                I almost forgot to pay my bills that are due in a few days... to busy watching the owl kids! Better go pay them...:)
                Good thing I have a homebased business... or I would be fired!!
                Has anyone heard if anyone has lost a job for getting caught watching the owls?? Woof!

What I have loved most about all about M&M and Max, Pattison, Austin and Wesley - Barn Owls in general I guess is their sweet eyes. They remind me so much of my dog that I had to let go this past January. His eyes were exactly like theirs. Lots of soul in those eyes for sure. So sweet to look at them and their eyes.

                    Ah, there's a comforting sight: an owl(et), passed out in a food coma on the floor of the owl box! Feast your eyes, fellow MODs - this will be gone all too soon.

                           Yes, owls do lay down to sleep sometimes. Watching these 4 have debunked that myth. These owlets have been laying down to sleep at times since they were hatched. And they've thrived.

                           Apparently the first night Max was out of the box she was so tired the next day that when she closed her eyes to sleep, she fell over to the floor and was sound asleep. I saved a picture of it that someone posted. It was so cute!

They virtually never lay down, but they lie down with great frequency. One of them lay down earlier today. Several of them have lain down off and on since they were babies.

       Car camping or Tent? Campground, or far, far, far from anyone?
       I'm partial to the Blue Ridge Mountains, since they're local and beautiful, and absolutely full of great trails that 99% of the hikers never travel. The AT winds through parts of it and we have the Mountains to Sea Trail, too. All that, plus the Blue Ridge Parkway winding through, makes it hard to venture anywhere else.

I believe your last statement is the most accurate. Today, 14:37:20 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🎆 Bette I think those might be mislabeled and the white one is really Austin. Or Carlos is mixed up. Pattison was quite tawny earlier- not as Tawney as Max, but not nearly as white breasted as Austin. Which means, I think Pattison is still a question mark.

people are having difficulty guessing the sex of, but based on size and coloring, I think he's a male.

I think the new photos are mislabeled- look at the older photos of Pattison, from when just s/he and Max were out of the box. Very tawney! But not as much as Max. that's why I think he is probably a she. But like James said, we will never know! You can't always go by color with barn owls. Today, 15:05:10 - Flag - Like - Reply

I don't think the photos are mislabeled. Pattison and Austin have always looked very similar to me. If you look at the ones labeled "Austin", he has very little of that tawny apricot ring around his neck. Pattison's is twice as wide as Austin's, and it is wider on the owlet labeled "Pattison". There's also some little "smudges" of the tawny apricot color where the body meets the legs on that owlet that Austin doesn't have. I think Pattison is the only one most

Was just looking through the blog pictures and now it says that Pattison is male. Hmmm..guess we have 2 of each then. I don't think we'll ever know for sure.

on Pattison earlier was baby fuzz that got shed? Today, 15:31:13 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by chickadee purdy farms Becky, WA Oh no, the attack of the crows!! (or are those in my yard?) Today, 14:31:58 - Flag - Like - Reply

With Pattison especially we probably will never know! Reminds me of the story in the Wesley book about a scientist who thought he had a male barn owl, only to realize it really was a female when it laid an egg about age 15. I guess it's possible that they are mislabeled, but maybe a lot of that tawny-ness

                           I did't even know that our library had a web site up and running. Small town (barely 1000 people) and this was the old high school. It is nothing well organized and suits the needs of a small town. Unfortunately, like many small towns with this economy, budget cuts have stopped some renovations and services. Only the downstairs is the library area. Part of the upstairs is used for book storage/book sale area, another roomis a thrift shop and a smaller room a sorting and storage area for the thrift shop. http://www.philips.lib.me.us mention that that was in Morganton, NC, where Patti Digh (37 Days blog and Life Is a Verb) grew up, too. It turns out that, not only did we grow up in the same town, we lived in the same dorm at college. Only I was a few years ahead of her and never knew her. But at the dorm's 100th anniversary

