It is really bizarre. Nothing shows up at all! I tried Google several times last night and today. The site is there, it just doesn't show up when I click on it. Very strange. I will keep trying and let you know if I have any success.

Speculation is that they'll first fly at night when the parents are there to encourage and protect them. But we've seen lots of videos of owlets testing their wings during the day, too! So we don't know!!! Personally, I think they'll take their first steps out and first flight in the dark or near dark of dawn.

Today, 06:38:12 - Flag - Like - Reply

All four are still there. As for flight, they will step out of the box for the first time between 50 and 60 days old (Max is 52 today). After stepping out, they will hop around for a few days (or nights), and then they will make short flapping flights, which will eventually get longer and more graceful. At the age of 80 days, they will fly away for good and find home of their own. M&M will continue to provide for them until they fly away.

Is it just me or does Wesley seem to be very slow at developing. I know that a week ago Max was already standing most of the time, on one foot. He had been doing that already for about 2 weeks, because my grandkids were here and asked about why he did that. I hope he starts standing most of the time very shortly.

Charlene, I know it's just out of concern and that you are a self admitted 'worry wart', but you've been questioning Wesley's health almost every day since the beginning. By now you can plainly see that he's grown huge, is getting plenty to eat every day, and he's healthy. I think you can move on to worrying just about their first flights! 😊 I'm not trying to be mean, just trying to reassure you!

Time for the daily summary of the night's events, to be collected by our friend Latrippi and included in the Molly wiki created by some wonderful volunteers from this chat room. If you would like to add your favorite moment from the night to this summary, please feel free to reply below. The summary is posted at <http://mollyowl.pbworks.com/Timeline>. To catch up on past events, be sure to check this out!

Max kept us captivated throughout the night, because when he stared out of the doorway, he would of ten lift a leg as if he were going to step out! He never did more than put his head out, however, so fledge watch for Max does continue. As for deliveries, treats were again either thrust into the box or handed off beak to beak from the doorway. No incidents out of the ordinary occurred with any of the owlets or McGee and Molly.

Hi Merritt! Thanks for asking about Hap. After getting at least four opinions, I've decided against surgery, because 1) the recovery time was brutal and unrealistic for both her and me; and 2) she's not a great candidate for the surgery because of her age (at least 11 - I adopted her when she was about 4-1/2). So we're trying cortisone and prednisone and a leg brace that I'm about to order online. She's been much livelier since the steroids kicked in. I mainly don't want her to hurt, and to be able to have a decent quality of life....she's my sweetheart.

If you saw mountain goat listed as treat that M or M brought, that in reference to the kidding around that the moderators who post the food deliveries do in the middle of the night. They replace "rat" with silly words sometimes. We can't tell for sure who is male of female yet, so no name changes for now.

Central I'm in Dallas. I will say 1 hour of sleep out of 36 is bad. I have only gone that long one time in my life, while on a work assignment. My body ached by the end of that time! It was actually painful to be up that long. Then, when I finally lay down, my head spun like I'd had too much to drink (which I hadn't; no alcohol at all in fact), my skin was crawling, and my heart was palpating. I was tired and exhausted by the time I lay down, but didn't get any of those sensations until my head hit the pillow. And you're not in for anything like that.

Ohh, Teneal and Merritt! I do hope y'all take care of yourselves. Insomnia can be so hard on the body. I just look like an insomniac in disguise, but I do get in 6 to 8 hours sleep every night.

Kathryn, my insomnia is sporadic. I only have bouts of it occasionally, usually when I'm working on a big project, which, in a way, this has become! I really want to see it through to the end, and I don't want to miss out on too much until then!

I'm usually a terrible insomniac, mainly because of my sporadic schedule. This time it was because I had work to do, no choice. The caffeine and adrenaline haven't quite left my system yet.

Mck, I apologize for being somewhat disgusted with your earlier post, but if you just pop on and make comments like that out of nowhere it is not fair for those who have been on for hours and hours today waiting for a delivery. It just happened to be a slow time when you came on. If you didn't bother going into the "basement" to see that it is really still all about the owls and we are diligent with getting rid of the spammers and smurfs, you would have known better.

OK, with that off my chest, I hope all is well with your owls.

They moved Owlbox 2 camera closer to the box so we can see right in the door for when the owlets start coming out on the porch or perch. It's actually a great view of them, though not so good when Moly & McGee come for deliveries. In addition, the overhead night camera in the box is in the top left corner. It is hard to tell what is happening there, but you can see the owlets eating and moving around inside the box from above.

If anyone wants to announce the time correctly in San Marcos, here's how you say it at this time of year (info courtesy of James Hill): Pacific Daylight Time = PDT = PT Pacific Daylight Time PDT = GMT-7 (USA & Canada) -! --webbot bot="Include" u-include="_private/header-text.htm" tag="BODY" startspan -->

To put it simply, it's daylight savings time now, so instead of Pacific Standard Time (PST), it's actually Pacific Daylight Time (PDT). But that's only if you want to be anal about it. I'm sure everyone understands PST just fine.
