So, here's a thought
If Carlos put a monitor of the Owl Cam in the box, would the owlies watch it?
Today, 22:54:00 - Flag - Like - Reply

Beth Vanzo
But then they'd never learn to fly! They'd sit in the box, day and night, watching the owlets. Waiting excitedly for food deliveries, but never going anywhere. Hoping someone will poke their head out and have a little flight, but never doing it themselves. Then, we would all become very depressed. The owl cam in the box would have to go!

My students and I have been watching the owls at school from time to time. We've been studying Native American mythology and beliefs. Their assignment today was to write a myth based on the themes we discussed. One of my most talented students asked to write on "Why the barn has a heart-shaped face." Can't wait until Monday when I can read it!

Joan, I'm assuming your students understand that there is nothing mythical about the "heart-shaped" face of the barn-owl, and that the fact that it resembles a heart is only because humans happen to equate that shape with a heart. Please reassure me. The barn-owl face is one of the most wonderful phenomena in all of nature, being a veritable satellite dish which focuses sight and sound waves to degrees which allow the owls to track prey with precision unknown elsewhere in the animal kingdom.

Yep. We are working under the premise that myths are the "beliefs of people or culture at a certain time, used to explain the unexplainable or provide continuity to the group." Science doesn't undermine this premise. Here in central Wisconsin, we are pretty aware and sensitive to the natural world and the contributions of people who have been here a bit longer than we have.

They think they are something out and about. I'm stuck in this box and scared to come out. Being so little isn't a curse.

They think they are smart
but I get fed first.
I have plenty of space
since there isn't a crowd.
I'm not getting stepped on for crying out loud.
The view from the doorway
well, it isn't that bad.
And I am the baby
some favor me a tad.
I'll come out soon
not to worry.
But I like this box
so I'm in no hurry.

I don't think Wesley is ready yet. Austin and Wesley are 3 days apart so probably they will be 2 or 3 days apart in their fledging to, don't u think? He looked pretty anxious last nite though and i thought he might.

I hesitate to tell all of you this, but I could use a little sympathy.... I was entering the freeway this morning and right at the end of the on ramp there was a dead barn owl on the side of the ramp. It must have been hit last night as it flew to the grass strip to pick up a snack. I felt so bad and asked my husband if we could stop and pick it up and give it a proper burial. I felt so sad. What beautiful wingsthe colors are so pretty and I never would have recognized it as a barn owl if I hadn't been part of this site. Oh, please Lord, don't let anything like this happen to our little San Marcos kids! 😊

NOOOO JP! how sad! my mom was coming home one day and was crossing a bridge over a river and a bald eagle swooped down right in front of her in traffic to get some roadkill. mom was still stunned when she got home. It made it out ok but she was so upset. I can't imagine how sad we would be to know something happened to one of OUR babies.

In an unrelated story, I drove thru a neighborhood today and saw two turkey vultures and a bald eagle around a carcass almost dead, and all that was left was mostly the spine. I was wondering if one was going to swallow the remnants like an owl does. I have witnessed turkey vultures in Texas all my life, and these were particularly domesticated, refusing to leave the street when I approached with the truck, so I had to drive around them.

Max: Just flying around!
Austin: Yeah, having fun with our new wings
Pattiso: Yeah, it's fun, come out, you should try it!
Wesley: OK, I'll come out after mommy brings some rats...
 So...Molly brings rats and flings them into the box. Max flies back into the box....
Max: He ate all the rats, hey Wesley!

 Things changed so suddenly when Wesley swallowed the mouse whole. When Wesley steps out to fledge, could Molly and McGee just rebcate them for the hunting lessons and this could end suddenly, or do they tend to keep returning to the placed they hatched while they are getting hunting lessons?

JL, I owe you an apology. I credited Jame Hill with coming up with the word "smurf" taking at face value the claim he had made below, but in fact, it was you who came up with that word according to the records that I kept from that day. Please see below for copies of the discussion several of us had about smurf that night.

Anyone wanting to know the history of how "smurfs" came about, please see the copies of that discussion below, and please note the number of participants in that thread.

Wes: I don't know.
Austin: I hear that guy with the bright flash light isn't home.
Pat: Good! Took minutes for those spots in my eyes to go away.
Wes: In that case, I might try it.

I was thinking abng those same lines too.... doesn't mother nature have a funny way of ensuring that everyone gets what they need? Wesley is 4 days younger which means he will get dbs on the freshest meat and most one-on-one time with Mom when she visits. In the end... they all become the same size!