Today, 13:29:32 - Flag - Like - Reply Shortly after my brother got out of the service, during Vietnam, he came to live with us while attending SIU. A city truck was moving dirt and he came home to find one of the huge dirt clods that had fallen off the truck was a HUGE snapping turtle. We put him in a basket and went in to get a camera. When we came back out he was gone. Our neighbor was waxing his car and we ran over and breathlessly asked if he had seen a turitle come by. The look on his face was priceless. "Uh...why no he hadn't." "What did he look like?" Years later we still cracked up about that. We found him heading for a gate and released himin a lake. The turtle...not the neighbor. Was this in the area of a lake or water source? It looks to me like a water turtle. If so, just bury the eggs in sand near the water. Several years ago I rescued a box turtle from a road in Florida. I took it home and later a friend found another box turtle and brought it to me to take care of. PS the next thing I knew I had babies...and more babies...and more babies. had themin my back yard and the final count was 32. They thrived back there. An interesting fact I learned from the vet - a furtile turtle can continue to lay eggs for a few years without mating again. Anyway all the eggs were buried and I didn't know about the babies until I saw them crawling around. I think you should just bury them and let nature take its course. Today, 13:34:41 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Lynda C Kristi Smith Colleen, funny you brought up the turtle eggs. I looked out my kitchen window (2 stories up) and saw a Momt urt le digging and laying her eggs and carefully covering them in our back yard. In the trees above her were a whole family of crows waiting for her to leave so they could rob the nest. That would never do so I took a wire fence and surrounded the small area around the eggs when she left and hung plastic bags on it. The crows have not been back and so far there are no other marauders. How long to hatch time? Mollie and Cheryl Owen, books again . I posted this website for Becky earlier http://www.fantasticfiction.co.uk/. It's a UK site, but just about any author yoou would want to find on there. I have it bookmarked and refer to it all the time for latest books, copy lists of books by author, etc. It's an invaluable resource for me. If you print the page on any author's list of books, you won't get the colored book covers, etc. Check on Anna Jacobs and review some of her books before you buy them. I've read several - all of the Gibson Family (Salem Street, etc) and some of other series. I see that Amazon in the US has some of her later books - have to add them to my "wish list" remains. - normally though, the skeletons/shells have been throughly cleaned by mother nature.

       A few years ago I stumbled on one scene that was still very fresh and inside an old factory. The photo actually turned out to be somewhat artistic, not disturbing. Well, not disturbing unless you're a pigeon who needs to keep an eye out for hawks who hunt inside abandoned buildings.

       Doubtful if the eggs will hatch even if you bury themcarefull in a soft, sandy spot. A turtle will lay them in soft sand, but always near a water source.
       Once she lays them, they are on their own to hatch and fend for themselves - no motherly nurturing at all. Always sad to view a dead creatures, but it happens. We've had two moose die near or in our yard in the past 3 years - both the result of moose/auto collision and broken or paralized hind quarters. There have already been 5 moose/car collisions with in 4 miles in either direction of here this year. Thankfully, no human injury - those animals are BIG and collisions are often unavoidable - especially at night.

Previously people were suggesting we contact the Ellen Show @ Carlos & Molly and our owlets -- I just did that on Facebook -- go to The Ellen DeGeneres Show on Facebook, like it, and then write on that wall to the producers, or the various websites and Twitter are listed, to contact them that way.

Hi Mollie... there were 2 eagles flying and swooping and then the front one dipped the top of a tree. Here's a pictures of impact and then of it going down through the trees... I ran over to where I though it would have landed... it was on the ground and then flew up on to the branch... He just stayed on the branch for a while and then flew off... It was amazing to see... I was so glad that it was ok... I love the eagles!

