                This one was written after Carlos' close encounter with an owlet who landed near him on the fence. (I promise, for those that are sick of it, this is the last time tonight I post this.)
                Carlos Royal sits,
                Watching owlets fly above.
                Pensive, in the dark.
                An owl approaches:
                On silent wings it lands near.
                "Hello Man", says Owl.
                "We proudly honor
                The one who shared our story.
                Your world watched us grow.
                "Welcome to OUR world!
                Through your dreams, join us in flight;

                         I saw the best minds on the internet obsessed by owlets, intrigued long into the night, dragging themselves through dark hallways to their computers at dawn, looking for an early fix; dedicated owlsters longing for one more flight of McGee, that feathery dynamo in the machinery of night.
                         Skelet on Treasures flung into the corner - no one's safe in the animal soup of the owlbox.
                         Owly, Owly, Owly! Every owl's an angel!

                         Clockwise, starting from top left. Last image is in the center.
                         Don't know for sure, but I think the dark frame is due to the camera self-adjusting exposure right after Carlos flashed.
                         I have two frames which came out that way. A bit odd, but I like odd.

  Bear with me for another one of my "tomes" - As we start into the long Memorial weekend, gather with with family & friends and remember our loved ones, say a prayer, too, for those who are serving this great country and for those who gave their all. The text from some pictures emailed me today - "Thanksgiving - a day when we pause to give thanks for the things we have" "Memorial Day - a day when we pause to give thanks to the people who fought for the things we have." - Will probably post this sentiment again tomorrow evening. Good night all.

       How long ya been hoviering or were you someone else, Iol! Remember the day Wesley was "sent to the corner" 'cause he couldn't figure out how to get

Do you realize that:
We all qualify as field biologists due to the thousands of hours watching and writing about owls.
We have spent thousands of hours reading, posting and writing poems and haikus about ow is.
Thinking, dreaming and getting bleary eyed all night over owls Making up an entire owl lexicology, and owlcronyms.
Making new friends, some maybe for life!
Reading owl cartoons and books
Drinking out of an owl mug
 ...And loving every minute of it! 😃

Ruth ~ the owlwhisperer!
okay I'm heading to bed and bath. Good excuse when the cam system keeps freezing, burping, bleching, hiccuping and horking at me!!!! ... I was able to catch Carlos for part of the morning - appears he comes on about 8:30E, 7:30C, 6:30, 5:30 respectively in the time zones ????? He is the light to all of this.
LOVE listening to the true whisperer.

as much as we want. Wes to be as much of a "healthy and normal owl" as the others and get on with his life (or hers), i figure that Wes is doing things in his own sweet time, and will do what he needs to do soon enough. bittersweet though it may be for us, these extra minutes and hours that we get to watch the life adventure unfold are exceedingly precious, and in this world of ours of human troubles, a lovely and most welcome respite into the actual natural world outside

I would bet that is Wesley and Austin in the box. Austin seems to look after Wesley....

                                  Thank you. I've e-met lots of nice people from the Sportsmans Paradise chat.... Please do spread the word there, that I am collecting emails... I'm hoping to get hundreds, if not thousands to show a publisher.... If I got enough people to commit, I could even publish it myself with a quality self publishing company. But that is a last resort. I'd rather leave the publishing to a big publishing house.
                                  Anyway.

Please do spread the word about this option. Have people include a good email address that will last a while (this could happen in two months, six months, or a year fromnow?) and or a phone number or mailing address. Best, Eric She's not too scared. She's already been out and around and then back in. She's not hunting yet and still associates being in the box with being fed.

                                 Give her 3 more days and she'll be out there with her siblings.

                                 Not all prey is under the snow--rabbits would be available. It also depends on the kind of owl as some do migrate.

                                 Mice make tunnels under the snow to get to where their food is. Owls locate their prey by hearing, and they can hear the mice moving under the snow.

         A minute or two before the action - Did anyone see news articles or the CBS news today about the tiny frogs that were swarming across a road in northern Greece on Wednesday? The road had to be closed becaue so many cars were skidding off the road. Thoughts are that the frogs were crossing from a nearby lake to look for food. The news film was awesome.

