Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here

OMG they're full grown Molly's now. I started watching March 17th and I simply do not know what I'm going to do when these little darlings leave us. I too check on them every morning and again before bed...

It's been an experience that I'll never forget!! I feel like a proud mamma!! 😊

Okay, the two in front kind of look like siamese owls. 2 owls, 2 legs - you know, like twins.
On that note, I better go to bed! Clearly I need sleep before another day with my fourth graders!

I'm so attached to these birds. I just don't know how I'm going to cope when the last one leaves the nest for good! I check on them in the morning and can't wait to get home from work to see them! Even if they aren't doing anything other than sleeping and wobbling. I can't help but stare at them and smile.

James, a few minutes before I posted this last photo, I posted the same one and it showed as a post. Someone replied below my first post and asked if this could be Wesley and I started to reply. When I hit the reply button my post with photo and his question disappeared. Do your PDF's show the original as posted when you pull them?

Continuing from last evening, a few more pictures of my flowers - but with a little chipmunk sitting on top of a carved wooden bear (done by a local man who does chain saw carvings). "Chippy" was eating some sort of bulb he had dug up somewhere in my garden. Finished it off and went over to my innovative (plastic plant pot saucer) bird bath !!

I'd sooner think it would be mice or chipmunks. Squirrels don't usually burrow down that far. The only Spring bulbs I can have here are daffodils and some tulips. The "critters" including deer, dig up everything else.

Yes! Yes! And I loved Misty of Chincoteague! My older sister had a passion for horses, and we shared those two books. Now that I remember, I had another book illustrated by Marguerite Henry: "Cinnabar, the One o'clock Fox." Another great book. They must have been all from a series because they were all laid-out the same.

Marla, are you there? Re: horses. These are two of my favorite pics (not because of me, but because of the horses).

First one (waaay back) is me on my sisters Arabian.

Second one (more recently...but still a few years back) is me with a million $ Arabian stallion at this Arabian farm we visited in Duches County, NY. Every time I look at it I cry, just from the remembrance. The trainer took a shine to me and he let me hold Moonstone Bey's lead. That was one of the most complete and joyous connections I've ever experienced with an animal.

(Apologies to others for this off-topic post.)

I grew up in a city, my parents owned race horses (I was too young to understand, but loved them), and I went to a camp that had riding. I have always been amazed by there beauty. Just their eyes say so much. Haven't been around one in ages. I hope someday I can.

Hello! I'm an occasional visitor to the owlets (life gets in the way all the time!), so can someone tell me when it's estimated that these super cuties will "fly the coop" and not come back? Or will they just keep coming back every now and then until they mate ??? I know you all have discussed this probably already, but since I haven't a clue how to search the posts... any info would be welcomed! Thanks!!

I saw one of the owlets pecking at the left foot on the owl closes to the camera. I remember on a hot summer day walking out to the end of a deserted dock. I took off my shoes and socks and cooled my feet in the cool lake water. After a while I felt something around the soles and toes of my feet. I looked down and there were baby trout giving my feet a pedicure--and they didn't charge me a dime.

Such clever replies 😊 . Maybe some of you could make and market a "Mollyopoly" game as a fund raiser . Coleen would have to hold the copyright to the name though - her original idea . There does seem to be a Monopoly game for lots of places . We spend the winter in Englewood, FL and one of the churches there was even selling "Enlewoodopoly" games - that's a mouthful !!!

Okay: Colleen and Lynda C: here's the verse from my mother's 1960s recipe book 1 grass field, 1 dozen children half a dozen dogs and puppies, 1 brook, 1 hundredweight of pebbles. Into the field pour the children and dogs. Allow to mix well and stir. Pour brook on the pebbles until frothy. Place under a blue sky and cool. Dry. Serve with hot milk and freshly baked gingerbread. Add a dash of charity
Mix with understanding

 I'd love to have a "Molly Mug", but I don't like the picture of Molly.

I'd rather have a mug with a photograph imprinted onto it.

I know there is an issue of copyright where you can't make money off of Carlo's images. But I'm wondering if we can take one of those pictures and have it stamped onto a T-Shirt or Mug for our own personal use only.

 The postage isn't the problem. I just don't like the picture that was used for the mug or t-shirts. I think it's painted. There are so many wonderful actual photographs that look so much better that I would rather have on a mug or t-shirt.