Glad I read through all the comments (but I hadn't enlarged your views yet), tigermo. I was going to ask if it might be a juvenile/fledgling. With the white heads certainly must be at least 4-5 yrs? We don't have nearly as many as your area, but had a nest about 300 yds. fromplace we used to live and watched them for 5 years before he nest fell in a storm and they moved on. The fledgling can put on some pretty good shows. Great pictures. Glad

Let's bring that books conversation up out of the basement. Cheryl Greenway Owen, do you read the Martha Grimes Richard Jury mysteries? Are they even published in Britain? I've wondered whether tehy're published there ever since I read the first ones--ack!--25 years ago. . Today, 11:39:46 – Flag – Like – Reply Chery I Owen
I haven't read them, although I have heard of Martha Grimes - I would imagine they are published here, even if they're not Amazon is brilliant as I can get hold of pretty much everything on there - More to add to my list then?!!

Hove the books, but I'm more interested in what British readers think of them, since she's an American writing about England and English people (and I'm using that wording deliberately; she's very clear that they are English). I keep suspecting there are things that she writes that sound perfectly plausible to US readers but that would send UK readers into laughing fits at how wrong she got it. But I definitely recommend them. She's gone from writing little frothy formulaic things to long Henry James things with much darkness at the center. Next question: Do you read the Amelia Peabody books by Elizabeth Peters? Same situation only Amelia is a Victorian Egyptologist and Peters is a contemporary American Egyptologist.

The RDC ondensed Books are wonderful! My mother started getting them when I was just a little girl, and I read every one from cover to cover. Probably readsome things I shouldn't have t that age. From the Terrace comes to mind as probably inappropriate for a 10 year old LOL. We had given away most of them by the time she died, and I had a really hard time getting rid of the last ones. So I became a biblioclast (horrors!) and cut out the illustrations to remember her love of the books and then sent the books to the recyding center. Today, 12:12:46 - Flag - Like - Reply

Well imdefinately going to have to read them now - I'll let you know my Verdict' LOL! I haven't read those either - I do read a lot - honest LOL!! Over the last I don't know how many years i've been getting the Readers Digest condensed novels which have 4 books in each - of differing subjects which I would probably not normally pick of f the shelf - I've read some amazing books that way, but being condensed I of ten wish i'd read the 'full' story. Over the last few months a group of friends and me have been swapping books so I ve stopped getting the RD ones now. The latest series that I read were

                    Becky, saw yur pix below of the rainy day in WA. That's what keeps everything so green you know 🙂 . I'm sure you wish for some sunnier, dry, breezy days though. It has really been dry this Spring in Maine, but I won't complain; last year was the rainiest Spring and Summer for years - over 7 inches of rain each month Apr., May, June and July. Our only summer was Aug. Had some much-needed rain yesterday, but not enough. Your yard is beautiful. Somewhere (??) I have a couple of photos of my side yard and it boks SO much like ones you posted. I know exactly why you treasure your lovely spot 🙂 . Posting a photo I took a couple of days ago. I had filled one feeder and set it on the porch railing whileI was cleaning and filling the 2nd. A perfect photo op !!

                     wow!!! That is a feeder I have to get soon!! Have never had a hummer feeder. I had one dive bomb me last summer, and that was weird. Don't think I was near a nest that I could see! I do love the rain, and hate it when it gets over 70! A true North-westerner!!

                           You don't have to be near a nest to have that happen. They often seem attracted to the color you ae wearing. I was painting the side of garden shed once and had on a shirt with red, yellow and ble - had two hummers between me and the shed trying to check out my shirt for nectar!!

Is there anyone here that here last night between approx. 11:45 PM & 01:00 AMPST? It was when I believe Wesley was up on the perch abne and he began to hear a very strange sound that seem to have him spooked a bit. The sound was very different from any ever heard from M&M or Owlets before. Wesley was very focused & responded in the same tone. Another owlet joined him & sat on roof while. Wes remained on the perch. A few chat room peeps commented that the sound was different from what they have ever heard too. It was very strange and Wesley did fly off and I waited a bit and no return so I went to bed. If you heard that noise, did it stop? To me, it was an eerie sound.

       Yes, I heard the noise too. At first I thought it was distortion from the microphone that Carlos said was going out, but others thought differently. He did seem pretty intent on squawking at something just below him.

