Carlos Royal, Once had a goal.
He put an owl box at top of a pole.
He waited for two years, not and owl did he see.
Finally it happened, Molly and McGee.
The two together, nature at it's best.
I don't have to tell you, you know the rest.
6 tiny eggs, one of them cracked.
Daddy didn't make it, something he lacked.
The 4 that were left, well they grew and they grew.
There was no room for mom so away she flew.
She hasn't gone far, she's joined McGee.
The two of them nightly on a hunting spree.
They drop in often with lots of prey.
To check on the little owlets and make sure they are okay.
Soon they will fledge, away they will fly.
But Carlos Royal, isn't he shy?

The "branch," where they hop from one limb to another for a while, then they take short wldy flapping flights, then the flights get smoother and longer, then they are flying near and far, but still returning to the nest and being cared for by their parents until they are about 80 days old. I have to admit that I've lived in a bad part of town before and my neighbors' gunfire somewhat frequent. I since worked my way out to the country and I now hear gunfire almost daily. Several of my neighbors have target ranges. So now I hardly even pay attention to it. Hopefully you're just hearing someone "show off" their new gun to friends. And hopefully there is no alcohol present, but that may be arguing against rules of nature.

What's really funny is my son and his friends have been memorizing these dialogues, and go into these long dialogues word for word and crack themselves up, starting 2 years ago at the age of 17. It was just too funny seeing them enjoy what was originally "our" (their parents and their parents age's) humor. 😊

Hoping the musical was a success! I'm sure she had so much fun. I was the lead in our high school musical (waaayyy back), but I remember it being one of the best times of my HS life. A real sense of camaraderie and family with being part of a musical. And I LOVED performing and being on stage.
I bet it was fun for her as well... 😊

My daughter was made for the stage and has acted since she was 7. She loves it! She is a natural actress. We have no idea where she got that from. She is in the chorus in this musical (Once on This Island) but in this case the chorus is integral to the performance and plays many different roles throughout the night. She has several speaking lines and solo singing lines. Next year she will be the VP of the drama club. They all did a great job! They are a great group of kids. It really helps in HS to have a place to belong.

That is soooo Awesome for her! I just remember LOVING it in HS. It really is a defining time in one's life and being part of a group with all that creativity swirling around, and learning how to perform, etc. truly sets the stage (no pun intended) for things later in life. And you have SO much fun doing it! So glad to hear she's a part of that. It's really sad to see that music/drama (or things of that sort) are the first to go in budget cuts in public schools. I know that it was a HUGE part of my life and defining my character. I still recall on tools/lessons I got from that experience...to this day.

And ALL the parts are important, no matter if you're the lead or in the chorus...all of it is very important and great that she's a part of that. Hoping she continues with it all through HS 😊 Do you have a background in singing/drama? I grew up in a very artsy family...and we all got the bug. I actually double-majored in Biology AND Dance in college and received a degree in both. I couldn't help it! I love the arts AND science. I'm a lefty and a righty i guess.

Analysts are saying ours should be okay and start with a uptick. My husband worries also. 😊

I would download AVG (Free) and try it out. If your current product is about to expire, maybe try AVG on one system and the Microsoft product on another. Both free, both easy on the system resources, and both do a fine job. Just don't install them without removing the old software first. Good thing it's not Norton, because that is a BEAR to remove completely.

James Hill (in Cognito) I suspect either Norton or McAfee???? Both are notorious for totally ruining PC performance, especially on streaming websites. Look into some less aggressive alternative when you have a chance. Or "whitelist" this website in the preferences of your current software. Today, 20:47:35 - Flag - Like - Reply

DWD in Atlanta James.....What is a less aggressive alternative??? Today, 21:00:18 - Flag - Like - Reply

James Hill (in Cognito) I use AVG. http://free.avg.com/us-en/homepage They have a free edition for home use and a very reasonably priced pay edition that allows up to 3 PCs, I believe. It's lightweight and I've never had a problem using it. If you happen to run Windows 7, then the Microsoft Security Essentials package seems to be the ticket. I'm running that on the PC I'm using right now. It's much improved over Norton or McAfee, both of which I have used in the past. They were once really good, now they both are bloated and real resource hogs. Today, 21:10:10 - Flag - Like - Reply

