Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here

I just heard "the Moly Song" from Carlos' broadcast (I only heard part because the sound on the computer kept cutting out). The tune the children were singing did NOT sound like John Barleycorn (the folk song)...so I do not have a clue what the music is. Maybe someone else knows.

Plus I got on too late to hear what Carlos' Skype name was. I just love all the little extra things Caris does to make this site even more fun.

Posted a comment and pik much earlier about the lupine now just in full bloom along our roadsides and in fields here. I finally went out between showers (and came back in with wet feet and knees) to click a few of my own bbsoms. They still remind me of the owls standing straight and tall, side by side with their chins up in the air. Couldn't get just the right "blue" and "pink" msk to show their gender.

Thank you, Ruth. I'm in Western Maine. Lupine grows everywhere along roadsides and many have it on the edge of their lawns. I believe it was originally a cultivated plant, but has gone wild. It is not invasive and doesn't take over other species of plants. It does self-seed easily and our highway dept. frequently sprays/spreads the seeds along with the grass seed when they complete the final cover on slopes after road construction. I've had varying success with lupine seeds, but it does NOT transplant well.

You're not alone. I have counted as many as 12 young bluebirds in my front yard this past week. The boxes in both my neighbor's and my yard have run through 2 broods each. Oh, and the cowbirds are prolific this year, too. Excepting the one that had its nest robbed by a hungry black snake snake yesterday. That was very interesting to watch. I wrote it up for a blog entry but never posted it. Maybe I should finish it up. Hmm...

There are many, many renditions on YouTube - her is only one - <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=C716NA11NJS>

Some are more upbeat than others, some have a short history of the song included. It's a pretty popular Irish tune.

One correction - it's called 'Barleycorn' - one word, not two as I originally wrote.

IP addresses can be traced to individual computers, routers, servers, etc., and can be blocked. However, technically savvy people can find ways to make it difficult to trace, e.g., routing through different servers, bouncing around the world, ect. Also, can easily just use another computer, or use free Wi-Fi with their routers, ect. The web site administrator can detect the IP as it is connecting to their IP address (as a round about way). We, as individuals, watching that stream cannot trace the IP address of posters here, as they are not directly connecting to our computer's IP address. Hope that clarifies it a little- can get quite complicated though.

Mary... BTW... I apologize for butting into your conversation with James. Unfortunately, I have had to learn more about my computer than my car- through having to problemsolve many times. The site administrators can tell, and block, if they have to, but I think they only do that if it meets certain criteria- obscene, criminal, ect. Again, my apologies if I was out of place answering you.

Hey Friends, if you haven't seen it, I recommend CHERYL OF OLYMPIA's video posted at 9:24:31 AM PST.
AVATAR COLLAGE, still squishin' n squashin' mergin', resorting: it's like a constant jigsaw puzzle where you're supposed to remember whether or not a piece has already been added. Me bum and eyes are paying the price but I love it. I feel like I'm herding a bunch of friends (or maybe cats).
Love you all, even Dharma. (what did James say about not playing with karma by harming a dharma. For those who are clueless as to what I'm referring to, Dharma is Sherking (?) a little drama. Eckhart would say, "Just observe, we don't need to pulled in".)

I call ours 'ring necks' too, but after looking them up on the Cornell site, reading, and listening to the sounds, I found out that our bigger doves are actually Eurasian Collared doves. We have a brown thrasher pair that just built a nest a couple days ago in our oak tree. That was surprising, as this isn't usually in their breeding area, especially this time of year (hot and hurricane season).

To answer your question, Ray - Yes, there are IP logs of all the people who visit this web page.
The multiple personality disorders are easily decoded by those with access to the logs.

That said, it's also relatively easy to connect the dots when you compare written statements from multiple sources. I.e. the chat PDFs from here and a couple other websites. PDFs and search functions make that a breeze. People tend to use different screen names, but their prose, grammar and message is very difficult to disguise. It almost always reveals their true identity, given enough rope... er, I mean time.

