Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here

Remember all the concern about the black spot on one of the owls in the doorway last night? I still think that was the incubation patch which female barn owls have where there are fewer feathers and more blood vessels in that area. The infrared camera picks up heat. Several owl web sites have this statement: To help with incubation, female owls have a sparsely feathered brood patch on their bellies that has a higher percentage of blood vessels than other parts of the skin. Blood flow through these vessels creates a good source of heat for the eggs.

So...my 14 year old seems to have some resentment about me spending so much time with the owls..last night he was in the room when they were all having there fly about moment. One here...one there...who's one first kind of thing. I was laughing at them and at all the comments being written. He read them with me and was laughing out loud right along with me!!! Think that problem is solved!!!

Postings and discussions below for ideas on another web cam to watch or where to go after the owls have gone. As for Sportsman's Paradise sites, there is currently the Peregrine Falcons (I think another few weeks to go before they fledge), the Red Tailed Hawk site and the Eagle site (another couple of weeks to go for Nest 1 and more than that for Lurry nest 2). The problem with a songbird site (hummingbirds, etc.) is that they are usually gone in such a very short time. I do like the Sportsman's chat room set-up and their efforts to keep the chat rooms a clean, fun place to be.

Good morning everyone. Just signing on. Listened to Carlos as I was waking up.
He sounded pretty excited, and a little like he wished he had a dozen more cameras available. 😊
I'll be in the basement capturing a PDF. The one from 11pm PDT last night is posted to the files section already, but it's not on the main Chat PDF page. It's almost 50mb and needs to be reduced. Some may have difficulty opening it as is.
Below are the images I posted last night.
I missed Wesley's launch by a fraction of a second.
I'll try to update that one from the recording later.

Finally, anyone who missed Wesley's first steps outside the box, yesterday at 5am, Carlos has replaced the three 15 second clips with a new 1 minute recording of it on his Youtube Channel - <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uJIRc0UdG64>. The old links no longer work.

The fact that a man of Carlos's years can climb a ladder this tall indicates that he is a man of great courage or self-confidence. I hurt my hip a few years back and then noticed that climbing ladders and walking rooftops had become somewhat problematic for me. I rarely climb higher than I am willing to fall, unless I really need to. I salute Carlos for his daring bravado.

Today, 07:20:28 – Flag – Like – Reply

Wesley spent a good part of last night outside with his siblings. While they flew mostly out of camera range, Wes often sat in plain view on the ledge and called into the night. Max, Pattison, and Austin had emerged from the box for their usual forays out into the night just as the cobalt blues of dusk faded into black. After a few minutes, Wesley decided to join them. He approached the door, tested the air outside with a tab, then gathered up his courage and bounded from the doorway to the platform where he flapped his wings in triumph. He and the others were in and out of the box after that, and all returned safely home before the break of dawn.

From an old book I have that was published in 1884
Friends in Feathers and Fur, ans other neighbors, for young folks. by James Johonnot

The Owl

An owl sat in a hollow tree,
And cried the whole day through:
"I can not see: the sun blinds me.
Ah, what am I to do?"

When night was dark, the owl looked out,
And thought he'd leave his house:
For "light" said he, "has come to me--
I'll go and catch a mouse."

The mouse he caught, and then he cried
"What next am I to do?
The woods shall ring, I'll sit and sing,
Too-whit, too-whit, too-whooh!"

Good Morning. Well after getting only six hours of sleep, my 7 am meeting only lasted 10 minutes because the person we needed on the call was a no-show. But I have my coffee and I don't have another meeting until 9 am, so I'll just sit in my easy chair watching owls sleep until I have to get my daughter up at 8 to go to school 😊

Mornin' everyone! I'm glad to see the owlets had a successful night and are back in for rest today. I didn't sleep well last night thinking about the group trying to sabotage Carlos and his self-less efforts to share this experience with innocent people like myself. (If you missed it you can check out the PDF files on Molly's Wiki.) Unfortunately, this experience will be over all too soon and I hope it doesn't end on a negative note. Just MY thoughts for the day now, on with the "sleepy" show! 😊

Dear Friends, just wanted to let you know I'm going out of town tomorrow and won't be back in the chat room with you until Sunday. I have decided not to take my laptop with me since the whole point of my trip is to be with a lot of my friends from college! It's the annual Reunions weekend at Princeton University, and there's no way I can party and visit with them and watch the owls, too. I have thought about it, but know that I am now way too old to get away with trying to do both! I wouldn't survive the weekend if I did.

