Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more Information about the owls and this cam. Click Here.

If anyone saved or has come across the long list of acronyms that Merritt (I think) posted last night - probably between 11:00 and midnight PST last night it would be great to post it again today and this evening. There were also some suggestions added after that post. I'm too lazy to scroll back into the basement that far and it screws up my computer when I do 😊

It is really quite remarkable how their colorful feathers just sort of "materialize" out from under that white downy fluff in such a short amount of time, eh? It seems like they covered themselves with feathers almost "overnight". I find it amazing.

But you should know that we have some Moily visitors who are constantly having problems with their computers hanging up and running very slowly. Animated avatars could be part of the problem. Some computers just don't handle them well. Even some non-animated avatars are pretty large files. Something to think about.

Well I just woke up screaming, from a nightmare I was in the garage at one of our houses when I was 14, & there comes Moly with one of the large rodents in her mouth, headed to the box that was in the eaves of the garage! Then she swoops downwards towards me, STILL with the large rodent in her mouth, that's when I woke up! 😞 So I guess I won't take anymore pain killers before I watch this site! ha.

Great pics! Never noticed until now (the top 2 pictures really show this if you compare them) that the markings on the underside of the wings are distinctly different between the male and the female. Molly has many distinct markings, while McGee is mostly just white.

Just another observation...that I've never really noticed before. Maybe someone else already has though...sorry for repeating if that's the case.

Good morning. Finally getting around to posting.
I was going to stay up last night but it was a hectic afternoon (spent a lot of it chatting online with family in OK--sirens went off at least 5 times but they are all ok). I was too tired to join you all except for a few minutes.
It was a nice nighttime view. Looking forward to new pictures and video--I promised my children we would watch some nighttime footage.

I split the view in the small box.....other one is too close and you can't see Molly or McGee "coming in for landing". It's like they are there and gone in a split second. Plus the lighting is horrible in the "close up". Enough said, how can I voice dislike here, when all is magnificent! Shame on me! Love my babies and the chatter of friends. 😊

Spizon, I'm sure a lot of us agree with you, but here's the deal:
The view inside that we get in the daytime, does not have infrared and so it does not work at night. There are two infrared cameras in the box, the one we saw last night looking down, and one that is practically level with the floor. The one closer to the floor was great when the owlets were wee little things, but now all we see are legs, and those we can only see when they aren't pressed against the lens making the view appear entirely black! As for the outside view, it has been repositioned in hopes of seeing the owlets better when they step out of the box, which should happen any day now.

Melanie from Milwaukee, can we use your space owl for the Molly coloring book? We'd have to run it through PhotoShop filters to get the colors out, but there a lot of people--maybe you, too--who have PS and could do that. It's not a picture of Molly or her brood, but I think the kits are getting to want to color more than just brown and white or golden!

Time for the daily summary of the night's events, to be collected by our friend Latrippa and included in the Molly created by the wonderful volunteers from his chat room. If you would like to add your favorite moment from the night to this summary, please feel free to reply below. The summary is posted at http://mollyowlnews.com/Timline - To catch up on past events, be sure to check this out!

Max gave every step a stir in the early hours of the morning. He raised his foot up like Captain Morgan and appeared to rest on the threshold of the doorway, but he never did step out. Fledge watch lives on for another night to go. Other than that, no incidents out of the ordinary occurred with any of the owlets or McGee and Molly, except for a new record catch. All owlets were very well fed tonight.

So now I'm pretty sure James doesn't have the complete list of owconyms LOL! When you update him, tell him I added a page for him. What the heck. If the wiki gets too crowded, we can pdf it and put it on the Just for Fun page. Till then, let's leave it where acronyms can be easily added.

Now I have to go make that page...

Good morning. I think the way we left it last night, James is going to post them on the wiki. He started the list of acronyms with his Top Ten, and then we all have added to it since then. He has the complete list now, so I can confirm that with him when I see him, if you want me to.

Use Control Plus to make the screen a bit larger and the box will be viewed fully. It might take 2 or 3 enlargements. Then return to normal using Control minus.

Carlos, Thank you SO much for this site! I have enjoyed watching since before the eggs all hatched. I have just the past few nights stayed up late to watch the food deliveries I had wondered who waited and kept count all night. Now, I realize it is you. I enjoy your sense of humor too. I don't know how you can tell if it is Moly or McGee they come and go so fast! Love the little face looking out for them to come. I think at least one of the owlets is a girl. What is the knocking noise? Are they stomping their feet?