DWD in Atlanta There are 3 of us around here at one time or another, LOL We have 2 xp's, 2 Vista 64 and 1 that was just upgraded to Windows 7. All laptops. My son has Micro Trend on 1 or both of his. The others are McAfee. What do you suggest? Ours expire in a couple months. Today, 21:18:17 - Flag - Like - Reply

Merritt A full scan! That must be so annoying. I am so glad that you persevere. I am going to miss you this weekend, by the way, but I do hope you have a wonderful time, even if it's just cutting all that grass. You're going to have such a sense of accomplishment when you're done. Today, 20:48:04 - Flag - Like - Reply

Kathryn R Thank you everyone! Sometimes I don't post because I am so locked up I can't even restart the computer unless it's a hard boot. I have McAfee, and it's all governed by my workplace so all the settings are locked down (greyed out) so I am at the mercy of work. That's why half the time I can't post during the day as I'm on our network and totally blocked.

I do have a home laptop but my husband and daughter use it and they don't have MOD. OK, well my 10yo asks only once a day, but that's about it.

For those having problems with the screen freezing temporarily: try keeping your mouse pointer out of the white space, where the comment stream is. As long as your mouse is in that area comments will build up in a queue. Once you move your mouse then all the comments come streaming onto the page, causing things to "lock up" momentarily. Notice the "Paused"/"Live" note just under the smaller video? Move your mouse above and below that and see it change. The orange space outside the white space is where I keep my mouse to prevent a huge pileup of comments from taking over and locking things up.

It does get slow when everyone tries to post at once. Like when a delivery is made.

Tip
Are there more people? Earlier (4 weeks or so) it was common to see 12 - 14,000 viewers. Was that the time of day, or did the novelty wear off for all those people?

Leslee, try keeping your mouse pointer out of the white space, where the comment stream is. As long as your mouse is in that area comments will build up in a queue. Once you move your mouse then all the comments come streaming onto the page, causing things to "lock up" momentarily. Notice the "Paused"/"Live" note just under the smaller video? Move your mouse above and below that and see it change. The orange space outside the white space is where I keep my mouse to prevent a huge pileup of comments from taking over and locking things up.

I dunno. My experience with beaver dams, on our property up north, is that they are incredibly persistent and durable creatures and the dams are very difficult to damage (the beavers can repair them faster than humans could tear them out). Beaver dams are also very boring to watch, because most of the action takes place underwater and the most you'll see is a swimming beaver's head. I don't think it will get a lot of visitors. The dams are not very scenic.

I dont usually post much. Just watch and enjoy. But to the night crew who have entertained & educated me more than you will ever know, I would like to share why I starting watching M & M. This past Thanksgiving we lost our 16yr Boston Terrier and a host of health issues. Fiesty little thing that loved xmas. So xmas was a little sad for me. I have missed her so much. Until my daughter or showed me this site just as the first 3 owlets hatched, they immediately gave me as sense of hope and relief that we did right by her. You see, her name was Mole. Mole Magee. I took this as a sign that my Mole was telling me she was ok. I just needed to get that off my chest. Thank you Carlos and Donna and Moly and McGee.

Oh how sweet, and thank you for sharing. Do you have the Children's book. All Dogs Go To Heaven by Cynthia Rylant. I strongly urge you to get it. I give a copy to all my friends who lose a dog. She wrote one for cats, too. The books are precious gifts and will make you smile and cry - a cleansing cry.

 I'm so sorry for your loss Carol D. Sincerely, the very bottom of my heart - this totally made me cry. I am a dog trainer, and work with people and their dogs all the time. Losing one...is NEVER easy. Even though I don't "know" you...I feel connected to most people on this site. It also has brought joy to my life (in a time of hardship). I just wanted to tell you...across the airwaves...my thoughts and prayers are with you, and I KNOW little Mollie would be happy to know you found solace in watching Moly and her family. Again - I'm so sorry for your loss and hope you find strength and happiness in the days ahead! Dogs are the BEST! 😊

 Hello from Lake Louise, Canada. It's nearly time to shut the lights out in our dorm- (we have some of the 5 and 6 year olds in this dorm, hence the lights being out before dark 😊 I'll be glad when I go to my forever home, which will be on the 18th of May now!

May I ask you parents a question, do you allow your children to view the nest and activities of Moly and her family? I hope that my new parents will love nature as I do. I don't want to ask them, because I don't want them to change their mind about wanting me.

