Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

I've been away for awhile. Are there only two babies in there now? Have the others "flown the coop"?

My husband who fancies himself funny was just joking that Carls should cut the feed and not turn it back on until he sells another 1,000 books. He thought he'd reach that quota in a heartbeat. As I said he only fancies himself funny. This is the same guy who tried to persuade me Austin had been eaten by a snake and had me rush home without stopping for gas so I could see the post about it.

One of my first memories as a child (in the '40s) was sitting in a big old barn in upstate NY while a neighbor did studies of the Barn Owls. He (Dick Fischer) went on to become one of the finest ornithology professors at Cornell and a fine person helping students and birds alike. He was my hero. And model for a life's work in environmental action.

Marilee
I bet Wesley will have to take the training wheels off his bike and go for it!!

Tip
He'll spread his wings and sigh, "Ahhh, finally, a room all to myself!"

Karin
I've heard it said that sometimes they fledge in pairs. I wonder if it's possible that Aust in would "wait" for Wesley? It has always seemed to be like Pat and Austin were more of a pair and Max the grown-up and Wesley the baby. But Pat has been bobbing right behind Max in the doorway quite a bit in recent days. He is beginning to look very interested in leaving the nest.

Marilee
Hi, Everyone! Been away from my computer most of the day. (My MOD has been a source of amusement to hubby; but he tries to hear the story of their day as we go to sleep.) My neighbor has terminal cancer and will most likely leave this world soon. I dreamed last night that he had died, but became a free barn owl. I DO have crazy and creepy dreams; but this one caused me to awaken with hope. This experience has touched us all deeply and that will continue on. I have so much gratitude to the Royals and my fellow Mods.

purdyfarmsBecky, WA
I always think we have some dreams for a reason! Stay strong!

Shelley in Round Lake, IL
So what's your favorite moment you've had watching these cuties? Mine was a few weeks ago when I had my 6 year old here watching with me, and one of the owlets turned his little owl butt to the camera and tooted! My daughter looked at me, not sure if what really happened, actually happened... then we laughed hysterically.

Tina
My favorite was this, early this morning, he was spreading his wings and scooted out of the door, I was 2 inches away from the screen just SURE he was going to take off!!!! What a faker!!!! lol

Sleeping in a huddle. So cute. I'm going to miss these moments when they start to fledge..... 😊

Merla Woody... I had to refresh, so I will answer you here re MerIn. Test results came back yesterday, no organ damage, but low platelets in his blood. Could have a tick borne disease. Also said he may have picked up something from drinking from a stream. I have a stream on my property, but I have a half acre fenced in for Merlin, so he can't get to it. Still a mystery at this point. Will get more results Monday. Thanks again for your concern!

Colleen
I hope he gets better soon!

Kristi Smith
Hey everybody! Checking in for a bit! It's getting to the point where I dread the weekend with all the distraction away from here! Owlets look so content! Haven't done any scrolling so I am assuming everybody is happy and well! 😊

Colleen
So far so good!

Latrippi
Hey, Kristi! We're listening to Fred Astaire. Nice to see you!

James Hill (in ItfortheShilling)

Kristi Smith
As soon as my family members go to bed, I can be all up in this chat! 😊

Kasey
Maybe one these females will come back and use this same box to raise her owlettes. That would be nice.

Deb from MI
Merritt -- just have to ask, where are you from? You really help keep everyone informed 😊

Tina
I know you didn't ask, but I'm from Michigan too! LOL!!! 😊

Deb from MI
Tina, where in Michigan?

Tina
1 minute south of Grand Rapids. You?

Deb from MI

Merritt
Thanks, Deb. I really enjoy being a part of this. I'm in Dallas, TX.

Tina
Yes, it's beautiful! I'm not ready for 80 degrees, but I could live with this all year round!

Mary Pat Hyland
Just ordered pizza... gonna be a long night ;^)

Merritt
Someone said something about making oatmeal cookies tonight. I'm going to fire up the oven and make some cookies, too!

Deb from MI

Do you mean this page is slow to post comments and show new comments! It's probably that there's so much activity tonight in this chat stream. You might need to refresh the page or even quit your web browser and come back in again. In fact, I need to do that! The page just keeps getting longer and slower to load.

I enjoyed Val and Aspen but Glenwood Springs was my favorite. I loved the block long/wide pool that was filled with warm spring waters. They used that all year long and the Hotel Colorado was across the street from it and you could watch the snow falling and the swimmers in the "healing waters" as the Native Americans called it.

I've never been to the springs in Glenwood, but we have some natural hot springs about 20 minutes away that we frequent regularly. Very healing!! and, you sleep like a rock when you get home. In our area, there is also a vapor cave that was/is a sacred place for the Utes.

In the basement of the Hotel Colorado, they had the natural hot springs baths along with massage and the entire experience. The hotel is on the historic register and presidents have stayed there. It is a beautiful old hotel. The pool with that is filled with the hot spring is naturally fed and used open air year around. Amazing.

For all who have seen the video 'Against the Odds', I e-mailed the man who filmed it, Robert Kewarth. I just got a response and here it is! I am sorry, I don't know how else to do this except to use the snipping tool, which I did. I hope you all can read it!

