I've told some of you that I use this site at the place I work to encourage patients with spinal cord injuries, strokes, head traumas, etc. Today, I had a young man (17 yrs. old) take his first steps after suffering a spinal cord injury due to spinal cancer. He was thrilled, as were his parents and all of the therapists. He boked at me and said, "If the owls can branch, so can I". I wish Carlos and Dorna could read this site and know that these little owls have been the best therapists anyone could have!

There was alot of gloom and doom from them maybe they are upset because everything has gone so well and it is a beautiful experience that we keep seeing 😊 😊 😊 😊

Hi there! My internet is acting weird. I was having 5th grade graduation practice today (choir). One little girl kept standing on one foot. I was trying to play the piano and listen to their phrasing, notes, etc. Well, I started laughing. I had to stop. The kids got upset. Why did you stop? Because you aren't an owl! Now stand on both feet! The puzzled looks I got! Then I was laughing more! I know they're thinking, that crazy music teacher! 😊

Hi everyone. I am back for a while. Thanks lucky, Owb, Merritt, Marla, and Natalie, and all for your concern. Just read down below to see what was going on. X-rays showed nothing, so we go for an ultrasound tomorrow. I am trying to stay positive, but it is really hard today. At least he is eating a little better.

Dear Becky,
I've been going through dog-health issues lately too and I believe you were among the kind, kind folks on this site who offered their support and encouragement. May your animal companion be blessed by all of this great energy! My dog Hap is waking a lot better, without surgery, at least for now...and that's been an enormous relief. I hope Merlin's appetite continues to improve and that the ultrasound shows nothing scary. Thinking of you both.... sending white light and love. 😊

I haven't posted much. But I have enjoyed and have felt all our enthusiasm. I've always felt that it's a blessing for us see and to be a part of the "natural" world. These creatures live their lives, survive, have offspring, and do such tasks by instinct. We are so blessed to see their lives and know so well the feelings that we have with our own children. The love, fears, daily chores. The job of maturity is to pass on to our young the ability to livngly do what our parents did for us, so that they can nurture their own young. Carbs and Donna are so wonderful to expand so much $$ and heart so that all of us strangers have watched and held our breath as eggs hatched, loving care was given and feedings took place. Having tangible items from this experience (e-book, cookbook, Vacca's cartoons), and Carlos' live interactions with young school kids will always make me smile.

Sherry, it's a barn owl activist group created by the author of that book. You know, the book. The members over there are organizing efforts to have Carbs slapped on the wrist for various things they perceive as endangering the owl. Reading the entries, I've concluded they are the WART ELITES. Lots of Chicken Littles over there and many are up in arms over the way things have progressed. Seems rational thought is not required to join, and maybe it's against the group rules, who knows. Here is the link but, you have to sign up to read. <http://pets.groups.yahoo.com/group/BarnOwlAlarm/>

Heather, please go read that group if you want to discuss being petty. But, as you say, we are each entitled to our opinion, and I have stated mine.

Oddy though, I don't feel the need to hide behind a semi-closed forum to state my opinion. Unlike some activists. 😊

And I am not the one trying to publish someone's private phone number and address to a public forum on the internet.

James the really irritating thing is that she keeps deleting and changing her blog as well as deleting and people change their replies, there is even someone who tells people, you can delete your reply by the trashcan. Then sensible replies are deleted, it is a ever evolving blog filled with ... well i will not go into it, go no further.

In my opinion, she has discredit herself as a serious academic scientist in my eyes along with her followers, they remind me of corbies, it has been a sad thing to see. Personally i had to take a shower after reading it all last night.

This is just my opinion, now lets ENJOY this incredible owl family that Carlos and Donna have been so generous in allowing us to come into their home and yard, may their lives continue to be as enriched as they have enriched others.

The only deleted posts are ones deleted by the person who posted them. Many people have posted and then thought better of what they had said.
One person wrote and then deleted five posts in a row. Stacey O'Brien has stated that she does not censor her readers, that the only posts she deletes are obscene ones. One person asked how to delete what she had posted and another reader told her what to do and that's what you saw.