Now, it is time to shut the lights out.

Goodnight everyone. I miss seeing Karen, she was great.

Maybe it strikes a nerve with me... I'm 8 years younger than my sister, and we look nothing alike. I used to get "are you adopted?" quite a bit. 😊

alskat
my daughter's are adopted and we always got....are they REAL sisters? well heck yeah.....and they have a REAL brother too. i just gave birth to him! here's your sign.....

Marla Woody Dillsaver
people can be so rude!!! that's why i work with kids.....they dont know better.

Guest
is there a certain time that Molly and McGee usually come at or does it depend?

zesty
they start delivering treats when it's dark...actual time depends on the night

Guest
Thank you Zesty!! 😊

Colleen
James, did you say earlier that the other side of the porch was now attached? If so when did that happen?

alskat
I'mnot James but after listening to all the worry warts, I heard carlos say both ends were attached! haha he strives to please!

Colleen
I guess I totally missed that event, but I don't get to hear Carlos talk very often.

Marla Woody Dillsaver
I'mbised it too and didn't even notice the change. i think i'm in a fog!!!

James Hill (in Cognito)
It happened almost a week ago. I think. 😊 My days all run together now, so I'mnot really sure! 😊
There was duct tape visible the first day. I guess that was a temporary fix, then he must have screwed it in the following day. The full res. photos from the blog showed the tape on that particular day.

alskat
Hi James! carlos is so sweet isn't he! we worry the babies will fall out, he adds a "porch"....then the worry warts fret that something will get them on the ground so he builds and installs a "landing deck", then the ww start fretting that the combined weight of all the babies will collapse the porch.....voila! he fixes it again!

Colleen
Thanks, I was surprised to hear that!

JL
Colleen, it probably shows up in his video tour of his yard.

Guest
why does Carols change the camera from the inside (when its daytime) to the outside (when its dark)??

Anna Difulco Peterman
so we can see Molly and McGee deliver treats all night.

Guest
oh...that!

alskat
u can't see anything at night because the babies are so big and they huddle in front of the door waiting on deliveries so instead we get to see the parents bringng food. In the early days before molly stopped nesting with them it was always on the inside of the box. <sniff> our babies are growing up!

elaine
no, won't happen for another hour or so - it's not dark yet

Robin Nienow
do you think wes will be ok...he really doesn't look very well

elaine
Wesley is just fine - he/she has been up and moving around today with all the others -

Katharine
Through the day, we've seen each owlet preening, lying down, standing tall, stretching, and scratching. No one has just stayed lying down; each owlet is always staying active. If I check in on the box and see an owlet on the floor, pretty soon that owlet is up and preening or otherwise acting healthy and content.

James Hill (in Cognito)
Can you explain why it is you think one owlet appears to not be doing well? All are healthy and appear quite normal to most of us. They all are developing right on schedule and so far have not shown any signs of being unwell. Remember there is a week's difference in their age, and a week in owlet development makes a big difference.

Ellott Humrich
C'est fatigant!

Mary Pat Hyland

Well that "storm" was a little disappointing. I love a good storm but this one flat fizzled out.
No real rain, just a smattering of small hail and no ground strike lightning.
The good news is, the temp has dropped considerably. Oh, and I'm back with my birds! Yay. 😊

Sherry, I sat out on the porch. I love a good dose of ionized air from all the lightning. The tin roof adds considerably to the effect, especially with a little hail. I am glad the power didn't go out though. It's happened to me once since owls took over my life, and that was not a comfortable night's sleep. 😊

Not a problem 😊 You could also do COMMAND/SHIFT/3 - but then you have to go into it and crop out the other screen bits. I like the "4" option b/c you can capture EXACTLY what you want right away and it auto-saves it for you 😊 Timing is key with that one though. I usually get it all ready...CMD/SHIFT/4 and then get my cursor ready. When the photo I want presents itself - I release the mouse 😊 Usually I do this when they are acting silly or alot is going on...there is usually a good photo in those!

