First is top left, clockwise from there, ending in the center.

This is my sign-off for tonight. Going to capture a PDF but I probably won't be back tonight.

I've had so many questions asked about my big fish avatar, and I have a big fish story to go with it. And so many other people have stories about their avatars too here at SPO. Do you think it would be appropriate to start a page on the wiki about choosing your avatar for SPO? Some of the other stories here are so wonderful!!! Especially some of the "revolutions" of them, along with the names to go with them, LOL! (James???)

Hi Sandra. The salmon was caught in a tidal river coming from the Pacific Ocean so it's not a freshwater fish. We can only catch and keep one a day during Salmon season around here, but it took me five years to catch just that one!

Merritt, if you are still here, I have often worried about the youth today as they don't always act responsible and seem to be multiplying in that direction. People working in stores, customer relations, management positions etc. don't always seem very kind or patient. I'm sure there are still good people coming out of American homes these days but it just seems to be less and less. I appreciate hearing that you see such great young people coming in and it gives me hope that it's not running rampant over the whole country.

Kathryn R - I only have a couple of moments to stop in tonight...but wanted to make sure I told you to have a wonderful camping trip this weekend! I hope the weather stays somewhat ok for you, and you have many cozy fires!...and enjoy all the yummy food that comes with camping, including smores 😊

Will miss you while you're away...
Hope you're still on to see this. 😊

I think it's funny that Carlos thinks only about 150 will be at the park on Saturday. I posted several years ago on a website for a gathering at our local library to bring back a local radio talk show host that had been cancelled. I thought maybe a few people would show.....uh yah, it ended up being standing room only. On a side note: We ended up creating our own chat rooms we had become such good friends with the rally's we attended, restaurants we met at, picnics that we attended. Two members got married. The chatroom still exists. So it's a thought if anyone knows how to do that.

😊 Uh Oh - stopping back by for one last peek gets me in trouble every time. In reference to I made below comparing installation of owl boxes to bluebird boxes bluebird boxes. I was neither recommending nor discouraging erecting bluebird houses. I only intended to make a statement on the decline of the bluebird population over a period of many years and the successful effort to increase that population by erecting nesting boxes. I had done quite a bit of research on using them a few years ago when I was considering erecting some. I'm not an expert when it comes to the pros and cons of this, but there is a lot of reliable information published by Corneril, Audubon, Bluebird Watching Digest, Ct. Dept. of Environmental Protection, etc., etc. I'm sure a Google search on the decline of decline and recovery of them would help for further info. Good night again!

Sometimes chat streams evolve into that and it can't be helped.

Helb all, I made a few posts then went to James' old hunting grounds. In Cognit0, LOL. No, I had to console my 11-year-daughter. I let her stay up half an hour late for the AI ending. Her "boy" won, but I made an inappropriate comment about how he won... she burst into tears. Ahh well.

And then I saw James' hilarious post about the bluebird nests. YES, I got the sarcasm! LOL!

Also, I won't be around to post about Eric's hardbound book, so if someone can take that task on the next five days I would most appreciate it!

Written by storymom and submitted for cookbook 😊 ...

Take 1 large field, 4 adorable baby owls, several trees, a cool brook, a large quantity of field mice and a pinch of pebbles. Mix the owlets and trees together and stir frequently. Pour the brook over the pebbles. Sprinkle the deep blue sky and bake in the summer sun. When done, set away safely in a cozy owl box or tree stump.

Wrap securely in awe and store in the herds office.

Not for the smaller more defenseless birds. Owls are larger and can fend off threats. Blue birds can't do a whole lot, especially when trapped in a box.

Just curious, James. I never knew much about birdhouses before this. Why would this be true of bluebirds particularly and not all birds? Don't they know how to choose a place that has few predators? And how do the bluebirds know the houses are for bluebirds specifically? Really, I just want info. I am not taking a side either way here. 😊

I can tell you why you were censored. I had a recent chat with H/F about that and they were kind enough to explain --- the filter doesn't like the word "k***" instead of perish, pass-away, etc.... 😊

What's funny is that I almost posted a similar message down there, except yours is much more entertaining...

This is from Cornell University... For nesting, bluebirds depend on naturally occurring cavities or on cavities excavated or built by others in open habitats. Individuals hunt insects from perches over sparsely covered ground, migrate short distances or not at all, and have relatively simple songs and calls. Once seemingly threatened by nest-site competition from introduced species, Eastern Bluebird populations have been encouraged by enthusiasts, who provide hundreds of thousands of nesting boxes for their use.

It seems they still endorse it.

I emailed Eric Behm, the author of the e-book Molly the Owl. If you would like to see a hardbound copy of this published, then please email him at eric@erikblehm.com. He just responded to me and this is what he said (following). Please give him your support! I would love to have a hardbound copy!

