Good morning so good to see we have a least one more day of owls in the owl box. Exciting night last night wish I could of seen them all together as that is so wonderful. Great family bonding. Couldn't stop smiling when I read that. Sure will miss my morning and evening views of these beautiful creatures but they are meant to go on to lives of their own and I wish them well. I will try to find something to keep me busy and hope, hope, hope that maybe by next February we can go through this again after Carlos' has a nice break.

Good morning everyone. I just came in from sitting on the front porch swing, having my morning coffee, alone, mostly. Of course there were a half dozen juvenile bluebirds foraging in the lawn, making short swift flights from pear tree to ground and back to branch. One juvenile hawk came flying overhead, silent but for the fact that it was being chased through the treetops by several squawking blue jays and, oddly enough, one young crow. Just as I was about to get up for a refill, two one year-old deer came ambling up the hill, leaving the thicket to browse for a while under the pear tree. The pears are still too firm and tart but, the limbs are hanging lower each day, under weight of the fruit, so the deer are enjoying the branch tips and young leaves that are now within reach. The distant murmuring of dairy cows and young goats seem to be the only persistent sounds, other than the breeze in the trees. Time for a PDF, methinks. 😊

I've watched a few other nest cams: eagle's and humming birds. I'd have to say that owls are especially cute and endearing. But think how we would feel if there were a camera on every animals "nest" as they grew up...polar bears, meerkats, elephants? We would drive ourselves crazy with worry. Are they hungry, too warm, too cold? Do mom & dad know what they're doing? Is the nest too high? 😊

I remember reading in the very beginning of all this that barn owls usually "fledge", which I think of as leaving the nest for good, in pairs. We certainly saw that with Max and Pattison. So I'm going to be optimistic and think Austin is going to be a good big brother and stay with Wes until it's her time. So I think Austin will fledge Fri or Sat, and Wes on Sat or Sun, depending on what Austin does. At least that's my hope!

I think I put about a pint of eye drops in each eye this morning and I still can't see clearly! But it's all worth it: relatively minor inconveniences for what we gain in return. With so little time left, I think I'll set up an Eye Drop IV unit next to my computer!

morning all I have missed you all so. My computer broke down and in the week it has taken to get back on line two of my babies(our babies) have left the nest. The fuzz is gone and they are beautiful. they are really owls not babies now. Truly a miracle!!!! I hope I can do as well with my boys. We have rain today in Woodstock Canada, I must say that my sadness at not seeing them so much wages war with my happiness at their fledging, what joy to soar in the sky like they do...oh I blather on. Hope all of you are well!!

Has anyone determined the sex of the owlets or are we just guessing?
Today, 04:16:14 - Flag - Like - Reply

Karin
We are definitely guessing. What I understand is that the full adult coloring is established clearly after the first moult, which happens when they are a year or so old (not sure when). But it's not going too far out on a limb to guess that Max, Patti, and Wes are girls because they have very spotty breast feathers. Austin is a boy because his chest and neck are very white. If this coloration holds, what we are seeing now is a pretty good indication of their sex.

Carlos has stated that he's almost positive Patti is male, also, along with Austin. Patti's coloring has continued to lighten with no spots on his mid and lower chest. He's much paler than Max or Wes. If you go to the bbq page and look at Carlos' right pictures it's more evident.

Has there been any discussion of banding the San Marcos owls? I don't remember Carlos mentioning it but I have not heard all his commentaries. Have not seen any info on the Moly Blog of banding but could have missed it. Any info appreciated. Thanks.
Today, 04:03:40 - Flag - Like - Reply

Gabriele
They will not be banded. And if you think about it, if the owl dies in the wild, how would we know anyhow? I don't know many people that pick through the carcasses' of dead animals. Plus, Carlos is pretty adamant about non-interference.
Today, 04:06:37 - Flag - Like - Reply

ej
I agree on Carlos had said he would not interfere with nature and would not band the owls.
Today, 04:06:49 - Flag - Like - Reply

Owl
Owls can only be banded by someone with a federal permit. As for not interfering with nature, these owls have been heavily interfered with already. The excessive flash photography is the first example that comes to mind.
Today, 04:33:54 - Flag - Like - Reply

Gabriele
Carlos explained that the camera are not close, and the flash doesn't even make them blink. I wouldn't call that interference.
Today, 04:36:09 - Flag - Like - Reply

Owl
These owls have been interfered with more than banding would interfere! Also, regarding the comment that no one ever finds them if they die, so why band, if that were true then no banding would be done. Bands are found when birds get injured and are found and taken to rehab centers, and when they die. There is enough of a return rate to make it a valuable scientific tool for studying birds.

Heib Tyto alba,
I moved up here with my questions. If you answer here, I'll delete my aqbs that are in the basement and you will not have to page down. I apologize for pestering you with questions but I read books and articles that often contradict one another and, in you, I found someone who knows what Barn Owls really do.
What did you feed the owls? One article said they fed them frozen baby chicks. Another article said anything other than mice would harm the owls development.

My question was NOT about Molly and McGees offspring. Tyto alba was part of a rescue programme where owls unable to fly could breed and their offspring (unimprinted by humans) were released to the wild. Others were taken to schools to educate youngsters. He said the look on their faces when the held an owl was priceless. Since he is a REAL expert, I have been asking him questions.

Make sure you go to the Molly Blog to see the fantastic photos took of the other two owlets hanging out in the neighbor's palm trees. Great crisp photos. Not sure what is going on with the owlets now. Wesley seems to be in the box with some food and we are speculating if Austin is trying to protect him in some way. Interesting behavior...

Hello, Tyto Alba,
Did you only have one owl, over time, did you have several?

I was part of a rescue programme where owls unable to fly could breed and their offspring(unimprinted by humans)were released to the wild.Others were taken to schools to educate youngsters .The look on their faces when the held an owl was priceless 😊

That is so great. Is it really true that you cannot rebuke an owl because the owl would feel threatened?

Do Barn Owls REALLY smell like maple syrup?
Yesterday, 22:28:50 - Flag - Like - Reply

If I had hand reared one a tap on the beak would stop them being anti-social to the other pets.But the "wild" ones would be threatened and strike out.
To have your hair preened by an owl is quite an experience 😊

What do Barn Owls smell like?
Yesterday, 22:35:26 - Flag - Like - Reply

Sorry for the long delays in answering Mary... my comp is going so slow this morning 😊
Barn owls breath is very stinky especially when they hiss close to your nose...a diet of raw meat sees to that.Their plumage however smells like a powder puff...lol

I apologize for pestering you with questions but I read books and articles that often contradict one another and, in you, I found someone who knows what Barn Owls really do.

What did you feed the owls? One article said they fed them frozen baby chicks. Another article said anything but mice would harm the owls development.

Almost ashamed to have to ask this...What's a PDF?
Yesterday, 21:47:17 - Flag - Like - Reply

It's a document format that can be read by Adobe Reader, which is free. Several here (OK, two people) archive the chatstreams and PDF them so you can go back and read them at your leisure here:

Thank you James and Chris!

Portable Document Format - PDF is the format used most often to reproduce a file where you don't want the ability to change text or images. 😊 It is often used for attachments in emails, etc.
