Wow, that Stacey stuff is pretty crazy. Maybe Carlos should have put up an OSHA warning on the box (in owl language, of course) that indicated it didn't meet everyone's barn owlexpectations. Maybe someone should warn the sparrows that are nesting in the crossbar of the "A" in the Walgreens sign too. If every snag (dead, standing tree) meets her specifications too, I'll eat a fledge ledge. Wow, honey. Get a (better) life.....

Good eve -- just in for a quick peek and a comment: I totally missed yesterday, but had time to visit those sites posted about Carlos Housing and CarlosRoyal. Wow! What a talented person. Have you seen not only his skettehces and the rocking chair he carved, but also the maple box, and Donna's sketches. Truly talented. And to be so genuine and down-to-earth and not heady like so many people can be. This has been a phenominal experience! 🙂 🙂 really? i saw a lot of talk about the kind of structure around an owl box necessary to raise owlets more safely, and ideas about how best to make sure newly constructed boxes have those external supports. maybe i didn't stick around long enough.

the thing with carlos is stupid and they should get over it, but i'm happy that tom will be building perches and platforms on his new boxes. this is partially selfish; it makes for better owl cam. Today, 18:54:51 - Flag - Like - Reply

Stacey has spent her life devoted to owls and she is melting down because Carlos is getting all the attention. Carlos has done more for owls than she has in her entire academic career. She is reacting badly to it, and I guess its really sort of expected. Just human nature.

It does ring a bit like no one is telling her how pretty she is in her new party dress, doesn't it. So much for the common good of owls. Think of how many people are AWARE of owls now. Or nature in general. Kids. Hopefully some will carry this experience with them into adulthood and do great things for our world. That, in itself, is the greatest gift that has been given here, IMO.

Alessandra, are you justifying bad behavior? Just because it's human nature doesn't make it right. Carlos recommended her book at the beginning and she can't be greatful for that?

Some polite manners on Stacey's part and Carlos probably would have gladly installed his perches to her standard and perhaps even invited her over for an interview since she is in the area. Her "problem" with Carlos sends him to other wildlife experts for advice. She proved herself to be untrustworthy and unreliable.

Very close lightening strikes everywhere. Another friend lost power - nearby lightening strikes fried her computer and hot water heater - one of her neighbors had a bedside light bulb explode and her cell phone on charger fried and another neighbor had a huge pine tree come right down through his house. re: stacey's new blog post i read through her blog, and joined the yahoo group to lurk, because the comments about the controversy here made me so curious. tom, i believe, installs owl boxes for a living, including the one we're so privileged to watch here. his installations did not include any of the external structures (except the branch-like perch sticking out of the side, i believe), no porch, no crossbeams within easy hopping distance.

Today, 18:40:40 - Flag - Like - Reply

i missed the real fight between her and carlos, but from what's on her blog now, it looked like her main issue was that tom was continuing to install owl boxes without any of those extra structures, which in her opinion is dangerous for the owlets. him coming to her, accepting the need for external structures, and wanting to work with her on future designs, is exactly what she's been saying she wanted.

Today, 18:41:08 - Flag - Like - Reply

i don't know what nasty things were said, they've all been deleted, but having wat ched these owls come out i think she's right that they need something close by to hop to, and i'm glad that all tom's boxes will now include that!

too bad about that mention about carlos not allowing them to use the footage to show why owls need those structures. sounds like there's too much bad blood bet ween him and stacey to work anything out right now. i don't think she needed to mention it, and i hope that they can come to an understanding. it's so painfully obvious that everyone involved in this spat loves these animals and wants the best for them.

if you're speaking to me, jh, i'm not sure why you would choose words that could so easily be taken as insulting. "excessive"? why?

Ive never posted one thing against carlos on this site or anywhere else. I learned to love these animals thanks to him and imgrateful. I think that the sniping people do against stacey here is as unproductive as her dig at carlos.

anyway, after much reading, i believe that she may be abrasive but that we're all on the same side. there's no need to knock her scientific credentials, it's every bit as petty as her comments about carlos. Today, 18:52:24 – Flag – Like – Reply

Emily - I think that's correct. Tom is the guy who made Carlos' owl nest box. I'm sure they've all learned a bt from this experience. If I were putting up a nest box I would have a "deck" outside the main part of the box where they could walk around before deciding to fly off. Nest box, wander porch. branching area, then landing platforms. Why not?

But the good news for "our" owls is that they ve been fine without most of those things. If they didn't have their platforms I'm sure they would have used the trees, fence, kestrel house and neighbors roof, Even Stacey has made several statements about owls adapting to to the rural/urban changes in their nesting areas.