MOD FRIENDS, I have to leave for the day. I have much to do, but wondered if I could have owls like these in my wooded back yard. We use to have rabbits and chipmunks day & nite, but now only see squirrels. BUT we do have 3 cats that roam the neighbor hood day & nite. Can owls this size "pick-up" a grown cat? And I keep missing Carbs comments. Did he say when the last 2 will leave? OK, I'm done. Maybe catch U Later.

Hopefully, to lighten up the "mood" here a little before I go. Our roadsides and fields are in full blossom right now with Lupine (not a true "wildflower", but have gone wild in many areas of Maine - and not to the detriment of other plants, and not as invasive as "boneset" and other non-native species). I have a few on the edge of our yard, but too many to take photos - so these are "stock" photos. And, don't think I'm "nuts" but I DO see an "owl" resemblance - especially like Austin and Wesley when they do their pose standing straight and tall with their "chins" up in the air. The purple/blue is most prevalent and the pinks and whites which are hybrids often revert back to the purple.

Thank you Lynda. I Looks absolutely serene - very beautiful and relaxing. I love the moose too.

You are SOOOO LUCKY to be able to see these beautiful animals...We sure are all blessed w/ wonderful wildlife all over our great country, aren't we??

That we are, reenee. We just have to open our eyes and ears to see and her them.

Lynda, as for the blue herons. I'm in central Illinois and every night (past week or so) we've seen a fairly large bird fly over (not one we usually see) and a neighbor said they thought it was a blue heron. Do you think one could be passing through here? Just wondering if you would know if they come around central US at all or any idea what it might be. I'm going to look on line later.

9 not supposed to be in there

Good Morning everyone

Hey, Adam - How ya doin'? Are you still on vacation?

yep. till tomorrow.

Hi Adam!!

I just LOVE watching them!

Was wondering--> do Molly and/or McGee still bring treats to Wes? I know he doesn't leave his "home" that much and I see 2 have "flown the coop"...

Yes, the parents are still bringing food to the box at night. Wes still spends more time than any of the others inside, so he often gets many of those deliveries.

Thank you, JH! I am thinking our little Wes is NOT going to be that little much longer w/ all those treats he gets to enjoy all by himself-->LOL! He may not be too stupid, huh???

Reenee, when you see all of the owls together you can see that Wes is definitely NOT little Wes any longer. She's HUGE!

What are they looking at?

James, do you still communicate with Trystan? Does he have any opinions or insights into the behavior of the youngest owl in a clutch?

I have not chatted with Trystan in a while. He was very busy with many (30?) young owlets at his own place, the last time I spoke with him. I'm guessing he probably is still very busy.

good question

Good morning from Purdy WA. We might get that big yellow thing in the sky back today! High of 68! So glad again to see two in the box!! I wonder how long I will be saying that?! Hope everyone has a great day today!!

Hi, Becky... :p

Good morning, Becky! Hope that sun shines on you for the next day or two.

Just got back from taking a big dogs on a walk with my son. It was a total circus act!! But at least they are now quiet and tired!!

what I got to hear the song just before my quaker decided to play (or fight I can never tell which) with the toys in his cage....he's screamed so much and so loud in my ear I'm deaf!! lol bi

I may have to get a bird after all of this is over!!!

marla, I've had a bird of some sort for almost 30 yrs. they have as much personality as a dog or cat. If you do decide you want one, do some research. It will help you get the type of bird that suits what you are looking for. Finches are great but they're not very interactive with you; budgies (parakeets) won't talk much but they love to be handled, etc....also you want to look at the lifespan and have a plan for someone to love them if they outlive you. birds will grieve themselves to death over the loss of a mate or the person they are bonded to.

the song is starting to sound like a saturday morning cereal commercial on tv cartoons. (or I'm regressing) ooooooh.....precious!

Heard the Molly Song!!! Thank you!!!

Jan - I clicked thru to another bird photographer at the bot tom of the central park link, and he had a section on owls, but no barn owls. There are barn owls on the east coast aren't there?

Yes.

