Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

Hi everyone! You'll never guess where I am? I am in a Safeway parking lot with my laptop, so that I could have at least 20 minutes with you while my daughter takes her piano lessons down the street.
James, you are AWESOME! I won't have time to look at your slideshow but I will check it out after I get home later on. (Next on to hospital to see friend, then daughter to karate, but I will be back!)
So tell me James, I just read a tidbit that you met "Elen"? What's that about? Will I be forced to the basement to find out?
Whew, I hate being gone all day.

Someone's dreary dreambox.
Good afternoon, all. I have some great news for you. 😄 No, not that news. LOL

The Molly Wiki has been updated with a brand new Photos-Photos present! Molly (The Owl's Wiki / Photos Photos Photos)
Currently it is a work in progress, as most of the Wiki is, but there is a slideshow for the slideshow. The images are still uploading from my house to servers on the other side of the country and there will be updates and changes made throughout the evening. Currently it is a huge hodgepodge of images from all over and from many folks. Some are edited and others are not. I will eventually pare down the numbers by removing duplicates and any "fry" images. Until then, it's all out there.

Someone's dreary dreambox.
I need several of you to hit the page and let the slideshow run for a little while. That will do a couple things. 1) it will force the servers at my host to optimize and cache the images in the proper size for the slideshow. 2) it will give me statistics on image views which I will then use to isolate problem images. There are several corrupt files which will not display, causing the slideshow to halt, pause, or skip over a bad image. If the slideshow pauses on you, just click the right arrow to continue on. Thanks in advance for any assistance.

Oh, yeah. And I got this great news today as well. 😄

Hope Austin & Wesley have good outside fun tonight and come back home in the morning. This morning was really different, Wesley went into the box and it was getting time for it to be light. I was Worried whether Austin was coming h...He came in with another owl (not sure which one) and Austin got right in the box. The other owl flew on back to the west. Wandered if it was one of the parents telling Austin he had to get into the box right away. ...

We will pray for your Mom and for you - or send out the strongest of wishes for your strength in these hard times, or just sit quietly and think of you - whatever our inclination is, please know that we are here for you.
My deepest sympathy goes out to you. Perhaps you may think that the owls will assist the angels as they fly her to heaven on their glorious wings.

I once saw an owl close with eyes that would open & close with the time. When it approached the hour it would hoot and the eyes would open wide. Then as the time passed the eyes would slowly close and by the half hour they were half shut, but as time went on the eyes would get closed, and it would snore. Do our babes seem like that at times?

I didn't get it in the e-cook book because MerIn was sick then. But here it is...Season pork chops, bone-in or boneless with salt and pepper. Brown in oil. Drain. Put in large baking pan (I use disposable ones). Cover with frozen hash browns. Pour apple cider or juice over. Cover with foil and bake at 350 for 30 to 45 minutes. Uncover and brown spuds. Not too long. You don't want the cider to steam off. Enjoy!!

If you have a newer computer or are running Windows 7 or Vista there's a Snipping Tool that works great. it should be in your Accessories folder. Or you could try SHIFT + Prt Scr, then pasting it. OR... if you have a new keyboard you might have to press 'Function' (usually colored red) + Prt Scr to copy the image.
Do any of those work?

<http://mikeduggan.tripod.com/otheritems/trade/zaptea1.jpg>

(The text says "The hour is late, what shall I say to the owl woman?")
It's a funny image -- wish that tea packages still looked like that. Apparently there are a whole lot of owl-based advertisements from the 1880s - 1890s. You can see a lot of them here:

Very interesting websites, Emily. Thanks. I love vintage ads, trade cards and post cards. I have a very large collection of post cards from the 3 areas we have lived in Maine, most dating back to 1900 -1940. A bit of history on those cards and very interesting that I have cards (most are postcards) were saved by families for years and are now being sold in shows, auctions etc by those card dealers. Nothing like the "generic" type post cards we see today. But then, means of communication have changed. too.

Yes, old ads and trade cards are amazing! Wonderful design, very evocative. I feel like some artists are producing modern cards that have some of that same feel. hand-oriented and interesting or strange. but they're unfortunately quite expensive. And, as you said, means of communication are different.