Never! Ever! N-E-V-E-R. Tonight was not a joke on you. The joke was on both of us, but was aimed at me. I swear to you I am telling you the trust. Bravo to James, I say. I thought he was a hoot. The man really does have a good sense of humor. He knows where my funny bone is at least. I have laughed in delight at his words tonight. He has been very clever, and not mean at all, with his new identity. Email me, and get some sleep. You might see it my way in the morning. I'm telling you this has all been in fun, violation of presumed privacy not withstanding. It's a chat room! That's the risk that you take.

I'm going to get some sleep first...and settle my head.
I'll feel better in the "other" morning (my morning)...I always do.

I most likely misread everything and took things personally...which I tend to do nowadays, being that I'm questioning my purpose in this world as of late. I just really want to be a participant in this chat, and enjoy it as everyone else seems to do. I'm all for kidding, and joking, but I tend to think people are always having a "secret laugh" about me...and what I post on here. As I wear my heart on my sleeve for all to see - I guess I asked for it really. I can only blame myself.

And of all the people on here, I truly think that I am ONE that James does not care for. So, I tread lightly and try not to be the target for his jokes. I'm not very good at it...I don't think. But really, tonight...for me? I WAS trying to reconnect with you - didn't know you had enough "space"/time...and wanted to reach out somehow. That earlier post to you was my way of relating I guess...and didn't realize James was watching. I should've known...

I was sincerely trying to reach out to you, Merritt. Really. I wasn't trying in ANY way to put James (or anyone else) in a bad light. Was just noticing that you and him had a "discussion" before, and I was trying to relate I guess. I guess I'll have to be more careful now in anything I say, as I never know "who" is watching... (and to think...I was accused earlier of having multiple identities.) I want to have fun too...and laugh and enjoy this and all of your company too. But I feel that I'm being "baughed at" somewhere in NC...and this was a bit of fun at my expense? Perhaps I am wrong. My paranoia gets me into trouble sometimes. Sincerely though, Merritt - all kidding aside, I was hoping that you and I HAD gotten back on track. Maybe I was being too hopeful or naive. I'm new to chat rooms, and don't really get how this whole kidding/being honest toggle works....

 There was some disassuion yesterday about whether Moly could pick an owl up by the scruff of the neck and fly with it back to the nest. That idea was squashed, so to speak, when someone replied owls don't have scruffs of the neck, like say a kitten, and that Moly's beak would snap it into. Oh darn, there I've gone and written KITTEN and OWL in the same sentence with BEAK even. Shhhh. Let's just all be quiet and hope nobody notices. Shhhh.....

 So, just for the sake of conversation: Do you think Max will take his first step/hop out of the box shortly after nightfall when he feels it's time to make his move, or would he hop out as late as it is now? Will he want to have a parent present when he does? Hmm. Inquiring minds want to know.

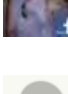

Your thoughts?

 I was thinking about that, and my guess is that it won't be right at nightfall. I think he'll take some time after dark to gather his courage. Moly might even come to encourage him to come out.

I want to thank all of you for your kind words of support the other night - he has been missing 3 weeks but I still have hope. He is a cat's cat - brilliant, beautiful and street smart. I have posters all over town. When I ask if anyone has seen a Siamese they reply, "you mean Bernie?" Bernie Horowitz comes from a Gary Larson Cartoon. He is the THEY in what THEY say! I now am familiar with people who go into the night and feed, vaccinate and fix ferals - wonderul caring people I never would have met.

You mean 9:17? It's only been an hour. Mom and pop have to eat too, you know. They've done this pretty frequently, made a few drop off and then disappear for a while.

Christina, you must be looking at a frozen feed or something. Last one was like James said, a little over an hour ago.

Christina was it the last feed at 9:17 pm PDT? That would make it our time 12:17 am EDT.

I don't know about that one. You'll have to come up with a counterpoint for people who do not want to see them go. 😊

Can you repost the list after the added ones are in it?
Yesterday, 22:26:13 – Flag – Like – Reply

Merritt
I could, but it looks like it's being added to the Molly wiki, so it may not be necessary to repost here.

Saw that...after I posted this question. Thanks again for bringing it back out 😊
I always wondered what happened to that list...b/c I missed most of it when it was actually being created.

Can always count on you 😊