Further down the page I noticed some questions about some eaglets that were reported to have died. This happened in Oklahoma at the Sutton Avian Research Center eagle nest in Oklahoma. There were three eggs, one did not hatch. One eaglet fell through a hole in the nest to the ground and was found dead the next morning. The second eaglet was apparently taken by a predator. Although the link below says 2009, it will take you to the 2010 information page.

 any seen or heard from Sarah? She was a girl from Bamf Canada who was being adopted later this month. She was worried her new parents would not like her if she asked to watch the owls at her new home. I want to know how she is doing...

 Catnap, Sarah was on in the last night or two and made a reference to how she's not Shakespearean or Dickensian. I complimented her on keeping up with the chat! And I did invite her to watch the owls with us and said she would be welcome if she's truly interested in them. Her comments after that were about the owls and were perfectly normal. I was actually very pleased to see that turn around!

 Just got back from my busy afternoon. Spent some time walking dogs at the Humane Society with my daughter, went and did some much needed shopping, then visited with a friend who has cancer and is really struggling with her chemo treatments. I went not to only visit, but to get some ideas from her for a care basket I want to put together at our workplace (we work together). She'll have the spinal tumor removed in about four weeks.

I am sure there are other cancer survivors here, any suggestions are welcome! TIA. 😊

 Hi Kathryn. Sorry to hear about your friend. My mama had cancer, and I remember she got a video tape of Laurel and Hardy routines. She had grown up with them and thought they were funny. They still had the power to make her laugh, even when she was sick as she was. Laughter is wonderfully healing. Maybe you can get her a DVD or CD of comedy that will make her laugh, or at least distract her from her discomfort.

We try and put a smile on their faces, if that is at all possible.  Sorry your friend is going thru this... I would suggest a bit of focus on the physical space and making it a true healing/supportive environment. A few ideas: Add natural scents, color and textures (and natural fabrics) that are pleasing and comforting. Think about what kind of music to have on that will soothe and harmonize the soul. Make sure she can see nature or be out in nature.

 It is fortuitous that the subject of how to comfort a person who has cancer just came up here. I just learned yesterday that my sister's mother in law was told this last week that the cancer she has been fighting for several years is terminal. She has been given six months to live. She lives @ five hours away and her throat cancer makes it hard for her to talk for long by phone. I am better at long, two sided conversations, so it is hard for me to picture how I can converse with her in a supportive manner in this situation. I have put in a call to her. Message taken by machine. I may go up to visit her with my sister which would make one-on-one support easier. One person mentioned letter writing, which sounds like a good idea in this situation. Also want to try to help her do things she would like to do. Suggestions are welcome. Thanks.

 Owls have bird brains. I would not imagine that they experience boredom in the human sense. The existential stimuli of preening, hearing outside sounds, and sporadic eating would likely be enough to preserve their sanity. If there are bird psychologists among us who say that I am wrong, I will of course stand corrected. BTW, Christine, I have so often have that very thought! I think about it as I watch the various female birds on this site brood for endless hours for days and weeks on end, awaiting their hatchlings. It is a marvel of nature.

 The Eurasian Eagle Owl and the Great Horned Owl were used in falconry. Owls are hearing- rather than sight-oriented (owls can only see black and white, and are long-sighted). Owls show intelligence on the same level as that of hawks and falcons.

For all you MODS, just back from I good, comfort food supper. Made a HUGE beef stew today for just the two of us. There's plenty of leftovers for those who haven't had time to fix supper or whose supper time is coming up across the country 😊. If no takers, not a bit will be wasted. It's better the second day (or third) anyway 😊

Ha, ha - I just KNEW that would spark some comments. Mention good food around here and everyone goes "nuts"!! No, I don't deliver; but it's still warm and if you can get here in 1/2 hour, I'll make sure you get home-made hot biscuits to go with it!!!! No, the recipe is not in the cookbook. It's something I've made so often, I just "wing" it - nothing written down - with beef, onions, carrots, potatoes, rutabaga (just to distinguish from the Southern turnip, but, we call it turnip here) and whatever else strikes my fancy. 😊

Do you brown the meat? Add broth? Add spices? It sounds good.
Today, 16:59:30 - Flag - Like - Reply

Lynda C
Yes, I do brown it - makes for a richer broth. I sometimes add a little canned beef broth to the meat while it cooks, but it often makes it's own rich broth without it. Not too many spices other than salt and pepper usually. We like the natural flavors of the meat and veggies. And I usually thicken the broth a little after it is done.

Thanks for posting that. Those eagles will do it just fine (maybe they will slide down to leveler ground 😊 😊 ) and so will Moly's "babes". I'm anxious to see how the red-tailed hawks do of the window ledge in Philadelphia. Not much below them but a sidewalk and traffic.

Just a quick question. Someone posted a day or two ago that some eaglets had died and got some sympathy from this group but I was wondering if that was just a story or if something happened somewhere else. No one posted any link about it at all.

I think that may have been in response to my post, Barb. There was some talk about the effect of the light from the flash camera affecting the owls. In the late 1990's I lived in an area in Western Maine where there was an eagles nest about 1000 ft. from the house. The nest was about 100 ft up at the top big pine tree. After a particularly bad thunderstorm one night the two babies (about 2 weeks from fledging) were found dead on the ground. Because there was no evidence of predators attacking the nest and no other cause determined when necropsies were done, the game wardens and wildlife biologists felt that severe lightning may have frightened them enough to fall.

Maybe Lynda but I remembered it as someone who had a "bad day" story and the eaglets were a part of the tragedy of the day.

Anyway, it doesn't seem to matter because you all have posted that all the eagles we know of are fine so I am happy.