Wow. She actually sounds a bit perturbed that Carlos won't share his pics. Sooo...I come to your house, you cook me dinner, and I proceed to tell you what a rotten cook you are and how ashamed you should be. Then I ask you for a doggie bag. That's rich.

I don't know who's right or wrong on the scientific aspects of this (I suspect there are equal shares for both parties but that's quickly losing importance for me), but that is just ... well ... it requires some pretty big cajones, let's just say. There are ways to handle issues you may have with others and there are ways not to. There is a clear winner on that one, imo.

Off to watch happy (thriving) birds, now!

Has anyone read Stacey O'Brien's blog entry for today? There essentially seems to be some drama surrounding one Tom Stephan, whom she is welcoming with fanf are into her camp. I don't know him, but he seems to be someone knowledgeable and active in the area of owl nestboxes. She also references Carlos. I prefer not to editorialize but will let you draw your own conclusions.

We're all in it for the owls! I hope Stacey feels the same way

"I could not help but think last night that the internet is popularizing Barn Owls and one amatuer is makeing a three ring circus out of these beautiful feathered dinosaurs" (quote by Tom- who sold the owl box to Carlos, apparently)

Humor aside, the trouble with being a sociopath in New York City, is that there are always intellectuals who find you interesting, and who want to understand what you are about. So they latch on to you and follow you around. I've seen it happen to perfectly repulsive and obnoxious people who shouldn't be in society in the first place, but who strangely become objects of fascination for a certain segment who find them interesting and intriguing! I remember being in a bar recently where a young man, who had either recently huffed or ingested meth, was engaged in a very lucid dialogue with multiple invisible humans (or aliens for all I know). 3 or 4 other visible (at least to me) humans gathered around him and joined in the dialog. Deer, rabbits, racoons and woodchucks are the banes of a gardener, so we always had to plant twice as much as we wanted 🙁 . And the darned crows - they would pull up the corn plants when they were just about 3 inches high, pick off the seed and leaves the reest scattered all over - grrrrrrr. Hi Jan! I have missed you! Had to leave early last night. (Plus, my computer doesn't do well when multiple posts begin.)

I wanted to say that I bet you and my husband, Jim, have birding friends in common....when we lived in Wash D.C., we used to go to Cape May. Do you still bird?

Today, 17:55:05 - Flag - Like - Reply

Jan (Bayonne, NJ)

Not much these days. I have a condition, peripheral neurapathy, which affects my feet and is terribly painful. It effectively put an end to my birdwatching days, or so I thought. Last year I started with a new doctor and a new medication, and I'm finally feeling a lot better. So I started going out and walking again, only to find that during the years I was off my feet, I had developed arthritis and bursitis. Dang! Working on trying to improve that now; I hope to at least do some limited birding in the near future. I can't tell you how much I miss it! Today, 18:09:22 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🌽 Natalie

Jan, I amsorry to hear that... I know (seriously) how frustrating that must be for you. I also know you were (are) an excellent birder, even if it has to be online. I really, really hope your new treatment works for you! (And my husband, Jim, sends you his best, too.) Today, 18:15:50 - Flag - Like - Reply

Thanks, Natalie. Birding on the internet is better than no birding at all, and as we see right in front of our eyes, it can offer us much that we could never see out birding in the field. We could never know about the private lives of Barn Owls any other way. I think that is very cool! Say Hi to Jim, and ask him what he thinks of the condusion I reached yesterday! That was waiting for. I really love that song especially with children singing. If only there could be more peace in the world like there is in this little owl box. Gets me emotional every time I hear. Probably because this wonderfulsite will be gone for us in too short of a time. What a great ride it was and so much was learned and loved.

Border Collies are simply the best! We had two, my sweet Petie died in 2007 🙁 But the photo I put up is our Patti! They really are too smart, so today Patti walked into the living room and I was on the phone, so I just pointed to the window where she went and could see the squirrels and without saying a word, she ran outside to (mildy) chase them. She and the squirrels play that game all day long. 😃 🙂

Does Carlos post his chats somewhere? I am never on line when he is talking. Also, I would love to see and hear Molly singing to her two little ones still at home from last nights activities. Anyone have a site where I can see this? Today, 16:51:16 - Flag - Like - Reply

Click on large video above and go to that site. Below the video is a long list of recorded videos. He doesn't purposely record his daily stop in to chat, but he does record interviews and school narrations. Also, there are just videos of some days and nights of owl activity. Since there is a break in the action, I have to tell you that when I brought the owl box up on my Promethean Board (think big screen TV) for my students to see this past week, Austin immediately came to the front and "took care of business." Needless to say, the 10 year olds were very impressed, and they wanted to know how I arranged for it to happen right when I logged on. Today, 16:24:46 - Flag - Like - Reply

I haven't yet. I was distracted, reading some of the BOA material from today and yesterday.

