Spambot caught my post! For anyone else that wanted to save the info, the KCMO Moly Watcher's Picnic will be at South-Broadland Presbyterian Church on June 5th, 1-3pm.
"The church has plenty of shade, picnic tables, playground, ball field, and restrooms. (We'll also have access to an indoor area, in case of bad weather.) The church is located at 7850 Holmes Road, KCMO 64131 (79th and Holmes). The picnic area is on the west side, behind the church."
They will have a grill set up, and it's BYO Food.

It was organized by one of the moderators of Carlos' chat stream called 'DotRot'.

This has been a really unique experience and I doubt it will be duplicated. Thanks to you all for making me laugh out loud and smile often. I hadn't been doing that as much as I used to. I am sometimes the life of the party in my circles but I've been petering out since the last baby arrived. I have really needed the lifts you all have provided. Merritt - I have posted to you twice today and don't know if we were ever able to see them. If not, maybe when you get back and cannot sleep you can check out the PDF files. I will always remember you as the one who could easily pull an "owl nighter" and stay up for what would seem like 24 hours. Guess you cannot do that this time as you will be flying away like some of the owlets have done. Just know you were one of the first ones to welcome me here and I won't forget that. This is my first experience in a chat room also and it has been a real pleasure meeting you and also everyone else who comes here for the love of the Owls and Owlets (soon to be owls) and also for the friendship and sharing of chat, photos, poetry, haiku (thanks 2 U) and so on. Actually had to FIND the dog first! 😊 She doesn't like rain! But I don't like being awakened 2 hours after I finally get to sleep by a dog who needs to go. So after I found her and carried her to the door 😊 we did not go far. I take a flashlight and walk down our long driveway at night (when it is not raining). We live out side of town so not many folks around. The only time it is bad is when we can hear the coyotes howling or yipping. 😊

Well, sweet SPO Chat Stream friends, I have to say goodnight. I sure hope Austin sticks around another night or two with Wes. The empty Box, I can deal with OK, I think. Wesley alone in the Box all day? Not so much.

SPEAKING of which! The departure of our fearless Merritt is really rending the ol' heart strings tonight! Merritt, I'll never forget the night the OwlBox went dark and I was there with you, and Storymom, and James (not Jim) Hill and Owl Totiem and others too. You, Merritt, with your odd little avatar looking like a lion rearing up to conduct an orchestra -- which in fact, you joined out to bel -- you had us all up and writing haiku before the night was out. I've never seen anything like it! Nor been part of a community quite like this one, which has blossomed so remarkably since, thanks in no small part to your presence.

So thanks, Merritt, for everything, and safe travels. Stay in touch, hear? And I'll see the rest of you tomorrow! (Now, where's that kbenex?)

Barn owls are different from screech owls - another species. But, barn owls don't "hoot" or "who". What you hear is what they do.

Only Great Horned Owls do the sound of "Who" - at least this is what I learned either here or when Carlos did his interview on CBS morning show and they also had a segment with different types of owls on that is what the guy said.

Just thought now would be a good time to post this item from last week:
RECIPE FOR PRESERVING OWLETS - By Storymom

Take 1 large field, 4 adorable baby owls, several trees, a cool brook, a large quantity of field mice and a pinch of pebbles. Mix the owlets and trees together and stir frequently. Pour the brook over the pebbles. Sprinkle the field with flowers, various grasses and the field mice. Fill the trees with a gentle summer breeze. Spread over a deep blue sky and bake in the summer sun. When done, set away safely in a cozy owl box or tree stump. Wrap securely in awe and store in the hearts of everyone.

calm treat work WONDERFULLY, my sister has used them for years. her dog will tear up the furniture to get behind or under it, he senses a storm well before we do so we wrap the forecast and he gets them as needed. I used them with our retriever who has some fear issues when we travel and it helped that as well. not a drug so you don't mind giving it.

well it goes in thru the GI tract since they consume the treat but they seem to work fairly quickly. depends on how much and size of the dog. DOC wont take anything once he senses the storm but your pet may be different He's at a conference at a hotel on River Street. He's been to Charleston, Myrtle Beach and Ft Bragg in the last 2 mos. He goes to Ft Stewart quite often though. He has troops down there to go thru training every so often.

