I've mentioned this before, but I wanted to put it front and center. The collective termfor ows is "a Parliament of Owls." That's not difficult to understand looking at the video before us! I just love the sound of that. And every time I see this term in the future, this is the picture I'll have in my mind.

Possibly agriculture would also drive the amout of prey. I'm sure we could sustain several barn owls here, with these fields surroundinus, and a little woodland. but they probly wouldn't like the rain so much. Today, 13:53:51 - Flag - Like - Reply

Many vertebrates have 'hands,' Mary. And birds have wrists and elbows. I'm looking for a good example to post. This fish has more developed 'hands' than most fish, but the theory is that this was the method of locomotion that brought fish out of the water to form land animals. Help yourselves to my edited screenshot images of the owls, for personal use only. I can't ethically or legally sell anything with the owl images since Carlos wishes to retain all copyright to his work, both still photos and video. I don't blame him for that decision and I will respect his wishes. I would want the same respect for any of my own images. Just sharing what I've pieced together with friends. From a favorite author: "We need another and a wiser and perhaps more mystical concept of animals. Remote from universal nature, and living by complicated artifice, man in civilization surveys the creature through the glass of his knowledge and sees therefore a feather magnified and the whole image in distortion. We patronize them for their incompleteness, for their tragic fate of having taken form so far below ourselves, and therein we err, and greatly err. For the animal shall not be measured by the man. In a world older and more complete than ours they move finished and more complete, gifted with extensions of the senses we have lost or never attained, living by voices we shall never hear. They are not brethren, they are not underlings; they are other nations, caught with ourselves in the net of life and time, fellow prisoners of the splendor and travail of the earth."

Other than going into the 'basement'!!! (keep pressing 'more' at the bottom of the chat stream - just in case you don't know what the basement is!) I'm not sure there is any other way - i know there are copies of the chat on Mollys wiki site but I don't think its possible to 'open' the pictures from there. I'm not even sure how far back down into the basement you can go either. Otherwise those of us that have taken pics can repost a few for you if you want! Anything specific you wanted or just a general view from eggs to now?

Mary I imagine they have spotted the camera by now. I'm not sure of the lens size or if the owls can see the lens, but they sure seem to be looking directly into it. I don't know why the blue box says that when an owlet returns with a rat, that it might have been passed off from Molly or McGee. Couldn't it be possible that the owlets are hunting by now? Just a thought. Today, 11:41:30 - Flag - Like - Reply

Owlosaurus z

I think they are hunting and probably even catching a few things. Carlos can only see what happens in the lighted areas. He said Molly had them out in the field last night for a hunting lesson. But in some cases he has seen the hand of f from his vantage point on the back porch where he watches them He says they spend a lot of time on the neighbor's roof; I wonder if they can hear them? Owlbominable Snowman (a.k.a. JH)

It's possible an owlet successfully caught their own prey, but not the most likely scenario. We witnessed several times last night where the adults delivered food and handed it off to the owlets outside the box. It's more probable that they also did this several times off-camera than it is the owlets are already proficient hunters. Carlos was also awake for part of the night and he has much more visibility than we do to see what's going on.

Here are two "hand offs" that I watched.

I made a folder under "my pictures" on the computer for owls. I have saved a lot the pictures you wonderful people have posted. However, when I just went to my pictures to see them they are very tiny. If I send them to Wal-Mart, CVS, Rite-Aid to be printed will they be regular size? Today, 11:25:42 - Flag - Like - Reply

Denise, it is going to be almost impossible to get decent lab-prints made from the small screenshots. Some of the larger ones will print OK, but there just isn't enough resolution to make normal size prints from the small ones. Some labs will still print them, but the pictures will likely be disappointing. Today, 11:52:30 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🌌 Dorot hy

The most astonishing thing for me on this site is how the owls demonstrate such intimate care of each other. I am a biologist and thought I knew something about animals, but this level of caring is a revelation. Ijust wish we could all show such care for each other in this world.

Mary Carroll Sometimes what we "know" is just the repeated assumptions of our forebearers. It is great to watch the actions of these owls and learn that nestlings do not abuse each other and there is (in this family) a high degree of caring for one another.