Please, let's have no mention whatsoever of Stacey O'Brien (sp?) on this site anymore. We have such a pleasant relationship, we all LOVE Carlos and the owls, and wish all the best to Stacey (sp?) does (except, better, possibly, but I don't want to be bossy or not nice about anyone. We just have had one of the best experiences that I can ever imagine, and I hope the nay-sayers will let us be and let us enjoy the short time we have left.

I do apologize for bringing it up. It's just incredibly frustrating for a relative newcomer (I started watching just before Max left the box for the first time) to see constant references without knowing what the heck happened. And every time I asked, people either ignored it or said "let's not talk about it any more." I'm sure you can understand why that made me more curious -- right?

Where are the PDFs of Stacey saying terrible things? I've seen that claim many times in this chat room, but I don't know where to look to see them for myself. Stacy wrote a long angry post saying she was mad at Carlos for telling people scientists never studied wild owls. She took it as a personal affront. She did not say anything bad about Carlos in the blog. She did delete the entry after cooling off.

It was not on this chat. It was on her blog. And yes, some of it she did delete after she originally posted it. Why would anyone make that up? It happened and for many of us it influenced our opinion of her. If you didn't read it, then that's OK too. Form your own opinion.

But, seriously, why is any of this important now? Read her blog, read her book, join her Barn Owl Alliance if you believe in what she's doing. I have said several times, including earlier today, that she has the power to do some good things. Join her and do them. But can't we just drop it from here?

I am just curious -- whenever I see people with such strong opinions about something, to the point that they have to write this website to get a link removed, I really want to know what started it. I never thought anyone was making anything up, it just sounded like one group or another was really misinterpreting something. It's just my character to want to run to primary sources when I see something like that, and it is really frustrating that no one saved any of it.

But if it's gone and no one has it I will give it up. I just assumed when people kept saying that she was so mean and that she's attacking Carlos that there would be a record of it somewhere.

Seems like a real tempest in a teacup. (But, you know, if there's actually a teacup with a tempest going on, who wouldn't want to take a look at the little mini tsunami waves?)

OK guys. I'm going to preach from my soapbox. It makes me sad when I hear people say "I would NEVER read the Koran," "I would NEVER read the Bible," "I would NEVER read anything Nancy Pelosi wrote," "I would NEVER read anything Dick Cheney wrote," "I would NEVER read anything James Frey wrote"..... If we only expose ourselves to what we already "know," we never learn. Many excellent writers led lives of drunkenness, debauchery, despair...it did not make their books bad. It makes me sad to see us willing to adopt the attitude the we only tolerate those who agree with us.

If it is what I am thinking, one can always go to the library if they do not want to purchase a book to read, or borrow it from another, go to a use bookstore, read it and resell it back to the bookstore, there are many ways to read something without benefiting the author. And if what I am thinking, people do not want to support such a person who has clearly been way out of control, caused lots of trouble, etc., in what they have stated, only that person call apologize or clean the mess they have made up.

Personally I think Nancy Pelosi is a certified kook, she has lied more these two years about what is and isn't I am surprised her nose is NOT 10 feet long or so, perhaps that is why her face is so tight looking, she keeps having her nose pulled in? I do not care to read anything that woman has written. Just my thoughts.

So, no owls spotted in Yellowstone, but some amazing animal spotting: a mother Big Horn Sheep with a baby so young it still has it's umbilical cord attached - picking their way up the side of the rocks, black bear, grizzly bear, bison and their young waking right next to our car for a while, wolves, coyotes, bald eagles and their fledgling, goshawks, osprey, elk, mule deer, white tail deer, prong horn antelope - it was astounding, as usual! I wanted to be able to tell you all about it every time something spectacular was witnessed!

I came here out of curiosity. Hit a button, and found a picture that I thought was from the past: a video of an amazing owl, looking straight at the camera. Moly. Beautiful, funny, Molly. And a box full of eggs. And a devoted mate. And it was no longer curiosity that kept me coming back. It was affection, devotion, and belief in the power of nature. I was willing to see it through, to watch no matter what happened. And what happened was a miracle. Max. Pattison. Austin. Wesley. The sadness of a broken egg, the disappointment of an egg unhatched. And the connection to hundreds of people who saw things that I saw, but described them and related to them in their own unique and wonderful way. My world has grown because of all of you. My heart has opened wider, like it does every time I encounter new love. Goodbye is unthinkable, because it indicates an ending. I have seen many endings, and this is not one. Our beautiful owls will soar on the wings of the gods, and your words will live on in my heart and mind. Farewell, perhaps. Hard enough. Whoa!! I am REALLY sorry I opened that can of worms again. Did not expect that. I am sorry if I offended anyone. For those who don't know, Carbs has nothing to do at all, or no control with this site. It is SPO. After all 'she' has stated about the Royals, at the dgs, and spitefulness 'she' has exhibited, yet 'she' doesn't mind that her book is advertised on a site associated with the Royals. I feel 'she' is riding on his coat tails, and told that to SPO. This is my opinion, and I can have one!! Let's all agree to agree or disagree on this one, and enjoy the time we have left with each other and the owls!!