My Boston hates riding in the car, has skin allergies and doesn't like taking meds. Weird little dog but we love him. He won't eat when a storm hits, I don't know if he would think these are treats. He loves treats!!! LOL

Hubby and I were talking about how wonderful it will be that these owlets will have owlets of their own! They clearly have fabulous genes - Mom and Dad are such great parents, and have raised four healthy, strong babies. The owl world is fortunate to have this family continue it's lineage!
It's sad to be saying goodbye to them, but the future is so bright!

having terrible internet issues here tonight!

calm treats work WONDERFULLY, my sister has used them for years. her dog will tear up the furniture to get behind or under it, he senses a storm well before we do so we watch the forecast and he gets the meds needed. i used them with our retriever who has some fear issues when we travel and it helped that as well. not a drug so you don't mind giving it.

Wesley's excuses for being back in the box:
1. He felt cold out, the wind is blowing too hard.

3. He can't fly higher than 15 feet yet. (the height of the owl box)

Send him an email at eric@ericblehm.com and tell him how many books you would like to order, and your contact information. He's hoping to put up a website this weekend with the details on how to pay for the books. He'll also send you an email notification, so make sure he gets yours.

Write to Eric via e-mail and let him know you want one. Eric@EricBlehm.com He will get a total so he knows how many to order and then he will be able to price it. I'm sure there will be more info this week. I think they said he needs to know by the weekend sometime. I think books will have to be paid for in advance + shipping but that info will be made available. A new website for him will open NEXT week. MolytheOwlBooks.com It won't work until next week though from what I remember from the interview today.

Do you think Austin and Wesley are hunting with Moly? Has Moly called to them? Has Moly forgotten about these two? Do they know how to find the other members of the family? Speculation... I need to know. 😊

Hi Share, yes, Austin and Wesley are out hunting with Moly, or at least learning to hunt like Max and Pat did. Moly probably did call to them to come join her. She will look after them until they fly off on their own, for another week or so probably. They are flying together for now and you will probably see all four come back to the box off and on tonight.

What was the problem with the link? He told me a few weeks ago he had it up there because so many people pestered him with emails asking for the link. I had asked why it was there instead of in the facts section. I think he gets a small percentage in profit from amazon.com if someone clicks the link and buys the book.

My guess is they are mad about the comments made here by people from Stacy's group. Personally, I think Stacy herself has done nothing wrong of her than get a bit riled up about the perching system. And then wrote some angry blogs.

dad23kds is not a fan of these particular owl boxes, especially when up a pole. owlets can fall out, etc. she was pretty vocal and it lead to some noise in the chats. people really seemed to take sides. eventually carbs added the landing pads but each has taken a few shots at the other. the book is the story of an owl she raised and her experience with it.

I have no problem with her 'sweet' little story of her and the owl she kept in captivity. My problem is her book being advertised on a web site that she has again and again disagreed with and attacked our chat room, and the way the Royals have done things. My opinion, and I am allowed to have one!

Today, 21:44:38 - Flag - Like - Reply

That is true. It is a free country. The owl she kept in captivity had a damaged nerve in his wing and would die in the wild. One of the startling parts of the book (to me) was her description of the fate of birds and other animals at the rehabilitation center (where she worked) who were turned loose by animal rights activists.

As I think back, first we watched and waited for eggs to hatch. Then we waited to see the babies and watch them being fed. They were watched as they grew up and Mama stopped staying over night. Now we watch the owls fly off, and watch an empty box waiting for the to come back. Will will continue to watch when it is finally empty to see if they come back for a visit? Is there something wrong with us? My house is a mess and I feel guilty when I leave the screen for fear I will miss something!! An empty box, that is what I am watching. What is wrong with me?? this is classic!! I've been finding that "sound" everywhere in ordinary daily activities as well! And someone a couple weeks back mentioned that they heard the same sound while scraping wet cement for a driveway! 😊

Ok, before the fun starts I wanted to thank all of you lovely peeps, too... just in case some of you drop off. I'm usually more of a lurker/likeer than a poster - twin 12mo olds and a 4yo will do that to you, but what fun place to lurk! I've kept Molly and gang on my open laptop on the kitchen counter for what seems like forever now so that whenever I'd pass by I could take a peek. These guys - and you - have added such a breath of fresh air to my crazy days. And the squawks. I've come to find them relaxing at 11 or 12 at night. Strange what I find soothing these days, huh. But anyway, thanks to all for being such nice (and witty!) people to hang around. I do hope it's not the end of the line for everyone, but for those that will be moving on, my very best wishes to you and yours. It's been fabulous and you'll be missed!

