OK, hopefully you all are seeing my posts as I've posted, and not random inserted, i.e. at 2:38, but I stand by the mood I was trying to convey: I don't watch hoping each of these will get enough and survive another day; I check in because I want to see: "Clowns to the left of me, jokers to the right."

they're hysterical! and if that's not why you watch, then I don't get why. We're allowed this opportunity to watch what happens for time out of mind but we get to see the expression in the eyes/disc feathers. We get to watch when an owl in preening his/her-self and doesn't "get" where they end and a sibling begins... Joy vs drama - I get to choose what I'm watching. Thank you Carlos. (Donna, you must laugh all day.)

Nearly 2 million "Jack Rabbits" were taken by hunters annually in California. Square miles in California 163707. About 12 Jackrabbits per sq mile assuming even distribution. Actually less in cities and more in rural areas (like San Marcos).

But if these left-overs are left outside on the landing platform, I am doubtful that the owlets would venture out in broad daylight when they are hungry and try and go down there to retrieve any left-over food. I could be wrong, but so far none have gone outside of the owl box during the day. They have only stood by the door at times to look out or perhaps cool themselves off. JMO

Time to call it a day (night ??). Daylight will be here on the East Coast in a VERY few hours. I'll check back in the mornings for updates, but won't be joining the "VIRTUAL" picnic festivities. My family and friends already think I'm nuts when I slip and tell them that I sit and watch an owl box part of the day and into the wee hours. If I tell them that I "watched" a picnic in CA on a beautiful, sunny Saturday, they would be certain that I am positively "certifiable". Good night all.

I think we are beginning to see a lot less of the sibling bonding and more sibling rivalry, especially during the feeding hours. It's the natural instinct of survival and makes me pretty sure they will not remain best buddies after they are on their own.

I agree. Inside the owl box, it was necessary for survival in a close space. Outside the owl box, it's a hindrance to survival. I've even noticed lately that some of the mutual preening seemed to be ending up almost in nipping. Have you noticed that?

To paraphrase Twain - The reports of "sharing and feeding one another" have been greatly exaggerated!

There has been no quarrelling over food, for sure, but eating is something that each is left to handle on their own. (parental deliveries excepted) The notion of these siblings caring for one another by delivering food to each other is something I doubt we've actually seen, despite how some here interpreted the acts on screen. 😊

The wide angle lenses distort the view and change the perspective, causing an apparent size difference when one is closer to the camera. When the sit side by side, it is clear they are pretty much the same size.

Just a reminder: On Memorial Day, fly your flag, today give a donation to a VFW member for a red Buddy Poppy (contact your local VFW), wear it proudly and at 3 p.m. local time on Memorial Day everywhere pause for one minute to remember those who have made the ultimate sacrifice for us. Take time to thank a Veteran! Please remember that Memorial Day is not just a party; it is about the sacrifices of our country's military sons and daughters.

 It's early for them- but late for me.
 Before I give in to a little "snack" myself, better turn in.
 Hope there will be new photos on BLOG tomorrow- love those.
 And of course, I have a date to watch the picnic!
 Till then-

 Merlin is getting better. The bone marrow biopsy showed nothing abnormal. He goes in Tues for another blood draw. He is eating great, and even barking at me now when he wants to go out or be fed!! Also begging! Thanks for asking!!

It's a lot quieter now when a delivery is made to the owl box. Remember when all four of them were in there and Moly or McGee dropped off a treat? The noise was almost deafening, what with the hissing and stomping going on!

It's true! The rhythm of sounds and activity is really different now. Deliveries used to trigger this screeching mayhem that lasted a looong time. It was weirdly primal but I kind of miss it (!).

My sister had mentioned that a mother owl had laid some eggs and the babies had hatched. She called and spoke with my son and gave him the web address, "you have to see the owls!" I was hooked afterwards. But she's not able to watch at night here (EDT) so she misses all the delivery action and usually only able to watch in the late afternoon early evening.

A friend of ours, a real sportsman...Hunting Fishing, etc., sent the link to THIS webcam. As the owls matured, we came more and more often. Then 1 morning I stumbled across Carlos talking about how they would be coming out of the box soon, and I have been glued to this cam ever since. Have checked out the other wildlife cams, but this one Speaks for Itself, thanks to the Effort put in by Carlos, Donna, and the countless other individuals handling the Wiki, Moly's Blog, etc!! WILL MOST DEFINITELY feel a sense of loss in my life when the Owlets leave for good 😊

On a screen, no, not me. In the yard maybe, at least with the local hawks since I've not ever been able to watch any owls, feeding or otherwise. Where I moved from I could sit and watch hawks take pigeons roosting in and around an abandoned factory. That was always exciting.

I did watch a few animal cameras for very brief periods of time in the past, but certainly not anything this compelling.

Girls and boys, are come out to play, The moon doth shine as bright as day, Leave your supper, and leave your sleep, And come with your playfellows into the street. Come with a whoop, come with a good will or not at all. Up the ladder, and down the wall. A half penny roll will serve us all. You find milk, and I'll find flour, And we'll have a pudding in half an hour. Other versions often put boys before girls in the opening line

All of these Barn Owls lives, from baying eggs and Molly's loving care & this amazing instinctual act born to Molly & McGee are life affirming to me. There isn't a plan or "shall we do this or that". Dear Nature allows these beautiful owlets to come to their chance at survival & reproduction. All life has its challenges. I amis and Donna gave us a spectacular and technically amazing look into the beauty and love of a mother and father to their young. OK, I'm already weeping. I amis Galesburg, IL. So not going to the picnic. But, I will always treasure this. Any Barn Owl picnic in IL?

There is a group card being made for Carlos & Donna. I heard about when I bgged on this morning. In case you hadn't heard about it and would like to leave a message for them as it is quite a nice site. Here is where you can go to leave your words of thanks to a great couple.