And for us, stat's will stream where they are!
Today, the minutes go like hours
The hours go so slowly
And still the sky is bright....
Grow bright

Where's the big screen TV for the owls to watch highlights of their life while Streisand sings in the background...
"Memories,
Light the corners of my mind
Misty water-colored memories
Of the way we were
Scattered pictures,
Of the smiles we left behind
Smiles we gave to one another
For the way we were
Can it be that it was all so simple then?
Or has time re-written every line?
If we had the chance to do it all again
Tell me, would we? Could we?
Memories, may be beautiful and yet
What's too painful to remember
We simply choose to forget
So it's the laughter
We will remember
Whenever we remember...
The way we were...
The way we were..."

Last night, hubby was hard asleep and I was sitting up in bed with the computer on, watching the owlets, as usual. When Austin just threw himself out of the box straight to the ledge, I said (rather loudly) "Oh, my God!"
Hubby, thankfully, was not awakened by my outburst. A few seconds later, I hear him say: "I'mnot really God".

Friends, since there has been so much mention of the word "smurff" tonight, and since I have such a reputation, for better or worse, for dealing with them, please let me tell you about the kind of smurfs I was after:
Spammers are very obvious, and when James Hill came up with the word "smurf," I thought it would be used in reference to posters who try to blend in with the rest of us but who are here only to waste our time or make incendiary comments designed to get a reaction. Someone came up with a picture of blue pellets that could post as a warning beneath the comments or questions of those kinds of smurfs, and then later James came up with an animated blue waving flag.

I refreshed using these smurf signs as a means of identifying and stopping the posters who were not spamming but who were here to waste everyone's time in more insidious ways. The ones I went after asked fairly normal questions, questions that several people would take the time and effort to answer. The next day, they would come back and ask the same question again, or even just a few minutes later! I could not sit by and let such good people be taken advantage of like that. I was trying to protect people from being a victim of outright fraud. I no longer amon smurf patrol, but just want you to know why I ever was.

Hi Connie. I saw all of that. Those are what I would call spammers, not smurfs, but I know a lot of people use the word "smurf" to describe the kind of posts you were dealing with today.

Smurf's usually pretend to be something they are not and they agitate, that is my description of them, you did one heck of a job unmasking them and keeping themat bay. My hat goes off to you and all the others who braved the storm 😊

One of the things that groups normally develop is a language and humor of their own. It helps give the group a sense of identity and fun. For us, use of the smurf term is part of that. It might not be the strictest sense of the term but it is a valid and commonly used term in internet groups. One term is easier and more enjoyable to use than several, such as splitting it up and using smurfs, trolls, etc. Smurf works!

And the best thing to do in case of Smurf's, is flag them. When enough people click flag, their post will dissappear.

Apparently that particular post disappears, but not the "smurf" or "spammer" - is that correct. Can Sportsman's Paradise permanently band someone ??? Probably not because they could still come back with a different name ??? I honestly don't know the answers.

It's pretty easy for them to just log on with a different name but usually being booted off the site will keep them off for a while. I'm sure this isn't their only entertainment. It probably gets boring pretty fast, especially if they are ignored.

More likely just software hiccups. I think it would be a challenge for someone to interfere with the avatars like that. Stealing an avatar and impersonating someone would be easier, I think, except then the 'details' history log would give them away.

This probably doesn't make sense, but I've had the same problem at times. When I get the "no more than 1000 characters" I highlight and "copy" the best portion of my post - then delete what is highlighted and post just the first part. Then, "Reply" to yourself under your first post and "paste" the portion you had copied.

Smurf is the name we gave the troublemakers who come in once in a while to flood the chat with senseless posts. I suggested we use the word Smurf instead of troll. The reason I suggested Smurf was because 1) it was friendly sounding, and 2) because it has a history of being used in computer jargon - http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Smurf_attack

If you folks want to see something funny watch the first Bald Eagle cam on San Catalina Island. These eaglets try out their wings and end up going straight up and down like they are on a pogo stick. Not all graceful like our owlsfirst tries, but cute just the same.