Heather i beg to disagree, i have saved copies of the blog when i noticed it kept changing. I am just stating facts here and you can form your own

You are welcome to your opinion, but you're wrong about this. Last night one person with, I'm guessing, the "right" opinion, according to you, posted five times in a row and then wanted to know how to delete them. She stated that this was what she wanted to do and then, after learning how, did it.
Another reader had posted and then couldn't figure out how to delete it, so she ASKED Stacey to do it for her. When it says that a post was removed by the author, it's talking about the person who wrote the post, not Stacey.

Actually Heather there were quiet a few, on several different original posts along with the people who follow her bbg. LOTS of deleting going on, period and i do not understand what a "right" post is, unless you mean someone, just posting facts not personal opinions, some stating unfairness of people trying to harass people? Personally i think getting someone's personal address and email and sharing it with a group of people on the internet, (which is open to all to see) who are 'agitators' is a very dangerous thing to do. Period. I would not do that to my worst enemy.

Hi, James. I deleted the post, because it was going in a direction I did not intend, and I could not stay with the blogging. It also seemed to me that there were at least two visitors, possibly from O'Brien's group, who joined the thread. I just thought the topic was becoming divisive among our friends here, and generally counterproductive. I was in fact pretty mortified to see that barn owl pressed in O'Brien's arms. Regardless of the circumstances, it is the wrong signal to be sending to a world she is seeking to sensitize to the need to protect wild raptors.

Crisis averted! I begged on to check in with you about 90 minutes ago and as soon as i did our power went out! I immediately called the power comp. to report and outage and they said i was the first call but that they would check into it. Turns out it was a wide outage area and they have just now gotten it fixed!

Yippeee!!! I thought I was going to have to spend the evening at Star Bucks to use their WiFi but I was starting to panic because while I can get our garage door open manually, I don't know how to open the gate across the driveway!!! Guess I better learn how to do that if I ever have to get away in a real emergency, which, if you ask me, this almost was!

Hi Rhonda, I'm sorry to hear about your arthritis. It's bad enough to be so tired from staying up all night with the owls, but to have your medication wipe Hi So Wesley finally did it! I have been checking the wiki and Moly's blog during the day and got caught up on Wesley's outing and the newest photos Carlos took last night. My alarm clock goes off at 5:15 am PDT, so I could almost have run to my computer and caught Wesley on the perch! However, it is highly unlikely I would have done that even if I had known. Been very busy all day so no time to come here before now. I have to go take care of some family things but will be back hopefully to see them all pop out sometime around 8 pm PDT.

Down in the basement, I saw remarks about the dad's roll in feeding.. I just came in from my bird feeder and "Big" Red daddy cardinal was teaching the fledglings the bird feeder, they looked like baby hummers, flapping all around trying to "get a grip". Meanwhile, Tangy mamma looked the other way, "Big" red feed her as well!

I think I posted the info, Lucky. Was trying to be brief and to the point (hard for me!). I, too, have seen various behaviors and patterns of males with different species. As you know, in many species, the male's only responsibility is fertilizing the egg!! In hummingbirds, the female does everything - build the nest, incubate, feed herself and the young. One of the only male birds that I have ever seen that rotates turns with the female on the nest are barns. What a sight that must have been viewing your cardinals today.

I set my notebook up and TouchSmart with a router and bought a mouse for the notebook. I could not stand the mouse pad that is built in on the notebooks and notebooks.

Copy your husband's avatar and email the image to you. Save the image on your computer. Save on the grey image (up in the comment section) and choose the option of using a picture from your computer. Follow the prompts.

Unusually warm for this time of year in Maine today. I'm sure many places were over 90 degrees. I'm in the Western Maine mts. and still 77 degrees at 9:00 pm EDT. But, a bright sunny day. Almost hoping for a rainy day. My new seedlings need watering every day and boking a little tired from the heat.