 Hard to believe I'm signing off before OZ time but tonight I have to do it.
 Wishing you all a wonderful evening - owls and owlwatchers alike!

Hey, if anyone hears about a Molly gathering in Central Florida, please post it. The Audubon Center in north Orlando would be a natural gathering place! They even have a beautiful events deck on the edge of a lake where we could meet.

 And it really will take a miracle. My thoughts are with everyone in Louisiana and the whole Gulf Coast. You already suffered enough with the hurricanes and still haven't fully recovered from them. I can't even comprehend the enormity of the current and long term effects of this oil spill to the people, their livelihoods and to the environment.

 Yesterday, 19:22:34 - Flag - Like - Reply

 You have to scroll. Some people open 2 browser windows -- one for the video and the other for the chat stream. And then some people open even more but never mind that! 😊
 Yesterday, 19:28:11 - Flag - Like - Reply

 As Latrippi said, you have to scroll back. Most people will make comments or replies within a few minutes, so it isn't bad unless the chat room is VERY busy. I often make a note of the time that I make a post that I want or need to go back to. It makes the scroll back a little quicker.

Laura, I never encourage anyone to be flagged if it's just a little playing around. Kids will be and should be kids. But sometimes it gets out of control and this poster has a long, long history here - sometimes becoming very disruptive. Sometimes you just need to bring out the boot! 😊

Email addresses don't show up in the card. Here's what the site says about email addresses: "Rest assured, we only use the email addresses you provide for the purposes of signing your card. We send one invitation email, plus a reminder to sign the card later. That's it. Furthermore, all recipients can unsubscribe from any and all GroupCard emails." <http://www.groupcard.com/help/>

And I'll swap you stories. Here's a recent NY Times Magazine article that discusses in depth some similar issues. It deals more specifically with homosexuality in animals and birds, but also covers monogamy. <http://nytimes.com/2010/05/16>

It's a fascinating read but it is pretty long. Good Sunday morning material, with a pot of coffee or tea.

On Memorial Day, fly your flag, today give a donation to a VFW member for a red Buddy Poppy (contact your local VFW), wear it proudly and at 3 p.m. local time everywhere on Memorial Day pause for one minute to remember those who have made the ultimate sacrifice for us. Take time to thank a Veteran! Please remember that Memorial Day is not just a reason for a party; it is about the sacrifices of our country's military sons and daughters.

My siste-in-law had a cat that she had declawed and couldn't keep inside. She had all four paws declawed. She lived outside to be 22 years old. She managed to live at three different houses and environments and refused to be an inside cat. Never had a problem even climbing trees. Hard to explain, but she did fine.

We lived in military housing and had our cats declawed so they didn't ruin the drapes. When we left, he became an outdoor cat and lived 20 yrs outdoors. He would leave dead birds and snakes that he caught on the porch for us to step out and see in the mornings.

I know this can be a "hot topic" for folks, but let me just say: we've had cats for over 25 years. All have been indoor only, declawed in front. All have been happy kitties who've lived out their days believing they could still claw things. And we've happily let them "invisibly" claw away on furniture. 😊 Our vet is super... he keeps the kitties sedated and quiet for 1 day after the surgery. They come home with tender toes but are fit and zipping around less than a week. No post-traumatic stress.

That is good to hear. I really wanted to get our last kitten declawed, but my vet wouldn't do it. He didn't believe in it. That discouraged me, but next time I will find a good vet that will do as your did. Thanks for letting me know.

I really struggled with the decision when we had our first cat. When I saw how fast the recovery was, with no after-effects, I was sold. We're happy, the furniture's happy, and the cats truly believe the claws are still there. 😊

Notes from Carlos "morning meeting" ... His grandson Austin will be taking care of all the videotaping at the picnic, doing so for internship in school. Everything will be done from laptop and remote. over 6000 MOD's have received invites - and thus far, about 160 plus have responded with a "yes" ... to be held, stand me if I'm incorrect, at Walnut Park. Eric Blehm is probably attending! This "THE" author of the Molly book. Other MOD picnics are being held across the country. Florida, Phoenix, Houston just held some (or going to, and one in Boston and North Carolina to be held same day as San Marcos's as I understand.

Not that we are a club - this chat is open to ANYONE - who behaves appropriately (no trolls allowed). But if you enjoy Molly and her family, then sorry, you're going to contract Molly Obsessive Disorder. It's contagious!

Will be away (doing bookkeeping - yuk) and other needed things for most of the evening.

So will leave you again with another message - sort of a repost from last night - As you pause to remember loved ones and gather with friends and family this week end be sure to say a prayer for those who are serving this great country and those who gave the "all" to protect our freedoms. Thanksgiving - a day to pause to give thanks for the things we have. Memorial Day - a day when we pause to give thanks to people who fought for the things we have. A very nice link by someone here earlier today - <http://www.arlingtonsmetery.net/flanders.htm>

Me, too, Kristi! One thing I teach those little 3rd graders is that someone is somewhere every day keeping us safe. They know to stand tall and proud each morning for the pledge. Makes me teary even now. I'm so proud of your son. Please tell him so. Now that I'm older the soldiers don't think I'm flirting when I see one. I've always been a soldier hugger.

Sorry about that - I'll check it and come up with the correct one. I had saved that link to a plain text email and recopied it here. That's the second time I've had the same problem - it somehow reverts to Sportsman's Paradise site.

Here is a correction to the one posted above - <http://www.arlingtonsmetery.net/flanders.htm>, and this one should work OK

My thoughts exactly, Natalie. I was feeling a little guilty until you stepped up to the plate. Clean an oven? I thought you just got a new one when they got beyond crusty. Teehee. Just kidding