Hello Evening and Night Friends! Before the owlets and all of you take flight tonight, I have to tell you tonight is my last night for the next 10 days! Last weekend was my college reunion, and now I'm about to get together with five friends from high school, some of whom I have known since kindergarten, and all whom I have known since at least second grade. We all graduated hs together almost thirty years ago, and now we are getting together for the weekend in my home state of Georgia. I can't wait to see them all again, but I am sorry to be leaving you. I hit the road tomorrow morning and will be gone for more than a week, so I fear when I return, the owlets and most you will have scattered to far off places of your own. If that's the case, I want you to know I have enjoyed spending the past 3 months with you, and I will fondly remember you and this experience from now on.

Don't you have a 24 hour Best Buys nearby? You can get a very usable computer with everything you need for around $400. I know that's not the same thing as free, but you'll be getting the same computing power that would have been $3000 just a few years ago.

Ok, just allow me one more post b4 I get too sentimental and mushy: I kept asking myself today, why is it so hard to "let" the owls go? It's perfectly natural -- we want them to fly and be the wild birds Molly & McGee raised them to be. Aww, I decided because we will never know what became of them: their fate will be a mystery. Will they go on to mate and have babies who go on to have babies? Will one get snatched by yet another predator? Will one get hit by a car? It's the not knowing.

I think of my avatar friends, too. How many of us might pass each other in a mall and think, based on appearance or whatever, that we have little in common? We are so quick to judge and make judgments... It is so nice to have this tie that binds. I'll just lurk now.

Yes, I used to have a stormy Lake Erie.

Here's the info for the program and I've been told the Education Building will also be open--they house 3 permanently injured owls there. (One is blind in one eye and I forget what the others' disability is)

This has been a great experience! I feel like I have this whole new group of friends on here. I hope to stay in touch with some. It will take awhile to get back to the way things were before I fell in love with these owls! I'm trying to remember what I did before!! I've been so captivated by them, I've learned so much. I've laughed, learned a lot, worried, sighed in relief, and enjoyed getting to "know" the regular posters. Carlos and Donna are wonderful to give us this life-enriching experience!! I wish them and the owls and all of you the best! Maybe I'll check the other wildlife webcams once in awhile to see if I see any familiar names, though I know none will compare.
Ok, now I'll get back to some serious owl-watching for the next couple hours, at least.

 It just hit me when I saw just two little owlets, standing their on one leg sleeping, that we won't have too many more nights like this. I can't stop tearing up and this is not like me. I will stay here and watch till I drop tonight and enjoy every minute of it. Was so nice chatting in here. Take care my fellow MOD'S. <sniff>

You missed a good supper here (the first decent meal I've fixed in weeks) - roast pork, fresh green beans, rutabaga (turnip to us Mainiacs), baked potato and strawberry/rhubarb pie (the first pie I've made in 2 months) - yummy 😊

I understand that and in the nest box they have been so affectionate with one another. But remember that owls are mostly solitary creatures until they mate. Each of them flying off alone is what they will want to do at the right time. And each of them will probably encounter other owls, find their True Love like Molly and McGee did, and raise their own sweet families. It's all good.

Don't worry about it. No apogby necessary. A chat room is not a good place to be sensitive - there are people here from a variety of backgrounds, beliefs (I don't mean religion), styles, etc. What one person may mean as a joke can be taken as an insult by another. Quick responses can sometimes be interpreted as tense when that was not the intent. There probably isn't anything anyone can say that 5000 other people will completely agree with! LOL. We're just as dysfunctional as any other big family! 😊

Evening all,
Hi James Hill, thanks for the link about Dutch Oven cooking. I've made a note of it - looks interesting. I have gotten my cast iron fry pans all from garage/estate sales.