Here's a great link if you need more info: <http://graphicssoft.about.com/od/screencapturemac/ht/macscreenshot.htm>

Glad you got it to work! I expect picture now 😊

I just saw this while I was cruising the Net looking for owl stuff:
Barn owls communicate with vocalizations and physical displays. Owlets still in the nest utter several distinct vocalizations, including a twitter used to express discomfort, attention-seeking, and when quarreling with nestmates. Young also give a raspy snoring food call. Adults use a variety of vocalizations, including the advertising call, a drawn-out gargling scream that is probably the best known call. The distress call is a series of drawn-out screams. Other vocalizations include a defensive hissing sound, a fast, often prolonged, twitter for feeding, and an explosive yell that is usually directed at a mammalian predator. Also, greeting and conversational twitters seem to convey recognition of mate and accompany various courtship activities. Barn owls are much less vocal when not breeding.

I found this...on here: <http://www.rchdv.org/Natureworks/barnowl.htm>
The barn owl is a nocturnal hunter. It eats small mammals like mice, shrews, voles and rats. It also eats birds. It has a keen sense of smell, which along with the ability to see in low light, helps it catch its prey. Its soft feathers also muffle sound so it can more easily sneak up on its prey.

One of the things I am curious about is what happens with the owllets afterwards. When they all leave "the nest" do they stay in the same area - will they become enemies after the same territory/female? Maybe no one can really answer that, but part of their charm has been the way they nurture each other. The grooming, picking at each other, nibbling, feeding Wesley, snuggled together for comfort/warmth. They get along so well now - will that change as they leave and become mature adults?

Denise, with all due deference to the author of Wesley the Owl, who surely knows much more than I do about owls, I don't believe the book is intended to serve as a scientific guide to owl behavior. I think you'll do better consulting the great number of terrific Internet resources which are easily found with a simple Google search.

Have a great evening.

They will go only as far as they need to in order to find a mate and suitable nesting/hunting ground. It's unlikely that they will become enemies as barn owls are known to be quite gregarious. There have been documented cases of many bonded pairs sharing the same barn. It all really comes down to where they find adequate food and shelter.

I'm using a MAC - I click on COMMAND key, SHIFT and 4 at the same time...you get a little capture tool via your mouse...and just click and drag what part of the image you want. Saves it to your desktop (or a place of your choosing) and then you can ADD IMAGE from there.

If using a PC - there is a PRINT SCREEN key on most keyboards to capture the screen image. This saves it to your clipboard. Then you open any photo editing program...like Paint, or Photoshop, etc. OPEN a new file and PASTE the image. Then you can use a CROP tool to cut out the parts you don't want. SAVE somewhere you'll remember, and then Voila...you can ADD IMAGE.

Hope that helps some 😊

Thought I heard a bird in the attic so took torch only to find a couple of squirrels building a nest (with my Christmas Wrapping paper and the insulation) ,and they had chewed through an electric cable.

Read down in the basement about hunting for your own food. I grew up hunting on our deer lease. My dad would fly clients there and to other places to go hunting. So he would come back with quail, dove, venison, etc. In between morning and evening hunts, my brother and I would go squirrel and rabbit (too tough) hunting. And there, we lived next to an undeveloped acreage. We would get our .22 and go squirrel hunting. We would bring them home and our mother would cook them. At this was right smack dab in the middles of a well developed subdivision. I wonder what our neighbors thought of us waking home with squirrels over our shoulders. For several years I turned vegetarian for health reasons. For the most part we are, however, I am very okay with eating wild game as opposed to what is in our stores.

This guy (below) says squirrels are white meat. The squirrels I ate in Texas were dark meat but then we did not soak them.
<http://www.kur5hr.org/story/2006/3/22/225818/790>
Squirrel meat is similar to chicken although slightly less greasy (it is sweeter) and the mouthfeel is firmer. That some do not have a "gamey" taste, which usually means that some of the bowel spilled on the meat and was not properly cleaned.

As long as you guys were eating them, I think that's great! Very resourceful. I live in a big city and once had a neighbor who would shoot the squirrels from his window with a pellet gun. He was just shooting them out of boredom. Made me angry enough but I also suspected he was shooting stray cats which made me furious. I complained about bodies in my yard, and he told me just to chuck them over to his side. I wanted to turn him in (it's illegal here) but figured getting on a neighbor's bad side was not a good idea for peaceful living.

owls! these creatures of night
how we long for the sight of your home in carlos' back yard
each night we tune in to see how you've been
and saying goodnight is hard

now you're almost grown and soon you'll leave home
flying off to distant parts
where you'll find your own mates and new families create
yet still you'll fly in our hearts