We have fireflies here - not usually until June. Does anyone rememer catching fireflies and putting theminto a glas jar with a lid that our mother or father had poked holes in. That was a whole evening's entertainment for us then. of course, we had to release thembefore we went back inside. I snuck my jar inside one night to put in my bedroom, hoping it would be my night light, but my Mom found it and took the poor things bak outside to fly

                         While we're waiting for fly time, here's another old poem. This one is from March.
                         A GIFT SO RARE
                         Oh look! For here we have the fearsome pair Known well to us as Molly and McGee.
                         They gave us all a gift so very rare:
                         The chance to watch owls living wild and free.
                         Their saga started earlier this year
                         When mated hearts were touched by Nature's Hand.
                         They chose a home so comfy and so dear
                         On Carlos' camera laden owlbox stand.
                        McGee brought food while Molly calmly stayed
                         As millions watched the precious little batch;
                        Upon soft down and rabbit fur she laid
                         Oh when, we asked, will these eggs ever hatch?
                         We won't believe that this could be our folly:
                         This passion for the family of Molly!

No, those are the types of people who like to stir up the general public. They also like to negate all good things that people like the Royals are doing.

                   Had my 3 grandchildren (8,10,12) today - we went to the zoo, and I was looking for barn owls. I really wanted to see one in person (?), to get a perspective on their size. None there! Actually, BC (Before Carlos), I NEVER even gave barn owls a thought!! Now they're on my mind (and often on my computor!)

                   I went to the site last night where someone had referenced the "complaints" about Owl Boxes being built not according to government regulations. Well if the government could have taxed the popularity of Molly, Magee and their brood we would not be in a national deficit! I was disgusted by the time I finished reading the article... I have several bird houses, mostly bluebird, in my yard scattered over 3 acres, I amsure they would not meet government standards but that doesn't keep the parents from raising their families there. What about the nest of barn swallows I have within 3 feet of my kitchen door? I am sure someone's privacy is being violated there, some breach of building codes, but I feel since the birds call it home...It is their home too. Bless Carlos for sharing these wonderful images with us....we would never have had the opportunity otherwise. I appreciate his hard efforts and concern for this family!

Well put, momzlaw!! I, too, have had several bird houses that were probably not built to govrnment standards. Most were crudely home-built (but we did follow printed suggestions as to size, hole diameter, etc. according to the species of birds we wanted to attract). It didn't matter much to the birds. They just chose it because they wanted it, not because a building inspector approved or a real estate agent tried to sell it to them (whoops - nothing against real estate agents, folks) !!

                          Those are wonderful pics. No doubt that there is great affection and bonding between those two. It is remarkable that some species are able to act like that and other owls (like the great horned) are quite different. Apparently the GH babies fight and the tope owlet pushes the weaker one out of the nest or kills it. Maybe it has something to do with density and the habitat.

                          A 50/50 chance either male or female 😃 There is a lot of speculation based on theie present coloring, spots on the breasts, etc. and others may post their thoughts; but I don't think it has been positively established yet.

                          Spots are a female attribute... however there is also some notes that say juveniles can also have spots.... so we really don't know. I'm boking at their faces, and some are whiter than the othes. Males have a whiter face.

                    Earlier two of the owlets (you decide whoooooooooo) were "kissing and holding hands" in a really playful, sweet way. Carlos came on right after and mentioned it, too. I had just posted captures of it, and thought I'd repost themnow. It really was a delightful and unique few moments with these two, and nothing like I had seen before. I really believe the science community can and has learned a lot from Carlos' cams which he has shared with the world.

One is awake and moving around. Others hear the alarmgoing off and know its time to wake up so they can get ready for the night but they must be thinking "just 10 more minutes." Little do they know how many of us are waiting for the night flight to begin. Wake up sleepy heads. Sunset is upon you!

Hello! I'm in and right back out to bed. Long weekend so I'll get to stay up tomorrow! Wow, we're missing a prominent avatar, hmm? Hope she's having fun!
Blessings for a beautiful night. Unope Carlos takes some pix at the picnic like he did when he went to SD.

        Some people in a valvo group (can't remember the name)...were expressing "concerns" about the owl house size and saving that the "flases" where bad for the owlets. Personally, I feel they were talking about something that they had no real facts on. We all know that Carlos & Donna have been careful to do what was best for the owlets the whole time.

       We could go into a lot more detail on the people who were stirring up trouble... but that's just going to stir it up again and this site isn't the place for it. I understand people wanting to know more but some of this goes back to February and it would get to be a very long story. Rhonda's statement (and James' Yellow Man) really sums it up very well. Let's just enjoy the owls tonight.

Carlos had Fish and Game come out to his property to see the owl box and get their opinion on his set up and ask a few questions. They loved the way he had things set up and were so glad to hear that many others are now putting up owlboxes. He also asked if the flashes from his camera bothered the owls as some people were worried about that. They told him that it doesn't harm or hurt them at all. It would only be bad if the babies were tiny and the camera was real close shooting into the box. We know that NEVER happened.