And another thank you for the wood duck pictures. I missed most of the exodus. Looks like they all hatched and left. Owner says 14 ducklings (I counted 15 eggs as did some others but who's keeping track?) a nice impressive number.

I hope he's not like my mockingbird - he sits in a branch about 5 feet from my bedroom window and sings LOUDLY from roughly 1 AM to 6 AM. I am not exaggerating! I've made angry-bird calls to try and chase him away. BIG mistake: he's so aggressive that he shrieks back even louder! One night (morning) I heard my neighbors taking right beneath my window. Sherry, one of the great things I will take away from this experience is an introduction to the family of birds called owls. The wide variety of size, coloration and habitat is just amazing. And the babies are invariably incredibly captivating. But, for raw beauty of the adult of the species, I really don't believe any surpasses our barn owl.

Hey, Elliott. Yes Sawwhet is from the owl. I work with a local nature center on the fall sawwhet owl migration project. We have nets set up (at night) which capture the owls. Every couple hours we take the owls out of the nets and put them in holding boxes. In the morning they are measured etc, banded and released. They are great to work with, very sweet little critters 😊😊

This is off topic but it is an update on my friend with a spinal tumor. She went into surgery this morning at 11 am and they are just finishing up. these are the youngest of 4 owlets. The other 2 have just started staying out of the box in the last 2 days. The one on the left is the youngest, Wesley, the one on the right is Austin, second youngest. They go outside the box at around 8:15 PDT and are in and out all night long. You can see them being fed during the night hours. They come back in the box around 5:20 AM (PDT). Mother and father bring them food through the night.

You know what is bothering me more than our babies leaving the nest? It's the unknown.

Once they have gone, all we can do is imagine and hope that they are alive and surviving well doing what owls do.

But the fact of the matter is that we'll never know.

Once they leave the nest, that's it.

Yes, Carlos said that he will continue to provide occasional updates at the bbq site, but let's face it: One owl bolts much like another and with no bands or tracking in place, we'll never know what becomes of Molly, McGee, Max, Pattison, Austin and little Wesley.

Is there a chance that Molly/McGee or one of their owls will use this owl box for nesting again?

Yes, a good chance.

Linda, you are right. If we should one day have another opportunity to watch an owl family use this nest box, we won't know whether it is Molly and McGee, one of our owlets and their new spouse, or an unrelated mating pair. Only if our owls were banded would we ever know. That was part of the bargain going into this. It is hard to contemplate.

True. I wish there were a way to find out what happens to the owls but, short of putting transmitters on each owl, we probably will not know. It is like having your teenager tell you he wants to drive across the country with his friends... except the statistics on owl death in the first year are MUCH worse than those of getting into a traffic accident. I worried when my son joined the Navy.

Thanks! There are several there I didn't have.

I automatically assume that any screenshot put up here is open to everyone, otherwise why put it up here? If someone doesn't want their screenshots used then they should state that up front and I won't bother with them. It's almost impossible to keep track of who captures what because the file names are generated randomly by js-kit. Truly unique images are a bit easier but, I think we all agree that sharing is why we're posting them - not to be attributed every time someone posts the image.

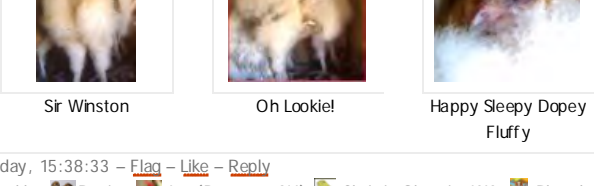

Anyway, that said, I have no problems with anyone saving, changing, or re-posting any that I display. Have fun with it. 😊

James - Glad you confirmed what I had thought about photos being posted on here. It's been fun to share and swap screen captures. I know we cannot use any of Carlos' photos, but I have saved them just for my own personal viewing. So while we all wait and watch for the inevitable to happen (the next two fledglings and leaving the owl box) we can exchange photos for our respective collections. Again thanks to you and everyone else here. I look forward to seeing lots more photos from everyone too. One last question I keep forgetting to ask - will the Moly Wiki website be shut down after the owlets have all flown away? I am not sure who owns/manages that and wanted to ask. Also, what is best way for all of us to save the PDF's on our computers from the Wiki? Thanks!!!