 I'm wondering if it would be ok to use one of Carlo's actual pictures to put onto my own mug or t-shirt. There are all kinds of kiosks in malls that will stamp a mug or t-shirt with an image of your choosing. You buy their mug or t-shirt and supply them with a photograph and they put that photograph on the mug or t-shirt.

 I have the Molly Mug and Molly T-shirt and I love them both. I think the picture is wonderful. I wouldn't have it any other way. I have had many, many cups of hot tea while at the computer. And best of all I was so excited when it was delivered. It doesn't get any better than this. In fact right now I'm enjoying some peach, cinnamon tea in my Molly Mug right now. 😊

 Linda, Carlos has said that as long as you are using the photos for yourself, it's OK. You just can't sell them or profit from them. Go to cafeexpress(dot)com and you can have a mug made with any picture. They do a great job for a very reasonable price. I have a mug I've used at work for almost 10 years that I had them make for me using a picture I took in my garden. It still looks brand new.

 Good afternoon; I am back after a busy day in town. This morning I sent an e-mail to Eric Blehm asking to consider making a hard copy book of the e-book. If he gets a bit of requests it may be a great possibility. He replied with a thank you. If post this enough times so all the MODs get to see it we can hope for a book as he already has a publisher who is interested.
 When I got back from town there was a message on my answering machine from Donna Royal. She had gotten a card I had sent with one of the poems I had written that I thought she might enjoy. Well, she did and wanted my permission to post it on her blog. I said I would be honored and also told her about the many wonderful poems and stories that are posted here on this site and if checked Molly's Wiki she could see a lot of them.

I just got a reply back from here as I had sent her the beautiful poem by Roberta Jackson and she loved it. She also went to the WIKI. 😊

 Go back to the Molly Blog where you see photos from the last few days. Then scroll down all the way to the bottom of the beige colored area and look in the left hand corner. You will see something to the effect of "previous photos" and that will take you to the photos he previously posted. Hope this helps. Enjoy his great photography as many of us have.

 I know a lot of humans who should probably become more human. As for birds, I've been attacked by grackles, bluebirds, and cockatiels. It hurts to get pecked and clawed. By and large, we coexist in peace, except for the bird droppings on the truck. On my undeveloped country property, One bird comes to visit me often. The grackles like to help me mow the lawn and go after the bugs I stir up. It's pretty scary to see the large raptors in re-hab at a wildlife exhibition. Sure, it's a cycle of life and involves nurturing, etc., and birds have their role in the food chain and can benefit the society of man, but cuteness is not something I associate with birds, fish, reptiles, or amphibians. All we have in common with these beasts are mating, eating, breathing, and some other sensory and biological functions. I go back to how man has destroyed the planet and needs to become more human.

Scroll down just a page or two and you'll find dozens of comment's about gender. Everyone has an opinion and most of them are pretty similar.

However, keep in mind that we have been told by those who know owls that their next set of feathers may come in lighter than these. They say you can't really know until an owl's eggs! We can guess, but for these owls we'll never know for certain.

I remember when I first logged in here to see Molly and her 4 relatively newly hatched babies. Owls have always been one of my favourite birds, but I've never been familiar with barn owls. When I first saw her I thought she was actually kind of an ugly owl.

But the more I watched and more I tuned in and more I saw her babies grow, the more she grew on me.

Now I think she's a gorgeous bird, and so is McGee, and I'm especially taken with the beauty of the 4 owl's!

Looking back, I can't believe I thought Molly was an ugly bird.

Not only is she beautiful, but she's also doing a great job raising her 4 beautiful babies!

Some earlier discussion about stormom's recipe that she submitted for the Molly cookbook and a resulting post she made regarding an old recipe she had found in another "preserving children" - (sorry I don't have the text handy for either of those recipes right now) - reminded me of a different "recipe" that I have regarding old cookbook -

Take a cup of kindness

Add a dash of charity

Mix with understanding

And a bit of courtesy

Heib - hello - yes Bill you were right ... I was at school and kids were granted about 25 minutes of free time on computers. One little guy couldn't think of a fun site to go to and I'm thinking "I HAVE ONE FOR YOU!!!" 😊 I brought up Molly and the gang and the chat came up - but said the photo action was denied. OKAY - the kids around me are allowed -and can bring up star war shooting games, but they are denied OWLS???? Whaaaaa?

