Other nest camnews---VERY sad. The mama owl at the Cornell site managed to escape, but a snake got into the owl box, and consumed her 4 little chicks. I was so hoping to watch another clutch grow up as successfully as these olivets have. Today, 08:30:29 - Flag - Like - Reply

Good for Carlos! I agree with him! (I'mgetting this in before people start saying we'll never know their genders .... 😇)

Correct me on this if possible. So far it appears to me Max is actually Maxine, a female. Pattison is male with the solid white breast and smaller stature. Austin is another female and the jury is still out on the gender of Wesley? It is easy to change Max to Maxine, Pattison to Patty if needed, but how do you rename Austin

                    I just watched the video of Austin taking off at a fly without hopping around or anything. Remarkable. He jusmped right in. I wish I"d been here to see that. I was awake, I just wasn't monitoring the computer 100% of the time. I love these owls.

                    Weeel, I've been thinkin' (uh-oh, look out!) It seems clear to me that Austin had the benefit of watching his siblings flying and landing on several consecutive nights, and that is what helped him to his fast exit. Max and Pattison did not have the benefit of that feedback, so they had to be the trailblazers. All of their performances have been magnificent, heart-stopping and hugely educational. Not to mention entertaining!

                    At 8:55pm PDT, Austin, the third owlet to hatch, took first place in the first test of fledge school. He surpassed his 2 older siblings who had tentatively stepped out of the owl box for the first time a few days ago. Austin did no stepping out. With one might y LEAP, he catapulted out of the owl box as though shot out of a canon and landed on the platform several feet away. Max and Pat flew much more gracefully around last night and continued to hop and pounce upon the owl box roof top, but Austin's acrobatic act stole the show.

           Karin, I see the same thing in our house with our children. The youngest seems to have very little fear and never wants to sleep, can't stand to miss anything. Very funny to watch sometimes.

    I saw Austin's outside debut and it was the most amazing thing.
     Unlike Max and Pattison, Austin didn't take tentative steps outside from one place to the next, s/he just launched straight out the door into space.
     I have no idea where s/he landed, but pretty soon s/he was back in camera view, safe and sound and then all over the place.

A haiku is a non-rhymed verse poem. There are 5 syllables in the first sentence, 7 in the second and 5 again in the last sentence. Merritt is the blog's haiku expert.

Hi Carol,
        Haiku is a traditional Japanese poetry form. It has three lines, with 5 syllables in the first line 7 in the second, and 5 in the third. Non-rhyming.
        And, I might add, taken in totally silly, non-traidtional directions by this MOD squad.

        Its a poem that doesn't rhyme (necessarily!) It has three lines - the first has to be 5 syllables, the second 7 syllables and the third 5 syllables. A (not very good) example is this!
        three owlets on roof
        what a treat to see tonight
        when will Wesley Fly?

        So we know it was the groud because he went straight down and back up? I am trying to imagine actually seeing him -- was there another camera?
         Yesterday, 23:44:35 - Flag - Like - Reply Austin jumped right out of the door and went down out of camera range. He didn't bother with the perch or flapping his wings or any practice; he just leaped and was down for it seemed like about 5 minutes before he flapped his way back up to the landing and we all breathed a sigh of relief. Max and Pattison were both out, and we watched themlook straight down at the ground while Austin was down out of camera range. It was amazing to see.

                    A nice steady light rain is falling outside my window. With that and the consistent screeching of the owls (which has become a nice soothing background noise as of late)...I'm slowly being lulled to sleep.

                   Well, I've had about as much excitement as I can take for one night, and my cheeks hurt from laughing so hard. There was more wit and humor tonight than in the last few days combined. Some of the people here were utterly brilliant with their quick witted and funny comments. (Wesley with an ikea catalog was one of my favorites.) Tonight has been one of utter joy. I look forward to seeing all you good peeps again tomorrow.

                    Thanks everyone for that 46 min. time stamp...that so helped me. Took me right to it 😃 What a great video that was. I like how that other two are just like "Well, now that's ONE way to do it....." Maybe a 7 for technical execution, but gets a 10 for degree of difficulty for sure! I never did see how Austin gets back up as it keeps freezing up on me, but I love how I kept seeing his/her head bobbing up into frame every now and again…bl 😃

                          I will have to watch again...and hopefully will get through more than a couple of minutes before it freezes. I'll have to do it with just THAT window open,
