Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

Hi all, enjoying some wonderful weather in Ohio today. The Lake Co Captains won their baseball game in extra innings and we had a cool breeze off the lake to temper the sunshine.

AND my husband took this picture at our old house which we are preparing to rent out. (he forgot the vacuum cleaner so I am headed that way shortly and will get to see for myself--Mama chose a good spot, s/he can't be seen from road or sidewalk as there is a hedge behind the photographer.)

How sweet! I'm in Michigan and should start to see fawns anytime now! There is quite the herd behind my office and I see them everyday. We usually have one or two sets of twins each spring.

Good Morning from Purdy WA. Chilly here this morning, again. Still waiting on the results of Merlin's bone marrow biopsy. He is eating good, and is getting over the ordeal of the ultrasound (shaved belly) and the biopsy (shaved shoulder and bid scab, and sore). We both slept good last night. It was so good to see all the love for Merritt last night on the chat!! I know she went off on her trip with all of us in her heart!! Hope everyone has a great day!

 Only popped in briefly this morning and went thru a few pages of early chat and haven't read what's probably been posted since then. I did note Eric Behm's (the author of Molly's e-book) and his request for viewer to email him at ericbehm.com to express your support for the book to be published in hard cover (or a good soft cover would satisfy me) so that he can show our support to a publisher who might publish one. I think there is unanimous consensus here that it would be a good idea. I urge everyone to send an email with your opinion to him. Let him know, too, that there are many people here who are not even aware of what an ebook is, have eyesight problems which will make it difficult to read from a computer monitor, are not computer savvy when it comes to downloading, flash drives, want a book that they can hold in their hands or can buy as a gift for granddaughter, etc.

Oh, Natalie - I just put it on my wish list at Amazon. It looks like a fantastic book, just my cup o' tea! I'm going to order it soon. I have about 50 books on my wish list, but this one is going straight to the top of the list. I'm going to get the trade paperback, since I'm really hard on my books. I must always have my current with me wherever I go, walking or driving. If it's a really good book and I can't put it down, it eventually gets rained on and folded back because I read it as I walk. Been doing that all my life. I thought you would get a kick out of that!

I thought I had no siblings as I was adopted as a baby and bought up as an only child - my parents died around 15 years ago within a couple of years of each other and that was when I felt I needed siblings most - however two years ago I traced my birth mother (or tummy mummy as she calls herself!) and it turns out I've got 2 half brothers - its like I've known them all my life - there is something really special about that 'blood' bond which I never thought I would experience - and strangely it turns out that one of them is also a gardener - and 2 of my boys share the same birthdays as my brothers!! - its a funny old world LOL!!

We anthropomorphize because we're humans! We see them from our perspective, and they see us from their perspective (I really don't want to know how they perceive us because I would probably be embarrassed!) As long as we're aware of what we're doing, I don't see anything wrong with that.

Good evening to you Cheryl. Hey, not that it makes any difference but the photo that I posted the other day of mama Junco on our arbor that got us all talking about Wisteria? Like I said we have quite a few Wisteria but after the fact, I realized that was our Jasmine arbor, not the Wisteria one. I only mention it now because it's quite an impressive vine now, very similar in look to our Wisteria vine. It's amazing how these little rubber band vines can morph into arbor breaking ones.

Here is the Wisteria. It was an identical arbor to the Jasmine but last summer we had to remove the panels (oh what a pain) as it was moving the whole structure with it's weaving through them. They are plastic panels and you can't bend or break them, you need a saw, but the vines have no problem breaking them. As you can see we have had to brace the structure until we decide how to fix this!

Kathryn R posted this letter from Eric Blehm, the author of Moly's book. Please tellhimif you want a hard copy of Moly's book. "Thank you. I've e-met lots of nice people from the Sportsmans Paradise chat.... Please do spread the word there, that I am collecting emails.... I'm hoping to get hundreds, if not thousands to show a publisher.... If I got enough people to commit, I could even publish it myself with a quality self publishing company. But that is a last resort. I'd rather leave the publishing to a big publishing house. Anyway, please do spread the word about this option. Have people include a good email address that will last a while (this could happen in two months, six months, or a year from now?) and or a phone number or mailing address. Hi All!
I didn't get to watch much last night and this is the first I've been able to check on our little family this morning. I think, and I've been suffering with withdrawal symptoms. But I'm off work tomorrow and Monday so this should be a good weekend of viewing, especially since we are so near the end of this great adventure. Just read back through the basement:

- Patti got a rabbit?!? Too cool!
- I love the story about McGee bringing a rodent back, then tossing it into the box for Wesley; these owls continue to astound me.
- I see people continue to worry about Wes so I'm glad to see others pointing out that he's younger, still learning to fly and doing fine.
- I really appreciate the links posted for children's books about observation of nature. Teach 'em young to be aware of nature, to cherish our world & all of its inhabitants, to understand how complex it is and to see man's influence & impact.

I don't blame you. That is what I kept running into, but not having to go back even so far to have that problem. So, do you want me to shrink them or just leave them? If I shrink them, do I let you replace them on the page, or would I?

It's not normally a problem for me, but I forgot to turn off a video in another hidden window before digging. 😊

Yes, you can shrink those if you have the time.
You can replace or I will, doesn't matter to me.
I have local copies of everything I've uploaded, so no worries about deleting anything.

For that matter, shrink anything you want in the PDF files section. I didn't start labeling them as huge until late, so there are many 15-50mb files still up there that could be reduced substantially in size.

Sleeping owls in their dreams are hearing the Beetle's song:

It's been a hard day's night
And I've been hunting like an owl
Soaring through midnight sly
Looking for a vole or some mice.

