It's the owlets hissing...this noise is the noise they make when something different happens. They did it when they were younger and Moly first left the box...or that is my recollection. Anyone else?

Yes, Lorri. The night that was most memorable was when Moly returned and sat outside on the perch. Neither we nor the owlets could see her and they went ballistic. Shook up many folks here.
Another thing. The mic gain is turned up very high on the inside camera. That is where the sound is coming from. A part of the noise we here is the distortion from the sound maxing out and overdriving the microphone.

C'mon, Max, my man. Set a bold and brave example for your younger siblings. Molly didn't raise a shy ledge-sitter; you were the sharpest pipping hole that I ever knew ... and then, you became a sassy comedian. Then, you started to eat rabbits whole and head first without asking anybody's permission. You are Molly Royalt's FIRST BORN.
C'mon. Be the man of the owl box. We've been through a lot together: we're not going to let a two foot gap frighten us! Step up on the ledge, concentrate, and then jump over to that branch. It's safe. It's Molly's branch ... and McGee's branch.
It's YOUR branch, Max ... and those are your field mice, THOUSANDS and THOUSANDS of them.
It's YOUR freedom, son. Go taste it!

The ambulance arrived and much to everyone's surprise, a beautiful female paramedic wearing an owl costume emerged from the back of the ambulance. Tentatively at first, she poised at the top of the step, then slowly lowered her foot to the pavement.

They want to spread wide and growstrong.

Then it's the promise of whd,
Who says the promise will be there.
Yes, Wind, I will listen
And abandon my fear. Tonight!
Oh! It's the heartbeat of mouse!
Calling to me from the grasses.
Yes, Mouse, I will listen
And abandon my fear. Tonight!
Now the voice of my Mother
Calls out: "My Sweet Maxie, it's time!"
Yes, Mother, I listen
And abandon my fear. Tonight!
The music of moon and stars
Puls me out to the dark night skies.
Yes, Moon! Yes, Stars! Yes, Night!
I will listen and fly. Tonight!