Hi TByrd. That must be so difficult being so far apart. Regarding my name, my parents loved to tell me how when I was born I was a premie (2 mos early) and they didn't have a name picked out yet, and since I was born at dawn, thought of that name. I heard that story from the time I was a little girl 🙂

         I didn't get to hear Carlos very long this morning, but I did catch the proud bragging moment when he said he was like typical parents and thought his owlets were more "advanced" than most, and were learning to fly very quickly compared to video that he had previously seen. Reminded me of bumper stickers that people have to brag up their children. I think he would like this one.

A hard copy hasn't been published yet. Eric has suggested that anyone interested in having one published to email himso he can take these emails to a publisher as proof there is a great interest ina hard cover book. Eric is making no promises that it will be done, but he will try.

         (This sonnet is from mid or late April, Ithink.)
         A TIME TO FLY
         The owls are growing larger every day
         With feathers almost ready for the sky.
         How can we keep their urge to fly at bay
         Until we're sure the time is right to try?!?
         Alas this is a daily trial for all,
         The owls and Watchers Loyal all alike!
         We hold our breaths in case we see a fall,
         Concerned for each and every little tyke.
         One day too soon our Maxie will embark
         To try her strength upon the fragile breeze;
         Her wings will spread against the sky so dark.
         Then siblings, one by one, their night will seize.
         Away they'll fly and take our hearts along Upon their wings: a laugh, a cry, a song.

                    Back home and got a couple pics for you. Couldn't stay long enough to see when mama would come back but we'll check on the little one tomorrow.
                    In the second picture, the fawn is against the brick at the near corner and not quite under the electric meter. Can't see the little bugger at all.
                    It's been a long day so I am not staying up tonight.

                           Very nice. No worries, momis likely not far. I have to keep telling people near me that each year. They see an "abandoned" fawn and always think the worst. They always seem to want to intervene, when most likely the momand the fawn know exactly what they're doing. Kudos for you to for not

                           I was walking in the woods one early morning and lo and behold a doe jumped up and ran in one direction and then I saw a baby fawn trying to wobble in another. I walked back the way I came and did not turn around, the mother absolutely knew what she was doing. Drawing the attention to herself and away from the baby. So brave.

Congrat to your son, Kristi. As a Mom whose son graduated in June and into the Air Force in Sept. 1983, I still remember how torn I was - a sense of pride in his accomplishments and the sadness of the "empty nest" that followed.

                    I've posted a lot of poetry since this all started. Since we are (SADLY!) getting close to the end of this experience I'm going to repost a couple of my favorites.
                     This one was written after Carlos' close encounter with an owlet who landed near himon the fence. Jan asked for it to be reposted and I like it too, so here it is! I'll try to get it to post in one reply.

Pensive, in the dark. An owl approaches: On silent wings it lands near. "Hello Man", says Owl. "We proudly honor The one who shared our story. Your world watched us grow. "Welcome to OUR world! Through your dreams, join us in flight;

      Owlosaurus I spoke to Donna Royal today after I had sent her a card with a poem I had written, she called me and asked my permission to post it on her blog. Naturally I was honored. Anyway since she doesn't see this site I told her about all the amazing poetry here and she would love to see them. If you would like to send them to her she would love it, or if you like I can copy them and send them to her by e-mail. It would be nice if you sent them though with your real name as you should get credit for your great poetry.
       Let me know what works for you.

       Thank you, Owlo - of all the wonderful poetry written here, this one is my favorite. When he was talking about being out with the owls this morning, all I could think of was this poem. I'm sure you've been to the basement; did you see that one of our regulars mailed her poem to the Royals and Donna called her and asked if she could put it on her web page? You should mail it to them, Owlo - it sounds like they really DO read their mail!
       Oh, and for heaven's sake, please put this in the Haiku section of the poetry page so it won't be lost to posterity!!

With many nesting birds, the parents will "beak out" the waste, cleaning the nest as needed. Barn owls have apparently adapted to just standing on one foot ...LOL 😃

      When the owlets were just hatching, someone answered this, something about that area being bristles and they sometimes part so we see that line.

       Nancy, that is completely normal. Sometimes it seems more pronounced to me. Sometimes less. When Molly was in the nest full-time, a lot of us

                           YES!! I did see it, Natalie!! I responded but it's pretty far down! Does that mean we'll be able to see Molly if she returns for a second clutch? That is too wonderful to think about!

                           Rhunette, if I understand, Hunting/Fishing is leaving the room open, but Carlos is going to shut the video feed off, once the last owlet has left the nest.
                           I haven't heard him make any pronouncement as to whether he will restart the cameras it if another family occupies the nest. If anyone else has heard anything along those lines, I'd love to know!