Jan (Bayonne, NJ) I was thinking the same thing. I'm not a biologist, but I know (or thought I knew) a lot about birds. This bonding in the owbox is a new phenomenon for me. But the bonding is gone as soon as they disperse. I'm wondering if it has anything to do with the fact that young siblings of all species initially have difficulty distinguishing between themselves and their siblings. I have identical twins and they definitely could'nt distinguish between themselves until they were nearly a year old.

Kalen Buckley Ima biologist as well, ang. I think the reason we don't really know about this level of intimate caring is because we're constantly taught that it's all just chalked up to nature and "the way it is." as far as my education is concerend, there have always been explanations attempting to disprove this behavior on a "caring" level because many scientists believe animals don't even have the mental capacity to "care" for a sibling like that; rather, it's just something for the owlets to do to occupy their time. in other words, nature trumps nurture in the eyes of many scientists, but clearly not all. 🙂 Today, 10:46:50 - Flag - Like - Reply

Sadly true, Kalen, but I think that there is hope on the horizon. Recent research is showing those assumptions to be incorrect, or at least not the whole story. It is really exciting to read about research in the areas of animal 'personalities' (traits of individuals vs. species.) And I, for one, ampleased to see the increased understanding of the human species as being more linked to the others we share the planet with. ang Very likely. And if it is visible in an owlet it is also probably something that is in all animals. We are programmed to take actions that preserve the species. In the owlet family the "caring" seems to be restricted to the family. Perhaps as we go "up" the scale of complex beings, the group that is within the zone of "caring" expands to extended family, vilage, state, country, etc. Now we need to extend it to all of humanity - maybe in the next milenium we will have the social skils (awareness??) to do that.

We have not observed the owls interacting with non-family members. In other animal species there are repeated examples of non-familial caring and cross-species caring.

Ive noticed that too. Mary, but in almost every instance it's because humans have brought them together, and then the 'magic' takes over. I think it is rare in the wild for that to happen, but it surely shows that the instinct for caring is universal. Today, 11:39:35 - Flag - Like - Reply

A couple missing posts:

I was so confused! Thanks to Owlbo/James, now I understand why some posts disappear. The weird part is that they show up on my computer as long as I'm logged on, but if I log out they disappear. Obviously others don't see them. Now I know it's the 'bot keying on some words. I won't use those anymore. No, they aren't nasty or offensive; they just name another site. Guess that's a no-no. Odd.

Anyway, I had posted a couple things - one directing people to that other site for information they had requested (how to contact Carlos) and one as a kudos to the moderators there AND our very own moderator here, HF. Both are gone. But I had not logged out so was able to go back and get screen shots. Hope these don't go away!

Owlbominable Snowman (a.k.a. JH)

Yep! I was having a heck of a time figuring out what was happening. Apparently there has been a lot of spam coming in here with the name of that "other" site included. Most likely links to unrelated cameras, I guess. But it does make it very difficult to give advice and instructions. I've had numerous informative posts go missing or never appear due to this. And, like you said, the post appears on your own screen, it just won't appear for others. So if people ignore your questions/replies, that could be the reason why.

Marv Cartoon Owl dialog:

Molly: Oh look McGee, what beautiful owlets we have! They look so grown up! I really don't seem many fuzzy down feathers anymore. McGee: I wonder when they will leave the nest. I'm flying and scouting for treats 10 hours a night! These kids don't seem to understand they must fledge and find their own treats.

Molly: Oh McGee, our kids still need a little help from us. You can't expect they to go right out and fend for themselves. Besides they are so nice to have around the nest.

McGee: Let's get some rest while it's light out. I'll snuggle up to you and...

Molly: [owl giggles...] Now McGee, that's how we got those little eggs to owlets in the first place \ldots .

Just hold on a minute second brother said, mom told me that too and I'm just as well fed.

Number three that's me mom loves me the most and though this is true I feel I must boast.

Now wait just a minute little Wesley noted I am the favorite all the people have voted.

That's Me

2	Melissa Time for me to go. Hope to peek back in during the day to see if there are 3 or 4 in the box. If Wesley branches for the first time and Max sleeps outside all day for the first time on the same day then this day may mark the beginning of the end Today, 07: 18:07 – Flag – Like – Reply Liked by Kelly Warren

	Ingrid Happy good morning to all you MOD's. What good news to see that Wesley stepped out for the first time. He didn't stay out long but I bet he will tonight. He has a long way to go to catch up to his siblings but with all of us rooting for him/or her there is no doubt a champion will be joining the skies.
