Just back in. Said good morning earlier and had my coffee and then important things (like paying the internet bill) took over. Sorry I missed Carlos but I see in the blue box he heard & saw Molly call her young out to the field. Hunting lessons have begun.

I have a couple boys who wonder when their mother will announce they can have hunting lessons 🙂 They'll be jealous of these owls.

Tip for hummingbird lovers: I just got back from the bcal nursery--there's a type of salvia I get every year, which the hummers really love. It's called "Black and Blue" and it is nearly mid-night blue It's their favorite palnt in our yard.  $\textcircled{egin{array}{c} egin{array}{c} egin{array}{$

I can understand Max doing that for Wesley. Seems to me the two of them have had a close relationship for quite a while. Today, 07:30:19 - Flag - Like - Reply

Owlbominable Snowman (a.k.a. JH)

Just to clarify a few points for those who didn't see it. We don't think any of the owlets offered Wesley anything. The owlet which carried the gopher into the box did not leave the box, despite dropping the prey once inside. It was clear that Wesley was still giving his usual nightly call after several minutes, apparently as the other owl ate their catch/delivery. Wesley then was brought other food by the parents. I doubt any of the owlets are "thinking" of their siblings while bringing food into the box. That is just where they are most comfortable eating, themselves.

I have seen Max feed Wesley. It was one of the first days that Molly did not return to the box for the day, and Wesley was still too small to hold down and rip open one of the rodents in the pantry. He was trying, but he just could not do it. Everyone was worried about Wesley getting enough food. Then, a little while later, I saw Max snacking on a rat, and he/she reached over to feed Wesley. Today, 07:43:25 - Flag - Like - Reply

Owlosaurus

I saw that too Judith but it was just a bite or two. I don't think it shows a pattern of caregiving. Last night I did not see that the rodent was given to Wesley. Today, 07:46:45 - Flag - Like - Reply

Deanna Cambron

I too definately watched Max feed Wesley in the past. He ripped off meat and fed Wesley over and over. I've even seen an older owlet start to eat a rodent and immediately stop and let Wesley eat when he/she noticed Wesley wanted it . They DO care for each other. Today, 07:57:56 - Flag - Like - Reply

Owlosaurus

Are we sure that was Max? Maxie has developed better flying skills than that in the past week and shouldn't have had that much trouble getting down to the perch, even with a rodent in her beak. It may have been her but I didn't think it was.

I'll leave you for most of the day with these parting words - After a discussion with some of you foks last night about the "stripe" down the owlet's faces, the separation of the feathers that meet at that point, etc. my husband, with his rational mind and good common sense said - "It's no different than you parting your hair. If posts are slow to come through for you and your computer keeps locking up, be sure to keep the pointer of your mouse away from the whole white chat area. Look for the word "Live" by the blue "Admin" in the upper right corner of the chat. If the word "paused" appears instead of "Live," your pointer is in the chat area and the posts are backing up. If too many back up at one time, your computer freezes. Keep your pointer away from the chat stream at all times! It's easy to forget to do that after you make a post. Post, and then move you mouse out of the way!

Good morning, Christine. By "whooshing sound" do you mean that sound like someone is sipping through a straw? If so, that's the nightly communication call that the owlets make to Molly and McGee. When all 4 were in the box, the owlets would take turns being the designated caller. Last night we also saw the outside owlets would make the call as well. #### What is a haiku?? Today, 05:41:50 - Flag - Like - Reply

Merritt

A haiku is a non rhyming poem with 3 lines of 17 syllables: 5 syllables in the first line, 7 in the second, 5 in the third. Those are the only technical rules. Traditionally, a haiku is about something in nature, and the three lines together express a complete thought. You can use any punctuation appropriate throughout, and any kind of word, so long as it fits the syllabication. Try it; you'll like it! 5-7-5

Max, Pattison, and Austin had a grand old time cavorting around outside the box last night, but Wesley refused to come out and play. Molly and McGee brought treats to the box and made deliveries to the owlets on the outside as well. The owlets are really too young to know how to hunt yet. There parents are feeding them out of camera range but it would make sense that Max would bring it back to where he is used to eating. We have a while before we see the benefits of their hunting if we even do. They may move on before they are hunting.