Thank you - and thankfully imat the other end of the country - but my first thoughts when I heard about it were with Trystan Williams from here as he's the only person I 'know' from that area - I've seen him post on facebook since so I know he's ok! Its really hard to take in to be honest - why would someone do that? He was apparently quite well known (he was a taxi driver) and just drove round randomly shooting people - one woman was just standing on the pavement with her shopping and he actually got out of his car and shot her in the stomach? Why? I guess we'll never know - my thoughts are with all the families that have needlessly lost people today - and also with the ones that are injured.

       Susan,
       It was a gift from a MOD female who went to the San Marcos picnic last Saturday. I think he said she had it custommade at a store in one of the beach/ocean towns near or around San Marcos. I am from So. CA but do not recall the exact city. She told him it is a one of a kind. Must have cost a pretty penny I would think. Such a nice memento for him and you could tell how proud he was of it when he talked about it last Saturday evening. Here is a photo of him in it that I captured while he talked to chat rooms:

                           Tabitha, Molly isn't in the box anymore. She hasn't been for several weeks. These are two of her babies and they are getting ready to leave the box
                           It's possible Molly will return to this box for her next clutch of eggs, later this summer.

                          I forgot to say I lived near Seatlle out in the country. I also had NO allergies to speak of there...the rainy mist in the air kept the pollen and such down...it was great! I spent so much more time outside there... stay inside here for the cool and to avoid all the "stuff" floating in the air 😃

                           I love the rain!! I do have lots of birds and critters. That is why I haven't cleared beyond the fence. I have a creek down there too, with trout. I love the birds! Lots of woodpeckers and steller jays. There is 10 acres next to me that is just woods, and I live at the end of a dead end road. Or I should say, the road ends at my drive way. Love it, no traffic. And yes, very peaceful!

                           You've probably already heard this so I apologize if I'm repeating, but there are no plans to clean out the box. Owls return to the same nest, time after time, without cleaning it. Apparently, this is what they like!

All four owlets reunited breifly at fledge posts (6:31 est) Youngster Wesley called continuously for food, did several fly abouts, but did return to box to roost as day broke, still calling for food. And lo and befold Megee/Molly brought a large gopher/rat. The moral to this is not if you complain long engough you get your way but if you are truely in need your parents/family will do thier best to help you. You missed the sounds coming from outside the nest box. OB2 would have let us see what was happening.

                    Wesly anne used to cuddle with Austin, I guess she's growing up tooo fast to do that anymore 😫
                    There is a distinct difference in their faces. Austin's is more rounded at the bottom, and Wes' comes more to a point; more of a true heart shape.

       Ruth ~ from MN farmcats right? we have several. This one was ready to "blow" ... lurking around her deck- and lo and behold, she couldn't get too far from the hand that feeds her - and birthed by the step in the flowers. ... and as for "Winnie" ... My husband was in veggie garden - getting to be dusk - and he hears yelping - thought it was our dog. NOO ooo it was a coyote chasing OUR dog across the field. He called for her and she took that as the opport unity to chase the coyote HERSELF. oh my ... fear factor. She returned with tall between her legs and he ran to shed for dirt bike and chased it back down to river. ... went back later with gun -hoping he fired some rounds in the air. ... we will need to gather the coyote hunters to our area. 🥞 ..

       I'd sure like to know what the birds are that occasionally sit on top of the owlbox -- never having birded in California. What's there now?

James: Have you checked out all of these from the other FB?

Got to everyone. Kids out of school now. If that tells you anything. Some more great people are joining in when I have to go 😃

Today, 07:19:25 - Flag - Like - Reply Ingrid Good morning, I was so glad to see we have another full day of Aust in and Wesley still in the box. Hope when they leave it will be together so that Wesley is not left alone for a day or two. As this beautiful sage is coming to a perfect end I can only say WOW what a treat to be able to see first hand nature at its finest. Much thanks to the Royals and all the loyal watcher too. Really, Austin is the shy one. Wes is staying for him. Every time Austin flies off he says "Stay right here and keep calling, Wes, so I know where to come back to." Wes is getting a little tired of it and wants to fly off but she feels kind of responsible for her crazy brother.