Sure there are - I used to see them (never close up like here!) in bars when I lived in the country. But there are no Barn Owls in Central Park. Not yet, anyway. You never know - 20 years ago there were no hawks or owls in Central Park at all!

Good to see the OB2 is being left on. I like to see what's going on outside, too.

Does anyone remember how old Wesley was when Molly left the nest during the day?

I remember that he had just swallowed his first whole mouse. She left the very next day I think or the day after. I don't recall how many days old he was though. It might be on the timeline on the wkld page.

I don't remember the details but, you may be able to find out by reading back through the timeline.

I took a screenshot of all four that day, and have been labeling them with the owlets ages. According to that, Wesley was 22 days old and she's 69 days old today. I didn't realize it had been that long. Wonder if that's why she has such strong bonds with her siblings?

Interesting observation, Cinda! She may be more closely bonded with Austin and the nest box than with Molly. Molly brings food, but she brings it to the box.

Certainly many more days with Austin than Molly! 22 days vs. 47 days. How sad that I had to use a calculator to do the math!

I thought of that, too...she and Austin were both sort of raised by the "big girls"...Molly had to go help McGee and together they did a wonderful job of providing for baby owlets...

So interesting to observe and notice things like this! Carbs and Donna CANNOT be thanked enough for the opportunity they have shared so freely with all of us!

Sleepy-eyed Austin, falling asleep. His head almost hit the floor before he jolted awake. So cute to watch!

Jan, did you get to see the pictures of Wesley's face plant yesterday??

No, Marla - where are they??

It happened sometime between 4:30 and 5:00 yesterday.... maybe in the PDF????

I got up early to watch them return to owlbox, then I had a quick nap -- but I'm still yawning too

My eyeballs are just about falling out of my head.

Can you guys hear my boys yelling "What's for breakfast mom?" Guess I better go and do momma things. Everybody whisper when the babies want to take a nap, you hear?

Just fed my son, and he fledged away for the day to a movie -- Please Give

(so I can continue my owlspeaking)

Aw-ww-w I missed the playing of the Molly Song. I would have loved that. When did this happen in real time? Must have been last night. Please tell me if there is a link so I could at least hear if not see the song.

Carbs said he would play it after mower man leaves

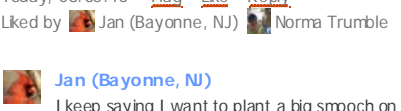

Don't you wish you could just reach out and give them a big hug

I keep saying I want to plant a big smooch on their soft, beautiful faces! Dreamon, dreamer!!

The kids are back!!! Another day of charming entertainment!!!

Well, as you can see, Bette, they aren't as easy to spot as the big white and blue guys - and they're very wellcamouflaged! They like to nest and hang around ponds: if you have any ponds near where you'll be staying, those are the places to look.

The second picture above shows a Green Heron's habitat very well. I don't think they'd be in the reeds too often - they don't blend in as well there as they blend in with pond shores and sticks and logs.

The noise you hear is the lawn mower.
It's too bad for the sensitive microphone and it overdrives the audio, causing the distortion you hear right now.

No mouse involved. Austin moved from the platform, up toward the perch a couple times, being nuzzled by the away-owl, going up to the perch on the right, looking to the other owls in sequence, until the owl on the roof top flew away. At that point, I had to leave and was SO happy to see Ausin in the box after that.

Jan, Thanks for sharing the info/pics on Central Parks Great Egret . Nice to see NY is blessed with such beautiful birds. Had no idea. The city girl needs to take a vacation to NY not only for pleasure but an education too. You really have to know where to go to see the wildlife in the big cities around myself (Chattanooga & Nashville) it's not just an everyday thing you see there. I'm in between these two cities and am blessed everyday with so many different wildlife.

 Laura, during migration up to 150 different species go through Central Park: warblers, flycatchers, ducks of all kinds, many types of owls, Cooper's Hawks and dozens of other species. Nesters in CP include Baltimore Orioles, some warblers, Great & Snowy Egrets, Blue Herons, Green Herons, Screech Owls, Red-tailed Hawks, Kestrels, Peregrine Falcons - I could go on and on. Central Park is a feast of concentrated life at any time of the year. Birding there, as opposed to birding out in the woods and fields, is almost guaranteed to be highly productive. It's a magical place, due to its proximity to the shoreline and dead center in the path of the great Eastern flyway!