I found another old poem.

If I Knew

If I knew a box where the smiles are kept,
No matter how large the key
Or strong the bolt, I would try so hard
'Twould open, I know, for me;
Then over the land and the sea broadcast,
I'd scatter the smiles to play,
That the children's faces might hold them fast
For many and many a day.

If I knew a box that was large enough
To hold all the frowns I meet,
I would like to gather them every one,
From nursery, school, and street;
Then folding and holding, I'd pack them in,
And turning the monster key,
I'd hire a giant to drop the box
To the depths of the deep, deep sea.

As I have followed this incredible event and caught Pat'son's birth, I have been thrilled to be a part of it. I woke up last night and this poem came to me. Just wanted to share. Thanks to Carbs, the magnificent owls, and everyone sharing this most awesome experience!

As you spread your wings to fly,
It's nearing time to say goodbye.
Watching from your birth 'til now,
The journey's bittersweet somehow.

You've touched our lives more than you'll know,
And now we have to let you go.
Be free and maybe find a way
To come back to this place someday.

His eye is on the sparrow, true,
But His eye is on our owls, too!

God bless Molly, McGee, & kids...we love you!

OK... I just might be banned from this site now. I sent an e-mail to SPO Sunday, and another one Monday questioning why the ad for Stacey's book is on this site. I got an answer Tuesday that stated "Looks like we are going to remove it" But it is still there. Just sent them another e-mail asking why it is still there! I hope they don't ban me for speaking my opinion! (They wouldn't do that, right?)

Long story buried deep in the bowels of the basement, but short story is that the author is spearheading a rather aggressive and public attack on the Royals for an implied lack of "compliance" to some owl-rearing guidelines. Sadly, it's gotten pretty ugly.

It's not the book so much as the author, Kate. She has written some really terrible things about Carlos and has slurred up a bit of anti-Carlos agitation. I can't really speak for Becky or anyone else who objects, but I think the objection is more to shilling for Stacey than it is to the book.

Amazing why anyone would want to play into Stacey's accusations that for anyone who disagrees with Carlos is banned or deleted and that we are all a bunch of Carlos zombies. By demanding that SPO remove the ad for her book, you prove her correct.

PurdyfarmsBecky - I agree that I'm not a big fan of Stacey (ever since I read her blog -- I was surprised at how mean the group tended to be overall); however, perhaps Carbs and this group looks like they are taking the high road and hold themselves to a higher standard by not banishing the reference to the book here??

I do not know much if anything but the above, about the query - but I do know that advertising has been discussed. Distinguishing paid vs. free may be the issue. ... many have candidly pointed fingers at the Royals for being out for money and soliciting when it has not been that way at all. Any dollars they have gathered has been by donation - willingly, without their request whatsoever. ... always giving. I'm just guessing here ...

JP - Carlos doesn't post her ad here. He doesn't have anything to do with this site. I do, however, think he has taken the high road and has refused to answer her accusations. You know, she even criticized him when he was recognized in a restaurant!?! Like that made him inappropriately host for the owls. It's not her science I object to, it's her tactics and her mean spirited ways. She could do a lot of good, but instead she's turned many of us off.

Hi Owlosaurus - not trying to cause a stir. Regardless of who posted the ad, having it taken down/ banned would only add fuel to a fire. And how this started?? I assume her ego felt threatened? It's a shame, but I think Carlos has handled it beautifully. I hope that never changes. Had no idea he was publicly criticized by her. Again, that's a shame.

olbiddle, kate - The author has caused some very hard feelings among those of us who admire what Carlos has done here. No one questions that she had a lovely relationship with her owl and, in the beginning, Carlos invited her to contribute here. But she criticized him mercilessly and predicted doom/gloom/death for Molly's owls because of Carlos' owlhouse. He made some changes to accommodate her recommendations, but she continued to speak out against him. Eventually she was banned completely from the official chat. She took up the rant on her blog and was truly offensive in many of her statements. That's the story in a nutshell. She wouldn't be welcome in my house, no matter how often she calls herself a noted biologist.

