Strange things are happenin' with this browser and the traveling ad...just had all the video disappear (youtube and feeds) but I could still get the audio and I couldn't post anything. I thought maybe HF was working on something but no one else has posted about any strange stuff. If it isn't cleared up by morning I'll have to use my other account.

JH (In Technicolor Dreamcoat) I admit to the same. I don't like it so hot and the sound so easily distorted, it would make a very soothing white noise for sleeping. I much prefer to listen to Wesley when he is sitting outside the box though. I have a mild case of tinnitus, so pulsing white noise actually helps me to sleep. From what info we get here they have rescue units set up and rescue what they can. It is just now starting to come in... more to come and worse to come. But they do all they can... we have lots of professional wildlife folks plus volunteers who also love the coastal areas and wildlife... but the job is enormous and just beginning.

Some of you are thinking "This is the end."
I would beg to differ my friends.
These owls leave us all with a lesson.
Just what's that?, I bet you are guessing.
Ever wonder how they all lived in such a tiny place?
Imagine the chaos if it were the human race?

They all took their turn when it came to feeding.
 How of ten do "we" think of what others are needing?
 They looked out for one another, ventured in pairs.
 This world is a mess, ever wonder who cares?
 They leave us with friends we would never have known.
 As they each take off to make a life of their own.
 And as this story comes to a cease.
 They leave us all with a lesson of peace.

Why won't BP use those idle fishermen's boats to try to stem the oil getting to shore. Makes no sense at all!

I think in some areas the fishermen themselves have decided to be proactive instead of waiting for BP to decide if it wants their help. One fisherman said on the news the other night something like "He who helps himself gets helped." They are working in teams with their boats to try to soak up as much as possible. It's like putting a finger in a dike, but they are trying.

Okay, hubby was, I think, only half asleep for this one - I gasped when Austin flew to the roof of the box.
Hubby asked: "What's going on?" I replied: "Austin is on the roof!"
Pause. Pause.
"Well, tell him to get down. He'll hurt himself!"

Darlene, they don't squawk. They screech, but only for specific reasons. Otherwise their calls are very discreet. Look it up on the Internet. There are many sites that provide recordings of the sounds Barn Owls make.

Elliott, I used the word 'squawk.' I'm using it as a catch-all descriptive, because the owlets make more sounds than the hissing sound usually attributed to them, and the people in this chat room understand that. Can you find the proper collective term for these calls?

Carbs says he can barely hear them from right under the box so it's not likely the neighbors could hear them at all. The mic really amplifies sound. Now that they are in the palm tree though they might hear them if they are outside near the palms. We can hear screech owls once in a while.

Long story! She came into my yard in July 1999, taking up a storm, and took up residence in my yard. Finally I figured she was a stray and took her to the vet and adopted her. The very next day she came back in the yard with a note tied to her band new saying "Please don't take me. My name is Izabelle. I have a mother and father and sister and brother and they love me very much." Turns out the new people across the street just let her stay outside. So we had joint custody for a year and then they decided to give her to me. The very next day she got hit by a motorcycle. I'm glad I was her human then: I'm pretty sure her first parents would not have been able to pay her vet bills. So she's my feisty little sweetheart.

Some of you were talking about birds below. I'm pet-sitting for two African Greys (and 2 cats). They are hilarious! The funny things they say, like "you have poop water", and it always sounds just like their owner. It scared me once, I thought the owner walked into the room when he shouldn't have been home yet.

My aunt had a friend that cussed like a sailor. Her bird said everything she said and sounded just like her. My aunt, who was still living at home at the time, kept the bird for her friend while she was away one summer. The preacher came to visit my grandmother and when he rang the doorbell, the bird started cussing!!! My grandmother was so embarrassed!!! LOL.

I only got it partly - but now I know I was on the right track!! A dear friend, Bill Hinkley, passed way this week. He was an amazing musician, played fiddle, mandolin, dobro and every other string instrument you could think of - and had a photographic memory for instruments, bands, and music. He was the first musician to play on Garrison Kellor's show (Prairie Home Companion)- he would have known this instantly - and I think he was yelling the answer to me from heaven, but I couldn't hear it over the music!

No no really. The vet thinks he was rolled by a car or a big animal and we think he got in a fight with some animal. He has no fear and thinks he can do anything. We have seen him aggravating deer and they have chased him into the garage and come into the garage after him. It doesn't stop him though. He thinks he can do anything. We imagine he took on something he couldn't handle.

Yes, the ad was an overlay on top of the chat so I couldn't read the comments. If you moused over the ad it would pop up bigger and start a video (which I was not interested in watching). It finally moved so that I could read the comments underneath it. Very annoying.