It's going to be all up to me
When I set myself free
Away from the box
To be all I can be

I'm going to sleep through the day
Pick off these downy feathers
All the way
Prepping for the very day
When I fly away in the dark sky

It's been a hard day's night...

All 4 are still inside. They are growing up and won't be around much longer though. The box looks smaller because they are now larger, and they are also standing a little closer to the camera than normal.

While the time is narrowing down to our babies leaving the nest I am collecting as many photos as possible to keep for the collection of this most wonderful experience. Having them stored in my computer will be helpful in making cards and just playing with in photoshop.
If a site like this never comes my way again I will have them as a great memory of the times we all came together as friends in owl land.

Carlos was on at 5a.m PDT this morning and mentioned Westley was the only one not taking off with the other three to follow Molly on training flights. He also said Westley is doing exactly what the others did at his age, which is checking his skills right there close to home, but was out.

Yes, and by staying in the box he got the treat that (I thought it was McGee) brought in just before dawn. The others were on the landing pad squawking at McGee, who landing near them, dangling the copper chain he sees Wesley halfway hanging out of the box, and flies up to give the treat to Wesley. It was so sweet to see...

I for one need to believe these owls will continue on with their journey near Carlos's house. How fortunate for all of us to have witnessed this amazing journey with them and together we have been bound to them. So happy that they have been safe and maybe Molly will be back or one of her babies to start a new process. We have learned so much. A happy near ending but also a happy start to 4 more owls... Don't Go little owlets stay for us what will we do without our fixes?!!

Hello Friends, I won't bother with my idle chatter, I just wanted to know if there is a logical way to tell the owls apart, and does the white chested one in the rear of the box indicate a male? Are the speckled chests females? It's hard for me to determine them apart.

Max looks the most like Molly - gold breast and covered in spots. Pattison is mostly white on the front and looks much like Max in size/shape of head. Austin is next but I don't remember any truly distinguishing features. He's hard to pick out unless they all line up. Wesley still had a good bit of downy fuzz as of last night, and was easy to ID outside the box due to that. I haven't seen him well enough in the light this am to tell if he still has much left after flapping around all outside last night. But his face/head is the least developed.

I won't make assumptions on gender. Too early to tell in my opinion.

The easiest way is to go to Molly's blog and look at the high res photos. Carlos labels them with the owl/owlets name if he knows who it is. You can clearly see the difference in markings from those photos.

Just a couple recommendations for you before I have to go out. I picked two books off my shelf that are about observing nature and especially geared for children, neither one mentions owls but they portray the principle of watching and observing nature that Carlos keeps talking about. Both are written in a narrative/story form and are a gentle encouragement for anyone to watch nature. My children enjoy both of these books.

Yes, he flew around most of the night. Pictures below. Scroll and click "More."

He spent most of his time stretching his wings between the rooftop and the platform and perches.

He disappeared for a while while I was watching, maybe flew to the ground or fence, then he was back on the roof minutes later.

Kathryn R posted this letter from Eric Blehm. He needs you to tel him if you want a hard copy of Molly's book.

"Thank you. I've e-met lots of nice people from the Sportsmans Paradise chat.... Please do spread the word there, that I am collecting emails... I'm hoping to get hundreds, if not thousands to show a publisher.... If I got enough people to commit, I could even publish it myself with a quality self publishing company. But that is a last resort. I'd rather leave the publishing to a big publishing house.

Anyway, Please do spread the word about this option. Have people include a good email address that will last a while (this could happen in two months, six months, or a year from now?) and or a phone number or mailing address. Best, Eric "

Go watch Carlos and Donna testing equipment in the park. Is Austen a grandson? Maybe all the owls are named for family members?

Yes, Austen is a grandson! He has been extremely helpful to Carlos and Donna with the technology of this adventure!

If you use Picasa for managing photos, open it and keep it idle in your taskbar. You can then hit your Print Screen button numerous times and capture a ton of screen shots. Picasa will start a folder called, you guessed it, Screen Captures, and all your cool pics of the owlets will be there ready for you to edit.

Jan, thanks for your instructions. I had no idea that was even there! I will try it and see what happens. How exciting. I've been wondering how y'owls were doing that.

In XP you click prt sc then open your paint program from the accessories menu, then click ctrl V then click file then save as and name your picture. Repeat as necessary.

If you have Windows 7 go to Start and there is a snipping tool at the top. Click on that and it will prompt you. You can crop with it too.

Hey Austin I was trying to think of a good park to have it in. My first thought was Pullen but I believe Pullen is still closed. Any thoughts?

Yeah, I think Pullen is closed for a while. I don't really know. I'm not very familiar with the parks for picnic purposes, just with Unstead for hiking.

Well, with a 4 year old we do all the parks with play areas it seems. There are tons of parks. I think if we pick a location Raleigh/Cary etc we could then easily find a park.

Care to drive to Durham? Want a nature park next to a river? Someplace you can go for a long or short hike afterwards?
Try the Eno River State Park - <http://www.ncparks.gov/visit/parks/enr/main.php> or the West Point on the Eno River park - <http://www.enoriver.org/eno/parks/WestPoint/westpoint.html> or one of the other Eno River park locations.

I am a member/volunteer for the Eno River Association.
I'm usually active only around the annual music festival, over July 4th, but I still hike all around there quite often. There are actually several different parts of the Eno River park system. If it's a possibility, let me know and I can give everyone a good idea of what to expect at each location.

Thanks, Mollie. I'm pretty sure there was a 10th treat at the end that didn't get counted. It was visible close-up from one of the owl's beaks standing on the ledge to the right of the screen around 7:35 EDT.

Good morning everyone.
Woke up earlier than normal, thanks to Carlos and to falling asleep last night with the PC on and the volume up.
That was a little startling this morning, despite his nature.

Here are a few images I grabbed of the activity last night/this am.