That's your right. She IS a biologist and all of this defamation is so rude. Carlos is not an expert on owls. He's done a lovely service but he has also passed along some incorrect information. Stacey has moved on. Can't you let it go now?

Stacey is a biologist. Carlos is not. That's fine. I believe they both love the owls and want what's best for them. What is disappointing to me is the focus by some on how Carlos' thing has somehow made the Molly story a bad thing. Isn't everyone better off, Carlos and the thousands (millions?) of people who've learned more about the owls, Stacey the additional recognition she's received, and the owls who clearly had a great place to live and grow up?

look, Stacey has devoted her life to owls. No one ever heard of her and her book wasn't selling well. Then along comes Carlos, who puts up an owl box with video because he thought it would be fun, and it becomes a worldwide phenomenon. I promise you that Stacey has never been recognized anywhere in public. She is being petty because she is jealous. Just ignore her, don't dignify her by asking that her book ad be taken down. She will fade back into anonymity, and life will go on.

The link was originally added because SPO got so many emails asking where to get it. It seems people have no idea where their local bookstore and library are and have never heard of Amazon.com.
If it makes life a bit easier for SPO to leave the link there then I am not going to complain. Those who take the time to read the comments here know that the author of that book has shot herself in the foot as far as we are concerned and people can make their own decision about whether to read the book and whether to buy or borrow it.

The thing that galls me the most is that sales of Mesley the Owl were in a bit of a slump before Carlos came along. Back at the beginning you could buy a copy on Amazon for a dollar plus shipping. Now you practically have to pay full cover price. And it's all because of Carbs. Yet she continues to harangue him.

Sue, the book is wonderful, and I recommend reading it for its own sake. The author's behavior towards Molly's Owl Box is extremely unfortunate. One of the beautiful things about living in America is that we are free to choose the books we read -- not told which ones to read and which ones are banned. I would read the book if you feel like you want to. The other comments here pretty much sum up what transpired -- it's unfortunate that things got ugly, but I wouldn't let it deter you from reading what you want to!

I think Stacey has been attacked and undermined enough to make up for any argument she had with Carlos quite a while ago. Don't forget that she recommended the branching structures and Carlos finally did it, even though I heard him say that "branching" was a made up word.

I believe I read here that the female barn owls are larger than the males... that is not the norm in most living creatures. The males in bird families are usually the most colorful but that is not the case with the barn owl either.

There's a "comb" of some sort on their middle talon, I believe. This little tidbit is from Moly's Blog:
When she scratches her head, can she cut herself with her talons?
Barn owls have a serrated comb on the middle claw. So far, scientists believe this to be a grooming adaptation that prevents them from hurting themselves.

Hi Katie, very simple, 3 lbs chuck roast, 2 cans enchilada sauce, 1 can diced tomatoes, 1 cup beef broth, chopped onion & a couple garlic cloves and some chili or taco seasoning. I use both. Brown the roast on the stove w/onions & garlic then throw everything in the crock cook on high for 5 hours. It is full proof! ENJOY! CORN TORTILLAS IS A MUST!

However, if you have access to google maps satellite, you can look around and probably get a good idea where he might live in San Marcos. There are only a few gated communities near golf courses there. I know because my husband took it on himself to try to figure it out - thought it was a challenge. No definitive answer found but narrowed it down quite a bit.

LAST FLIGHT (Part 1)

The sun is setting with reddish hues
The box, a silhouette.
The door stands wide with emptiness;
A sight we'll not forget.

For days and nights we've lingered here,
Watching owlets grow
From eggs to fuzz to feathered wings.
Each one we've come to know.

(Part 2)

We've loved them like our very own.
Strangers watched together.
But soon we were a family
"Birds of common feather."

It's sometimes sad to watch each day
Knowing it will end,
And watching as the last one flies
Will cause our hearts to rend.

I agree. Owl too big and hawks hunt during the day so an owl wouldn't be out for them to get. They eat the same things - small rodents. We have lots of hawks here in CA and I have never seen them get an owl (or a cat).