And Ode to Our Owls: Part 2 of 3

They'll leave the hollow of the tree, venture out towards Molly's box; and amid the next commotion, well, it's not a paradox...
Though the cameras won't be rolling in the hollow of that tree, Maxine will lay an egg, wait - maybe two, or even three!
Knowing better, still I'd like to think that now and then, Patti, Wes and Austin do a fly-by, greet their friend 😊
"Our" owls have fledged with no intent to cause us any strife; they're just participating in that cycle we call "life."

An Ode to Our Owls: Part 1 of 2 of 3

Somewhere in the forest in the hollow of a tree, there's another nesting owl - maybe two, or even three!
And like their human counterparts, they practice to astound, nocturnal, though, they'd rather wait for the house lights to go down.
Cautiously they step into their stage - the dark, black night; flex and stretch, dart out and back: They're practicing for flight.
They'll learn to conquer to be fed, grow strong, they must survive; for latch, deep within them, waits another, basic drive:

Thanks for posting that site again. It is wonderful. I think it also shows that most birds instinctively know where to find food. That hummingbird instinctively knew that it was a nectar eater and not a seed eater. BTW - hummer also eat tiny, flying insects, too. I'm still not certain whether owls know how to find food by instinct or teaching 😊

From what I can tell.... We are watching a "LIVE" feed of a camera pointed at Carlos' laptop. For whatever reason, his laptop has discontinued monitoring the OWL BOX CAM and is perhaps showing us his screen saver or desktop photo. For night-time viewing Carlos always uses a camera feed to by pointing the LIVE CAM at his laptop... sometimes we can see him tilt the screen, or turn on a lamp in the livingroom. If you look carefully, you'll notice the camera isn't pointing at the laptop's monitor at a 90 degree angle - that's why the reunion picture seems distorted. The audio comes to us directly from the owl box - that's why we can hear it LIVE. In the past, I have noticed the laptop's brand name along the bottom. Whatever the case.... he's been providing us with fun, decent and memorable LIVE videos.

 Well, I don't know that they get that. On the main site there is a place to click to RSVP for various online events (interviews, narrations) as well as the picnic and the number there listed is the same number that was listed for all the live narrations, etc. I think people clicked it thinking they could "listen in" to the picnic. There is no way to un-RSVP once you have. So, I don't think that is a reliable figure.

It appears that Carlos is in San Francisco and he was showing the view using his iPhone. Something went wrong and we are stuck with that view. Apparently if you have an iPad or an iPhone, you can see the owlbox. But on a regular computer, this is what you get. See comment by Owlbominable below.

EMERGENCY BROADCAST NETWORK ANNOUNCEMENT:
You can see the owbox ONLY if you have an iPhone or Ipad...

If you are on your computers you will see a skyline of San Francisco and only the sound in the owbox. There is no information yet if the video feed will be available to the rest of us at this time.

This concludes the Emergency Broadcast Network announcement.

Do you think there are any bird nests on any of those buildings?

If Carlos set up this camera originally for family, don't you think they are watching now? Maybe, hopefully one of them will call him and tell him about the camera back home!!!

Rats (mice, gophers & rabbits 😞) - still no owl box. I know, technical difficulties and we have no control. Just hope we don't miss Wesley's debut because of it.

Thanks for all of your thoughts, prayers replies regarding my son-in-law's accident. I don't know why I "dumped" that on you. Feeling a little "down" I guess. Had just talked with my daughter and she was feeling a little "down". I think she is finally letting her own fears and stresses out a little. She really "stepped up to the plate" after the accident - with him every day at the hospital, daily reports to family, being his "advocate" with doctors, etc. and has continued through the re-arranging her whole house and becoming his main caregiver. All that and continuing a full-time work from hospital and home - mostly via her computer set up with her company.

Please don't feel like that!! We are all friends here! Besides, that's what good people do for each other! And we are all good people here!

That's a huge burden on her, Lynda, and I know you're feeling that. Just let her 'dump' on you whenever she needs to, and don't let her know that it gets you down. Everybody needs to unload, as you mentioned above. And it does help, doesn't it?

I forgot to say thanks to all those whose thoughts and prayers were with us in Waco, Tx last night....the thunder storm was pretty intense....had a few stikes of lightning close to our home...but, everyone is fine and no real damage to our trees either. Beautiful weather today 😊
Maybe I'll look at the blog page and enjoy pictures and videos to get my owl fix for now...I really, really miss those little faces!!

If you read the blue box it says that the Royals are on a little vacation...and only the outside cam will be on the next two days so maybe something happened with the cam and Carlos is gone so we might just be out of luck until they return...
