last couple of days and I know little Wesley has been showing signs of maybe not feeling too well. I'm truly not one of the worry warts! But I do wonder if any of the other MODs, particularly those who could watch overnight, have seen him/her eating or showing a "normal" energy level. I've just popped in here, and I may not be seeing the screen correctly, but if that's Wesley lying down at the left, it doesn't look like something I've seen before. Anyone with info on recent behavior? Thanks. -A

Hi Austin. What signs of not feeling well have you seen?

Today, 08:53:03 - Flag - Like - Reply

Merritt, I'm basing my question mostly on comments I saw about Wesley falling over and not looking very responsive. Since I didn't see it myself, I hesitated to conclude that there really was anything going on other than normal weebly wobbling and stumbling. Just now there was a mention about his responsiveness, and the way he's lying down now (assuming it's him) seems less alert than I'm used to seeing. Again, I don't want to excite unreasonable concern. I'm just wondering what people have seen of him/her the last day or two.

Yesterday, after trying to nap on the floor, he got jostled about so got up and stood instead. He is often very active during the day along with the rest. Please look down below (about 24 posts) to where Nancy and I just discussed the behavior of all four owlets at this time. I think you'll find the info there very helpful.

during carlos's lecture right on clue wesley got up and stood between the others, all four could be seen. looks like it is nap time for the youngest two after all of last night's treats.

Oh good, that's comforting info. I did see a comment that Wesley stirred during the lecture, but of course I missed seeing it. I think my problem could be rectified if I just quit work so I can devote total time to the owl box! Thanks for your replies.

Carbs just said they probably won't live stream again if there is another family in the box. They spend 10-18 hours a day keeping this running.