Rest little ones for the big night
Wesley come out - it will be alright
The night is long and we will have fun
Then go back in the house before we see the sun
Each day we get stronger and stronger
We will not need the box any longer
All will be missed so very much
Wish we could forever stay in touch

They have taken out a lot of the roadside picnic areas here in Maine, too, Barb. Still have some in the more scenic sites. Maine Dept. of Transportation built and maintained ours and it was done as a cost-cutting measure (I'm sure we all know how our states are being affected by that lol). One HUGE problem at our roadside sites was that people were emptying their home trash in the barrels. After particularly busy summer week ends the barrels were overflowing, because people returning home from their summer cottages opted to leave their trash with us rather than take it home!!!

Very typical in the bird and animal world that the female (mother) has all of the child care, nurturing and teaching responsibilities. McGee has been a great Dad and "husband" though as he brought food to Molly while she was incubating the eggs, to Molly and the owlets when they were tiny babies. Since Molly was able to leave the nest - both she and McGee have providing a LOT of food.

Lynda C I get SO befuddled sometimes trying to decide what "time" is being referred to - particularly here in the chat stream. Here in the East, all times shown in the chat are in current Eastern Daylight Time (I assume the current time in Central, Mountain and Pacific is what those folks see, too). When someone refers to a certain spot back in the chat (i.e. 1:30 pm, 10:20 am, etc.) is it always PDT or the time from their specific time zone ?? I know that the PDFs are done in PDT - (although it takes me a minute to remember to convert the times back to EDT). Clear as mud???? Today, 15:48:46 - Flag - Like - Reply

Darlene Salisbury The time he is referring to is Pacific Daylight Time. We are three hours behind the east coast. Today, 15:53:21 - Flag - Like - Reply

Lynda C Thanks, Darlene. I think my post probably showed up during Carlos's update and I know his times are always PDT. My post was just regarding confusion in times meant here in the chat. Today, 16:09:57 - Flag - Like - Reply

OwlBominable Snowman (a.k.a. JH) Lynda, I always refer to PDT because I have my system set to PDT currently. That way the PDFs I create reflect the actual time of all the conversation happening around the owls. Will be different, and I wouldn't blame them. I still get confused when looking for something. Owlosaurus and Owlbominable, good to see the two of you juxtaposed this evening, and to know who is who. Owlosaurus knows my secret about Alan Ginsberg, and Owlbominable knows of my love affair with Yundi. Surely there's a moment in there, if I were only clever enough to figure it out. She is obviously very earnest. Animals capture peoples' hearts and minds in special ways, and I understand that. It seems to be Ms. O'Brien's view that Carlos is a wreckless, selfish interloper into her world. I have no other point of reference, but will be forever indebted to the Royals for the opportunity they have given me to be imprinted by these stunning animals.

Hi Elliott. I'm pretty opinionated myself and would love to comment but I only get 1000 characters to do it in so I'll pass this time. Well, maybe just a couple things: I think she really cares about owls and has the potential to force standards to be set for owl box construction. I'm a wildlife fan so I she can do that, it's a good thing. But I don't like her tactics or her passive/aggressive I don't want to slam Carbs but you all asked me about it so I have to approach. From what we saw these owls would not have plunged to their deaths and been 'dragged off by wild animals', but it's a tough world out there and who knows. Carlos did listen to her and made some changes. I don't think he objected to the advice as much as he did to her approach. I'm glad the owls are safe. I think lots and lots of owls every year are fine, without the help of noted scientists.

Hey there, Owls! I agree with you. I've wandered enough through the world of barn owls over the past 3 months to know that nest boxes are controversial all over. Mankind has this curious penchant for destroying natural habitats, then trying to fix them. The ecosystem clearly needs owls and I am happy that their importance somehow became known to me along the way. Coincidentally, they are as delightful an animal as one will ever encounter!