I'll be in and out for the rest of the day today, but wanted to let my "morning" chat friends know that I'll be gone tomorrow and on Friday in case you start to miss me.

ERRR Just went back on the chat line to where I signed off last night around 10:30. wanted to read all the great things I missed and then my computer crashed. Is there a way to go back without all the scrolling? I could not type a word in edgewise last night because the chat was so hot!

To get caught up on chats recorded from this site, go to <http://mollyowlpbworks.com/Chat-StreamPDFs> at Molly (the Owls) wiki
I don't know if there is one from last night on there yet, but you can take a look at the bottom of the list to see what the most recent saved is.

One of the best things he said (for our owlets, not us) that 3 are doing abt of flying now, and Wesley did a lot of Owrobs on the landing pad, and the camera (thus the current camera angle, which carlos will correct later when they are asleep). All owls appearing happy and healthy, and most hunting...

Hi Deb. No, it never was determined for sure, but look for how he holds his foot up today during the light. That dark spot could be the talons of his upraised foot when he stands on one leg.

Thanks. It looked kind of high for talons, and my concern was an injury from that first flight. Maybe we can see for sure today.

Not sure if he'll read this, but...

Thank You Carbs for making the Owl Box possible for us all to watch. It has become part of the daily routine for countless thousands of people around the world. Through your diligence and efforts, we have been privileged to take a front row seat to one of nature's greatest accomplishments. We have been educated about these raptors through our ability to take a front row seat to their development and mannerisms. None of this would be possible without your gracious generosity in making these last months available for our entertainment, interests and pleasures. Kudos to you and your wife... who I am sure by now has tolerated your screwy hobby just about enough!!! LOL

Their prey only comes out at night, so that's when they hunt. And roosting during the day keeps them relatively safe from day predators.

Good night, owl people. I wish for Wesley that the bunny who eats the flowers Donna planted at the foot of the owlbox gets insomnia tonight and hops out for a little midnight snack...and becomes one.
But that's only cuz I love Wesley. I never eat bunny myself, out of principle. He just (if that's Wesley, doesn't look fuzzy enough to me, tho), whoever he is, seems so hungry... 😊

Is this I have MOD because...I keep seeing references to barn owls pop up all the time...I started reading a Hesse novel and at some point in the "girl meets boy" scene, the girl arranges another romantic rendezvous with the boy and asks him "can you screech like a barn owl?"

Same here - books, magazine articles, pictures - everything is about Owls!! Last night one of my facebook friends posted a load of photos of Owls from an outing he and his family went on over the weekend - and a very close relative who I haven't seen or spoken to for ages has been on facebook for about a year without a profile picture - I randomly looked on her page the other day to find she now has one of her holding a huge Owl!

When this website started, or rather, when I was first introduced to it, I realized that my friend Jill and I had bought these wonderful "fake stuffed" owlets (Barn owls, although I didn't realize at the time) at a gift store the previous year and both had placed the fuzzy adorable owlet replicas on top of our Christmas trees, in different states (me in California, Jill in New Mexico); then I noticed that the switch plate cover in my bathroom, which had been a gift from said friend Jill, was also...a barn owl. THEN...I realized that an incredible pen-and-ink drawing my talented son gave me for my birthday last year had as its main subject a heartbreaking hgly beautiful male barn owl with tears coming out of his eye....it's been quite a trip, this. 😊

Looks and sounds like Wesley, 'cause he usually spends all night crying for food.
Last year we had a red-tail hawk spend an entire day sitting on a tree branch way up high across the street. He spent the entire day screeching just like this, only more ear-piercing and high pitched. He was sitting next to his mommy who refused to go and hunt for him/her, 'cause she wanted it to learn to hunt. But it was incredibly noisy! I Really, how do you tell hawks to be quiet!