One of those you posted is one of my two favorites. The owl who looks like a short, rotund man wearing fuzzy pants - reminds me of Winston Churchill. Cracks me up! The other one I love is of Moly with fuzzyball owlets wrapped around her legs. I think someone reposted that yesterday, but I didn't think to save it.

Anyone have a picture from the early days in the nest box, with McGee's legs in front and the family in the background?

Owosaurus
Farewell Royal Owls (to Moly's First Family) part 1

It started with an email from a friend:
He said there was a website not to miss.
A pair of owls with 5 eggs left to tend,
The mother nesting in a state of bliss.

I had no expectation that this site
Would steal my life for months, both nights and days.
But Moly looked at me that fateful night
And I was drawn into her restful gaze.

I watched as one by one 4 owlets hatched
So fluffy as they huddled under wing!
Their father's hunting skills could not be matched Survival hinged upon the food he'd bring.

McGee and Moly made a perfect pair.
With MOD chatters and lurkers always there.

Farewell Royal Owls (to Moly's First Family) part 2

So much has happened since that sweet March day:
Events and friends I will not soon forget.
No accident it was, so I can say:
I chose to spend my time with no regret.

We came to love their antics as they grew,
And their harsh cries became our nightly song.
That they would leave one day we always knew:
They branched, then flew and our hearts went along.

We wish you well along your paths of flight
Safe comfort in your days and treats at night!

Well it's gone 11pm here so I'm going to bed - and as my Husband is working nights at the moment I think I may take my laptop up with me and set the alarm for around 4.30am to see if I can catch the remaining two coming out of the box - I've never got up early enough to catch them before - and if I leave it much longer there won't be any owls to see come out at night 😊 Maybe I'll get a glimpse of Max and Patison as well! Goodnight everyone!

See if you can see any of these, or if you have to be a "friend". They are from the Moly Royal Facebook Page. I didn't use these on my slideshow because I didn't discover this facebook until after after I made mine. Pages 38 and 39 have bits of egg shots. If you can't see them, I will save and send you them.

Yes, it was a long drive and hard work. DH spent the time from sun up to sundown working hard. He said he was glad to get back to work, poor guy. It was really nice to be back there but just makes me long to live there again. So if anyone knows anyone who wants to invest a bunch of money in a 1700's house and farm so I can buy it from my family and turn it into a farm with a B&B or restaurant before a developer buys it and destroys this historic home and fantastic land. Please send them my way.

We have a cabin on a nearby lake - no electric (gas lights and refrig), no running water (except and old-fashioned hand pump from a brook) - but acres of lake and a pair to lug water in), no TV, no telephone, etc. The perfect place to "listen to the quiet". Wonderful photos. Thanks.

Have you checked your state to see if there is funding for helping families keep their family farms in the family? I was thinking that there was some kind of assistance for this, maybe through the agriculture department, either from your state or federally. I think it is called a Heritage Farm or something like that. Or to see if there is help for getting a farm designated as a historic site. Just some ideas. I'm from NC too.

A couple of links from our "quilt show" last evening. The first is for the McKenna Ryan site for her patterns (unfortunately, many of her earlier ones have been discontinued) Be sure to check out "series", "classic" and "Single" on her menu. The second is a link to Batiks Plus which carries many of the McKenna Ryan line of fabrics - great for backgrounds, textured looks, etc.

 But, I'm proud of myself today. It's the rainy day we need right now to wash away horrible pine pollen, gently dampen my newly planted annual flower seeds, decrease the fire danger (still getting smoke here from the Canadian fires). Also the first day in ages I've felt like cooking anything but quick meals. A hot strawberry/rhubarb pie awaits us on the kitchen counter and hubby will be pleased with a real meal tonight - roast pork bin, baked potatoes, fresh green beans and rutabaga (turnip to us).