Thank you. I've e-met bits of nice people from the Sportsmans Paradise chat.... Please do spread the word there, that I am collecting emails... I'm hoping to get hundreds, if not thousands to show a publisher.... If I got enough people to commit, I could even publish it myself with a quality self-publishing company. But that is a last resort. I'd rather have the publishing to a big publishing house.

Anyway. Please do spread the word about this option. Have people include a good email address that will last a while (this could happen in two months, six months, or a year from now?) and or a phone number or mailing address. Best, Eric oh Sandra! You have happened upon an awesome owlcam and site. ... The owlettes have about 10 days before they probably have fully fledged and leave the box for good. So - you get TEN days!!!! The box will not come down - in fact - it was up, empty, for 2 years before mom and dad "Molly and McGee" moved in - however - it is the webcam(s) that will discontinue.

 You are misreading. The box will stay up. What is under question is if Carlos will continue with the camera and broadcast after this brood leaves. He has invested 12-18 hour days, almost non-stop, since going live with the camera broadcast. This has been very unlike any other wildlife webcam I've ever seen. Kudos to Carlos for creating a whole new experience around a nest box camera.

 I doubt he will be taking the box down. He has said he would be leaving it up, uncleaned, in case any other owls want to nest in it in the future. I just doubt that there will be a web cam into the lives of any future owl families who next there.
 This was a once in a lifetime experience.
 He originally set up the web feed for his family and a few friends. It snowballed from there. I doubt very much that he will be doing the same again.

Teaching Max and Pattison to hunt is taking several days. If Caribs plans for the owls to be in the box for only one more week, does that mean he thinks Wesley will be hunting by then? I hope Molly takes enough time with Wesley that he is good and strong and capable of fending for himself. I thought that took at least a couple of weeks after the beginning of flying. Just wondering--wanting to be sure Wesley is taken care of!!!

I read on line that barn owls will sometimes roost at night, in a next box for up to eight weeks after first coming out.

Max may leave by then, but it is likely Wesley will stay longer. See fledging chart.

I would like him to get his publisher to take pre-orders on a bound book, with the pre-condition that if enough orders are not placed then no printing would take place and no billing would occur. The eBook is a great way to introduce the idea, but I think it detracts many would be buyers. I know I personally have issues with buying "protected" eBooks. If I want to print it more than once in my lifetime, then I should have that option.

Carlos says he just saw 2 new owlboxes up in the area today. He also quoted Cornell Lab of Ornithology (study of birds) saying that the limiting factor in the barn owl population is lack of nesting cavities. Artificial owl boxes is the one thing that has helped to increase the population of barn owls. So Carlos has inspired a trend that is good for barn owls.

Not unlike putting up bluebird houses. The bluebird population had declined dramatically because of loss of habitat and has rebounded nicely because people started putting up houses for them to nest in.

 And then we have Merritt's beautiful summary of this mornings pre dawn events:
 Wesley spent a good part of last night outside with his siblings. While they flew mostly out of camera range, Wes often sat in plain view on the fledge ledge and called into the night. Max, Pattison, and Aust in had emerged from the box for their usual orays out into the night just as the cobalt blues of dusk faded into black. After a few minutes, Wesley decided to join them. He approached the door, tested the air outside with a talon, then gathered up his courage and bounded from the doorway to the plait for mewhere he flapped his wings in triumph. He and the others were in and out of the box after that, and all returned safely home before the break of the dawn

Love that sound... maybe I should record it...so, when they are grown and fly away...I can still listen to the recording to relax 😊

I love the noise, when I shut down the computer at bed time, I am often alarmed that I cant hear the birds any more!

I thought about that. Some people play soft music, some have white noise, why not a little rasping.....

My daughter hates this sound and I have to turn it way down so as not to bother her.

I'm watching History International and they saying Mt. Rainier is one of the most dangerous volcanoes in the world. Ill bet people in Seattle appreciate hearing that.

They better get an evacuation plan ready...what with all the earthquakes, volcano eruptions, weird weather of late...

My husband climbed it. He said that when he reached the summit, it was a little disappointing: he said he could hear trucks from far down the mountain. Needless to say, he was hearing the mountain itself!

No doubt, Bill. Have you ever watched the HBO Spedal on WWII? I must confess, I've not seen it, but would like to. The main guest is Eugene B. Sludge and was a college professor I enjoyed at University of Montevallo in AL- a very small college. Just wondering if you had seen it.

Actually, we are probably more familiar with that fact than most people. They keep telling us it should go sometime in the next 10 years. Preparations have been made, but one never really knows if the cities and the state have followed through, because it is such a sleeping giant. Having been here during the earthquake of 2001 sure woke us up a bit.

Hi everyone... I'm checking in... it's been a long day. Jade told me to look at the owls to cheer me up...

I'm sure it will 😊

onsieur fowlbombinable, what should I do to find out about the 'disturbing' things that stacy o'brien posted? i really want to have an impartial view of what happened, so I'd like to read them. right now I have no idea how to read what she said on chat or to read that post, so I have heard much more of her side of the story.