                           Rhunette, as Elliott says, H/F has aid they will leave the site open. My personal feeling is that, if Molly and Mcgee do have a second clutch, Carlos will probably not want to go through all this again. It has tied him and Donna down among other things. Still, that doesn't mean we can't still meet here and look at some of the other fabulous web cams together. Or just shoot the breeze, for that matter! 😃

                    The evening Lilly & Hope Black Bear update:
                    The reunification has apparantly gone well and the two spent quality time together today.
                    Hope went ballistic when they were reintroduced after 5 days apart , seemingly saying, "why did you leave me all alone mom, I was so scared and I'm sooo hungry!
                    There is a video of the reunion but the sound is not great Lilly seems a little confused at first but promptly gets with the program and nurses famished Hope.

                           The researcers are not sure why mom took off but think she might have been defending her territory from another Bear.
                           She left Hope sleeping in a tree and ventured too far away. They had some pretty heavy rains in the area for a couple of days and think mom lost the scent when the cub ventured away after waking and finding Lilly gone

                    Okay - one more. The really one one on the left (no longer there) just came up and horked off camera - I'm pretty sure. The two in front just stared at him after he did it, and he finally looked at them like, "What? You do it too!" It was quite the stare-off. Then, they all looked at the pellet that we couldn't see.
                    Then the one in the middle did his version of smiling and the white one hung his head in shame. I swear I saw it all, and the only thing I have had to drink tonight is decaf hot tea. These little guys entertain me!

Hi Amy, Barn owls are nocturnal so they sleep most of the day and are up all night. They sleep standing up!!!!

Okay, the two in front kind of look like siamese owls. 2 owls, 2 legs - you know, like twins.
On that note, I better go to bed! Clearly I need sleep before another day with my fourth graders!

                          The poem is a 3 or 4-part Haiku, and it starts out, "Carlos Royal sits abne in the dark..." (or something close to that.)

                    does chain saw carvings). "Chippy" was eating some sort of bulb he had dug up somewhere in my garden. Finished it off and went over to my inovative (plastic

                          I'd sooner think it would be mice or chipmunks. Squirrels don't usually burrow down that far. The only Spring bulbs I can have here are daffodils and some tulips. The "critters" including deer, dig up everything else.

                          Yes! Yes! And I loved Misty of Chinooteague! My older sister had a passion for horses, and we shared those two books. Now that I remember, I had another book illustrated by Marguerite Henry: "Cinnabar, the One o'clock Fox." Another great book. They must have been all from a series because they were all laid-out the same.

Marla, are you there? Re: horses. These are two of my favorite pics (not because of me, but because of the horses)
First one (waaay back) is me on my sister's Arabian.
Second one (more recently...but still a few years back) is me with a million $ Arabian stallion at this Arabian farm we visited in Duchess County, NY. Every time I look at it I cry, just from the remembrance. The trainer took a shine to me and he let me hold Moonstone Bey's lead. That was one of the most complete and joyous connections. I've ever experienced with an animal.

       Natalie.....Just georgeous!! I love horses and always have. My experience was quite different. I grew up in a city, my parents owned race horses (I was too young to understand, but loved them), and I went to a camp that had riding. I have always been amazed by there beauty. Just their eyes say so much. Haven't been around one in ages. I hope someday I can.

       Oh, Natalie, how beautiful they are! You must have felt like you were in church when you went to the Arabian farm! When I was a little girl, my Aunt gave me a book called "King of the Wind - the story of the Godolphin Arabian." It left a deep and lasting impression on me. What a horse and what a story!

       Do you remember who illustrated that book, Natalie? It's on the tip of my tongue . . . Wesley Dennis?? Anyway, those pictures were so wonderful - a child could fall into them and completely be in another world and time (as happened to me!)

                        I saw one of the owlets pecking at the left foot on the owlet closes to the camera. I remember on a hot summer day walking out to the end of a deserted dock. I took off my shoes and socks and cooled my feet in the cool lake water. After a while I felt something around the soles and toes of my feet. I looked down and there were baby trout giving my feet a pedicure--and they didn't charge me a dime.

                                That brought back some nice memories, Mike. I can remember doing the same thing. Schools of those tiny fish would "nibble" all around our feet. Not sure ours were trout though. I just thought of themas "fry" of any species oh my goodness, you're right....they have a Monopoly for everything!

Umm, Colleen? Doesn't that thing get uncomfortably hot? I'm sure it voids the warranty in some way... 😃

Maybe some of you could make and market a "Mollyopoly" game as a fund raiser. Colleen would have to hold the copyright to the name though - her original idea. Thre does seem to be a Monopoly game for lots of places. We spend the winter in Englewood, FL and one of the churches thre was even selling "Enlewoodopoly" games - that's a mouthful!!!