So I'm home now - and actually - the owlets did come up - about 5 minutes later - and appears it was the U stream access that wasn't allowed. But still - VERY odd. I thought denied access might be the "chat" ... that was legal target in the elementary school system. (roll'n my eyeballs)

Im just saying that you're either extremely advanced and ready to go to college in 2 years or there is some mistake. Perhaps it is an "honors" class or one that is called "advanced"?

Advanced placement means that you are able to test out of some college course requirements. Thus, the courses are offered in High School. My daughter took AP History & English as a Junior in high school

<http://www.collegeboard.com/student/testing/ap/about.html>

If you are indeed taking an advanced course, you will have to wean yourself off of internet spelling and grammar shortcuts very quickly! (;) Best to you.

COLLEEN: Someone asked me about the origin of that "recipe" Preserving Owlets, I got the inspiration from a slip of paper I found this in my mother's 1960s recipe book. It said "author unknown" and "from Old England, Suffolk"
The original talked about preserving children in a big field, with puppies and a brook and 100 weight of pebbles (!!)then put them to bed with warm milk and gingerbread. It seemed to fit very well for our owls too! Just for you all to know!

NORTHERN ALERT!
NOAA forecasters announced there's a good chance for a spectacular northern lights display tonight and/or tomorrow night in the upper latitudes. So if you live in the far north it would be worth it to step away from the owls for a moment and check to see if there's another wonderful natural phenomenon going on. I'm jealous! I grew up in the north and miss seeing the aurora. (I didn't take the picture below, but it's so nice I had to post it anyway.)

Owl pellets are very cool. If you have kids, get some. They usually come with bone charts so they can put together and identify the animal or animals the owl last ate. They are not gross at all. It's mostly just fur and bones compacted together. If you buy them from a supplier, they are sterilized. We did them in my homeschool biology class and they had a great time.

Pellets - An owl can't digest the fur, bones, etc. from the animals it eats (mice, rats, gophers, etc.). As it usually eats this prey whole, it forms a "pellet" of this undigested material and expees, coughs up or "horks" these pellets. I believe they do this about every 8 to 12 hours. Interestingly, a female owl will break apart this pellets of fur, etc. for her nesting material

I've just received a reply from Eric Behm in response to my email to him about having a hard back (or paperback) copy of Molly the Owl published - Please, please, please send him an email at eric@ericblehm.com if you would like one too! I for one would love a hardback copy of the book and if enough people send him an email requesting it then he can approach a publisher and hopefully get it done - you need to use an email that will remain valid for at least 6 months to a year, tell him how many copies you are likely to order and possibly a phone number/address as back-up (this is optional!!)

The Lake Co Captains won their baseball game in extra innings and we had a cool breeze off the lake to temper the sunshine.

AND my husband took this picture at our old house which we are preparing to rent out. (he forgot the vacuum cleaner so I am headed that way shortly and will get to see for myself--Mama chose a good spot, s/he can't be seen from road or sidewalk as there is a hedge behind the photographer.)

 Hi, Becky! So far, so good for Merlin. Are you still feeding him, or can he eat by himself now?

 He has always ate by himself. If that is what you mean! I am boiling chicken right now for him. I am also giving him o/d from the vet. He ate chicken and o/d and cheese (his fav!) this AM.

 I was walking by my open laptop, and thought I saw rain drops on a windowpane, but it's just owl feathers close up on live cam. (shows how distracted I can get :))

Alessandra, not sure that you saw the email address correction to my post below about the Molly the Owl book. Mary Carroll posted the correct email address for Eric Blehm there - Eric Blehm - eric@ericblehm.com - sorry for my error.

 I missed that one hatching - hoping to catch the others though! Have you seen the other Barn Owl web cam in Dorset - <http://www.dorsetwildlife.org.uk/bird-webcam.html> Bob and Brenda - they've got 5 eggs due to hatch any day now! There's also a Kestrel Nest on that site with Chris and Kate - again their eggs are due to hatch any day now!

 I missed this one hatching too but I did get to see the baby for a second when she stood up. It's so tiny! I have seen Bob and Brenda too. :)

 Aw shucks - one more post won't hurt - that was a wonderful "birthday party" for Merritt here last night. I think she was in awe and I know she was genuinely touched by the sentiments, notes and pictures. Way to go folks!!!!