Sounds like a lot of adult children, who refuse to move out of parents homes and become independent. They stay perpetual children way into their adulthood. Amazing how many refuse to leave the family nest, because life is often easier and not just because they can't find jobs and means to make a living.

digestive biscuit = digestive Nbs: These British crackers are similar to American graham crackers, only they're more crumbly and less sweet. They're often crushed into crumbs and used to make pie crusts. Substitutes: graham cracker OR wheat meal biscuit (in Australia)

I'm glad they found those babies...can they be reunited with mom? Or wait - I think you said they were orphaned and she didn't come back...nevermind that question then - silly me. What age are they released at?

Had to look it up - Most barn owls have a relatively short life span. Many only survive one breeding season and the mortality rate may be as high as 75% in the first year of life. In one study, the mean age at death for 572 banded birds was 20.9 months. However, the longest recorded lifespan of a wild barn owl is 34 years.

Since so many owls die young the median will not be much better than the mean for giving information about the owls. This is one case when I would like to see the distribution of age at death plotted on a graph.

IS THAT TRUE????? Barn owls only have a life expectancy of 2 years??? For all they go through, I would think it would be longer.
Yesterday, 23:09:47 - Flag - Like - Reply

In captivity, they can live up to 20 or more years. There is a REALLY HIGH death rate the first year. I figured that if they only lived 10 years, 8 out of 9 owlets die the first year to hit the 2 year life expectancy (you see the same thing in human life expectancy in the "olden days" when 1/2 the babies died).

Life expectancy is an average of ages at death. It does not mean all owls keelover after 2 years (just as some of the old Romans lived to be 70 or 80).

I think that 2 year average factors in environmental influences like getting hit by cars, owlets not making it to adulthood, etc. So, an adult owl could in fact live longer...yes?

Melanie... sorry, didn't see the post. Anyway, I volunteer at a Wildlife center in California. My babies, all 5 of them, were orphaned. Mom had them under a house. The owners were not aware that she had babies. They were able to get her out and then they sealed up the hole. A day later they heard the babies and unsealed the hole hoping Mom would come back but she didn't... 😊, so I was asked to home care for them until they are weaned. They are now about 8 weeks old and eating solid food but still on bottles. I would love to post pictures if you will tell me how. They are so darn cute!!!

Hi, yes, that is me. It is a Chinook Salmon, 39 inches long, around 35 pounds (our scale didn't go that high), and was caught in the Siletz River about 8 miles upstream from the Pacific Ocean in Oregon. Yes, we ate, and ate and ate it. We smoked about half of it, then froze large chunks of the other half to bake/grill. Only one chunk left to cook, real soon. We caught it late October last year. 😊 (How many times have I told THAT story?)

I've been trying to log off by midnight. Hal! It's easier to turn off the computer when I don't get involved in the chat. 😊

I'm heading out too. It was all too much for me to keep up with tonight. Good night all. Tomorrow evening should be calmer at my house, though who knows about at the owlbox.

Absolutely. I kept telling my husband there is one little thing somewhere- I just can't figure it out. I think my virus protection may interfere abt. It's Norton 360. Not sure, but maybe that has something to do with it. I'm just tickled pink here in this quiet house of mine.

Ooops, James I did it again - went to reply to you and deleted everything -. Kathryn posted detail from an earlier poster. Other foul remarks by the same poster were made after that, but aren't of the chat any more. Who is responsible for reporting such foul, abusive language to Sportsman's Paradise?

We all are. It's pretty much up to us all to use the flag feature. In a case like this it's been requested to email HF. It send him a email with a copy of her chat history. He can pull what he needs from the logs with the time-stamp info.

Anyone can. Go to the "Contact" link at the top of the page and you will find an email address.
Regina - There are home-schooled children on here even late at night. Please keep the language G-rated.

Wow, truly, I should let this drop right here, but my name is spelled Annemarie and how did I get involved??
I was only being snarky about the book but not rude and it was way, way, way after you dropped the "F" bomb and I have no idea why you did because didn't even know who you were until Kathryn said something. Otherwise, I have said nothing to you...??? You must have me mixed up with someone else. 😊 Just sign me, Truly Confused MOD