I have checked on her blog from time to time, and have appreciated her experience with owls and her sincere desire to see them prosper. That is the desire of everyone on this site, I am sure, especially Carbs. I was so happy when Carlos added the fledging stations, and felt a lot better about their chances to do well. I have not, however, enjoyed the railing against Carbs. It seems she has some issues, maybe she thinks Carbs is infringing on her territory, maybe she is a bit jealous. I certainly do not mean to be unkind in any way. I simply think Carlos is a wonderful man and has brought much, much pleasure and education to thousands of people. It has been a fabulous experience, and I will be forever grateful to him. I guess I don't want anyone to criticize him.

Elliott, I will withhold most of my personal feelings on that overly dramatic author's opinion and only suggest one go sign up for her yahn barn owl activists group. It's by membership only, so you can't read without signing up. But boy howdy, there is some truly crazy talk going on over there. They are planning and organizing and writing letters and making phone calls and... you name it. They are trying to get US authorities involved to reprimand Mr. Royal for profiteering and endangering the owls with a flash. I really feel sorry for the poor souls who are receiving all their emails and voicemails. If you think her blog is over-reaction, you ain't seen nothing yet...

Ann, Carlos has never once named her in any derogatory statements, to the best of my knowledge. And I have read everything he's uttered since she became aware of the owls. She appears to have a really big and very fragile chip on her shoulder and she is the one who personalizes everything in a way that she feels slighted. She then goes public with insults and cries of woe in order to draw support for her cause. It's not a very professional (nor adult-like) way to conduct oneself, the way she rants and raves.

Where do you live, bunny?? I has been very warm in Maine the past few days - in the 90's here today - unusual for this time of year. But, we'll take it without complaint. Last year was rain, rain and more rain all Spring and most of the summer, with temps often in the high 50's for days. This past winter we nearly froze in Feb in Jan. & Feb. - one of the coldest winters in decades down there.

A favorite expression here, "If you don't like Maine weather, just wait a minute". I'm gabbing a bit about this nice stretch of weather. You should hear me growl when we get a month of below freezing - and sometimes 10 day stretches of below zero - that's why we now head South 😊

Now I will have good memories to look back on when the little ones have gone, also all my family and friends will be receiving birthday cards with Owllets on them for years to come. Might even make some Christmas cards too.

My mom loved and collected owl memorabilia for years and now that she is gone I think I have inherited that trait too and that can only be GOOD

I've mentioned this before, but I wanted to put it front and center. The collective term for owls is "a Parliament of Owls." That's not difficult to understand looking at the video before us! I just love the sound of that. And every time I see this term in the future, this is the picture I'll have in my mind.

Jolie, the stats box info actually comes from another chat room. If your IP address has been blocked by that chat room then you will not be able to see the stats box. It doesn't mean you've been banned there, but possibly someone sharing the same IP. Something else to consider - are you are viewing from behind a firewall that blocks the user to a website? (expanded to avoid the spamfilter) That can happen in corporate environments.

He'd better come on soon! I have been waiting all day for him. I've been reduced to eating breadsticks and drinking water because I have no food in the house. How inconsiderate of him!

Denise, these are a few middle age ones. They're aren't really all my favorites. Mention it again tomorrow or later on today if you want more. I'll be happy to bok for a few of my best or faves. Sorry that happened to you!

Hi everyone! ~ Time for my afternoon peek at the owlets...I was just in an after-school committee meeting and I started to sketch a bit...sometimes I do flowers...but my flower looked like Wesley's head so I went with that and before I knew it I had Lil' Wesley facing me on paper...well...um...my version of him!
I almost shed a tear I missed him so much... Couldn't wait for the meeting to be over... !

Only had the sound on, not the picture, and I heard a scraping noise. Is Mr Scissorfingers at it again? He's going to make his mom and pop proud tonight with all his catches.

I'm seeing spots on all their chests... does this mean they're all female, or are those adolescent feathers or something?

He came out for the first time a little after 7 CT...but I think that because already tested the waters, so to speak, he'll probably follow his sbs outside once it gets dark tonight. That would be about 10 CT.