If the hawk felt that the owl was in his territory, he would chase him away. Otherwise, I think he would probably ignore the owl, since they are not real competitors for food (since one hunts at night and the other by day.)

certain kinds of hawks "hang" with certain kinds of owls - of course, I always forget which ones. The hawks take the day shift for hunting the same type of prey if you will: the owls take the night shift. Hawks probably would not be able to take a barn owl as prey due to size.

Maybe for lunch 😊, but only if they were lucky enough to have the advantage of a surprise attack from above. I seriously doubt one would hazard themselves by going inside an enclosed space like the nest box. Most raptors are not really keen on taking anything that would necessitate a struggle. They prefer to remain uninjured themselves and usually like to have an open approach and exit for a swift getaway.

But AZ, they go into food comas at the time - not usually as dramatic as yesterday's scene, but not uncommon at all. Something like what biologists might call torpor? Anyway, they have a huge amount of food that needs to be digested before they can hork up their pellets. It probably takes a large amount of energy to do that, at concentrated on that one thing. I relate to it when I've eaten too much at a big Thanksgiving meal, and just passing out into a heavy sleep afterward. Anyway, that's my take on the situation.

Very charming, Ingrid. To tell the truth, I'm not really in the wilderness, at least not MY idea of wilderness. I am only 5 miles from Interstate 40, but I am far enough back in the woods to not hear much of the urban rumbling. It's a nice compromise and all my neighbors are quiet nature loving folks. The lots out here are all 10 acres or more, surrounded by farms, both old and still active, and a lot of woodlands. Creeks and ponds everywhere, so the wildlife is abundant. I can't keep flowers in the yard without providing a buffet for the deer, but I don't mind. I enjoy the animals just as much if not more than the flowers.

Someone's dreary dreambox.

Good morning everyone. I just came in from sitting on the front porch swing, having my morning coffee, alone, mostly. Of course there were a half dozen juvenile bluebirds foraging in the lawn, making short swift flights from pear tree to ground and back to branch. One juvenile hawk came flying overhead, silent but for the fact that it was being chased through the treetops by several squawking blue jays and, oddly enough, one young crow. Just as I was about to get up for a refill, two one-year-old deer came ambling up the hill, leaving the thicket to browse for a while under the pear tree. The pears are still too firm and tart but, the limbs are hanging lower each day, under weight of the fruit, so the deer are enjoying the branch tips and young leaves that are now within reach. The distant murmuring of dairy cows and young goats seem to be the only persistent sounds, other than the breeze in the trees. Time for a PDF, methinks. 😊

I would give up the urban life in a heartbeat if I could! With not one backward glance. At one time I lived surrounded by woods and wetlands, and planned for the same after I retired. But st happens, and now I'm stuck in the Twilight Zone of urban life with no chance of escape. That's why watching the owl's lives unfold means so much to me. End of sob story!!! (Whew! Good Morning again Kristi, I just wanted to tell you, for some reason I want to put helmet head in a race car?? Looks like it should be racing, not sure why? 😊

Good morning! It sounds like it was an exciting night for all the owls and owl-watchers. Lots of comings and goings.

Morning MODs. Two in the box? Nice that they are staying together for now. Weslie enjoys the company, it seems.

Elliott, do you occasionally let your hair down and just have to listen to some "Funky Town"? Just wondering, In Concord 😊 😊 😊

I'm having a vision of Elliott doing the Safety Dance to the Revolutionary Etude. 🙄

I saw your post about being finally free, Sherry. My mother was a teacher and the first day of the summer was her absolute most favorite day of the year. She probably liked it better than her birthday even. I hope you have lots of fun stuff to do in the next few months.

James, I almost asked if you were here before I posted to Elliott. I knew you would get a kick out of it. Have a great day.

Hey there, Sherry! Well, if the implication is you can't let your hair down to classical music, you're wrong. There are millions of us who do! 😊 If the question is do I let my hair down to non-classical music, you bet! My favorite genres of non-classical are Motown (I have a fetish for the gals who got knocked out of the sky by Diana Ross, such as Kim Weston, Brenda Holloway, and others), and certain of the 80's legends, particularly Dusty Springfield. But there isn't room enough here to list the types of music I enjoy. I hope you do too!