It's addictive - drama, unintentional satire, tragedy, comedy, and indecisive doublespeak indecision all wrapped up into one. We SPO "CR minions" seem to be a topic of much consternation over there lately. (probably because they've all been banned from CR's channel) We've even been the catalyst for some mind-numbing and heated break-up and mushy make-up dialogs. So much like Jr. High that I almost miss those days.

But, I'll get back to my primary focus now, and get 'er done. 🙂 Today, 16:30:36 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by S Chris in Olympia, WA 🜉 Kathryn R 🜉 Bette Mary Carroll To me, Pimms alsays had a coke-like taste. We always drank it with club soda and a cucumber sliver.

Pimm's is a gin-based liquor made in England from dry gin, liqueur, fruit juices and spices. It was created in 1859 by the English oyster bar owner James Pirm. The recipe is still a secret, and only six persons know exactly how it is made. It has a dark, golden-brown color, a medium body and a taste of dtrus fruits and spice. It is either served on the rocks or used in cocktails.

LOL - a zip file is just a folder of different files, compressed into one file for emailing and moving around. You need to have a utility to compress the folder. I recommend and use 7-zip. (http://www.7-zip.org/ 😂 But WinZip is another one. And some versions of Windows have a compression ut ility too. Right-click on a folder and choose "Send to Compressed (zipped) Folder" or similar. See below.

Ok, I am formally retracting my earlier comment about the Molly song. Mary Carroll mentioned that it didn't sound like 'Barleycorn' and I'm going to agree with her. I compared the two while the song was just on and it may be loosely based on some part of that song, but I don't think it is. The screen name for the lady who wrote the lyrics is 'Barleycorn', which is where the confusion crept in - at least for me.

Lyrics below, and are available on the BLOG « Molly's Box

(I think I'mgoing to rewrite some Molly lyrics too. From one of my favorite songs. Sung by The Agoraphobic Cowboy himself, Rick Moranis.)

MODs Anonymous.... i think someone has to come up with a 12-step program.

step one: accept the existence of seasonal animal reproduction; step two: accept the fact that you have no control over the beginning or end of the breeding season; step three: stock up on lots of videos and screencaps to provide your next fix....

.... wait a minute. that can't be right. someone who's actually cured their MOD is going to have to come up with this. Today, 14:51:59 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🔚 Bette 🚱 Ruth ~ from MN 🐖 Lynda C Leaving for a while to get something started for super and have hubby check my camera. I charged it yesterday but could only take 4 shots today before it shut down. I think the battery is "kaput" - it's the original battery since 2001 🙂 . I'd really like to replace it with a smaller, more pocket-ready camera. This one is WAY outdated - a Sony Cybershot DSC-S70 and only 3.3 megapixels (whatever those are 😕 🙂 but it's still OK for what I use it for. Hold the fort against any attacks, keep the faith and keep smiling !! Back later Today, 14:09:26 - Flag - Like - Reply

When do the owlets get old enough to form pairs and start their own broods?

And how do they know enough not to mate with their own siblings - The genetic sorting would be a mess if they did that, but barn ow's don't seem to suffer from the appearance of lots of recessive trait. So the barn owl population dynamics must be sucessful. Does anyone know what these dynamics are - or know a good reference?? Thanks

Today, 13:48:39 - Flag - Like - Reply

It's probably instinct to not mate with their own siblings. I haven't done any extensive reading on the owls.

Today, 13:56:28 - Flag - Like - Reply

JH (in Technicolor Dreamcoat)

These guys and gals will split ways and then pair up with others. They can breed next spring, as far as I know. I'm uncertain if they are capable of doing so earlier than that, given the climate, but I'm pretty certain about them being capable of breeding at their first spring following birth. Today, 14:10:57 - Flag - Like - Reply

Thanks for the info JH! It would be nice to know if Molly or some of her offspring nest at the Royals' owl box in the future. Today, 14:19:14 - Flag - Like - Reply

Elliott

Elliott Ang, that information is readily available on the Internet. I have had occasion to look it up but did not bookmark any sites. I believe the avoidance of sibling mating has more to do with population dispersal than mutual recognition by siblings. I believe owls can reproduce at less than a year old.
