Oh, Moly was a common barn owl, as common as she could be
She brought the world together through modern technology
Her owlets made us laugh and cry, and turned lives upside down
But the lesson that we surely learned was to care about the world around.
Moly, Moly, we watch you from afar
Moly, Moly how beautiful you are
Moly was a common barn owl, all speckled and golden brown
Her antics with ole Leggs McGee sent laughs around the town
McGee worked hard to feed their brood, and Moly was pleased it's true
And the owlets quickly fattened up and then one day they flew!

I watched earlier as Austin was in the middle, Wesley wooing him on the perch to stay and Max/or/Pattison wooing him from the rooftop to leave. Then I had to go eat lunch: it's almost 3pm in Italy. So happy to see that Wesley won in convincing Austin to stay another day.

Good morning again, everybody. While Carlos is talking, here are the blue box stats, such as they are, for people who can't see them. I can't get anything but IDK IDK IDK from the chat moderators when I ask about specific food delivery times (gee, do I sound peevish?), so this is it. They'll be on the wki in a few minutes.
June 4/5. Total treats observed: 6.
Branching Stats: First owl out at 8:51p. Second out at 8:55p. Austin and Wesley both back in by 5:08a. Max and Patti chillin' at The Perms.

OK, this is my first morning visit . Is this a "reverse peek-a-boo"? At night, around 11:05 pm EST, the first activity is known as the "peek-a-boo" which usually happens about 15 to 20 minutes before first flight . So, when they return back to the box in the morning, do they usually spend some time peering and bobbing like this?
And, does Carlos come on every morning??!

I know... isn't it all just beautiful? 😊 Good morning to you, goodnight for me... I have to go to sleep now (or very soon, as usually I brush teeth, wash face, put on jammies, and continually check in here if all is done - lol! I know there aren't many nights like this left, so they are each cherished. My guess is that next Wednesday night there won't be anybody left in the box or visiting, because my son comes home from his first year of college on Thursday... therefore making the empty nest syndrome less painful!! 😊 Goodnight, owl friends.

Yes, I know they're crocodile cries. 😊

Goodnight, good folks.

Now, or in the morning? I was just on my way to the basement to make a PDF before leaving.

Or I can re-post the images here.

Doesn't matter. If you post it now, I'll copy it down. Or you can go back and post it with the photos, or post it in the am. Can't save the photos now. 😊

Thanks!!

Good night folks (or a very early good morning at 1:10 a.m. in the East). And, yes, Becky, I will dream of owls, but will probably wake up humming the "Molly is a Baam Owl" song 😊 and hubby will ruly know that I'm nuts!!

I'll need to sign off. Strange things are happenin' with this browser and the traveling ad... just had all the video disappear (youtube and feeds) but I could still get the audio and I couldn't post anything. I thought maybe HF was working on something but no one else has posted about any strange stuff. If it isn't cleared up by morning I'll have to use my other account.

Sometimes shutting down helps or clearing out the cache. This live streaming video is hard on computers.

Are you using ad blocking software? I'm willing to bet that is the problem. Google, the owners of YouTube, have been using some new ads on videos which will not play or display if the ad is blocked. 😊

JH, I just use whatever Firefox has for its settings. Never had a traveling ad before and all the video cut out while I was watching something. I have all my other programs (email, twitter client, chat, whatever) all shut down so the live stream can do it's thing. Just been a weird night as far as the computer goes.

...and just a note about the traveling UPS ad, it was also from the same Google ad server, so it may have been a problem with their ads, not this website in particular. I also noticed they changed the Google Image Search tonight, looks like they may be making things up.

If you are still here Nell, I would love to see the new Owl Movie, Legend of the Guardians. Trouble is they always have to put a sad part in those animal movies, and it is embarrassing to be in a theater full of kids and be the only one crying!

I admit to the same. If the mic wasn't so hot and the sound so easily distorted, it would make a very soothing white noise for sleeping. I much prefer to listen to Wesley when he is sitting outside the box though. I have a mild case of tinnitus, so pulsing white noise actually lulls me right to sleep. And, he's almost as reliable as a good metronome!

Shortly after 5am PDT. I was up but not fully awake, and watched them enter the box. Not much going on in the pre-dawn minutes, at least not like there was the first few days.