 I haven't been there in a year or so. When I lived in Manhattan, I went there often. There are always birdwaks going on; during migration season, people from all over the world come just to see the many species of Warblers that stop to eat and rest after their long flight over Delaware Bay. When there's a good wind blowing up from the south, the birds take advantage of the tailwind and arrive in huge numbers, all at once. I miss going there, but my arthritis has been bothering me - it's about an hour and a half' trip from Bayonne by public transit. I visit this site daily to keep up with what's happening in Central Park:

 The Egret pictures are awesome. It is wonderful that they can thrive in the midst of a city. Reminds me of the Everglades we in Florida are trying to protect which now is in extreme danger from the BP disaster... We have Ibis that are in our neighborhoods in the morning and evening unfortunately. I am not good with the camera. Let us all pray for the wildlife in danger due to the oil. It is heartbreaking. We all must do whatever we can to preserve and clean up what will destroy precious life. Blog, Vote go to the websites of NRDC, EDF, NWF, there are many ways to contribute without money. Thanks everyone for all your wonderful pictures of all the species of animals and birds. God Bless America.....In God we Trust.....

 Last night I looked at a slide show on the NYTimes website. Pelicans and other birds coated with oil. These magnificent creatures - the looks on their faces as they struggled to comprehend and deal with it. Innocent creatures, besmirched by man; their pictures a silent reproach to us all.

 Haven't seen this particular guy in person, but over the years I've watched dozens of egrets and herons in action. It's one of those things you can't ever get enough of. You described it perfectly, Moly!

I once saw a Great Blue Heron down a snapping turtle! GBHs will eat anything they can cram down their throats - I guess that's why they're so successful and widespread. And I've seen egrets eat frogs many times - head first, down the hatch, feet last!

 Good morning everyone. The Wiki has been updated with new PDFs of the chat. 10pm - 6am PDT. - Molly \(the Owl's Wiki / Chat Stream PDFs\)
 And for those who haven't been made aware, there is also a new Photo Slideshow here - Molly \(the Owl's Wiki / Photos Photos Photos\)

The Slideshow is random, and should not repeat sequences on each visit. Also, if you happen to see a certain picture you just have to have, you can click on that image as it appears and you will be taken to that particular image in the huge holding gallery, where you can download the image for yourself. (there is also a slideshow option on that page, but it is not random and will restart from the 1st photo every time.)

Below are some new additions to the slideshow gallery. Enjoy.

 Thanks, Coleen. I'm hoping to provide everyone with a means to collect and share their own favorites. I believe my web host has a way for visitors to make their own little "collections" as they browse, but I haven't figured out how to make that work properly, just yet. The gallery will continue to grow and I will eventually start breaking out themed mini-slideshows to put on the wiki. I could still use more photos though, particularly of the early days, nesting, eggs, bonding, etc. Anyone with good screenshots they want to see in the slideshow should zip them in a folder and email it to me here - james@nphphoto.com - Put 'Molly Slideshow Photos' in the subject line.

Good Mornin! Just checking in with my favorite owls. Glad to see Austin stayed with Westleigh. Get to see them at least for another night. I fell asleep at the helm last night, moved to the couch where I could sit and see my desk and watch and that is where I stayed all night fast asleep!! I missed all the action. 😊

Oh, Moly was a common barn owl, as common as she could be
She brought the world together through modern technology
Her owlets made us laugh and cry, and turned lives upside down
But the lesson that we surely learned was to care about the world around.

Moly, Moly, we watch you from afar
Moly, Moly how beautiful you are

Moly was a common barn owl, all speckled and golden brown
Her antics with ole Leggs McGee sent laughs around the town
McGee worked hard to feed their brood, and Moly was pleased it's true
And the owlets quickly fattened up and then one day they flew!

Good morning, everyone,
Carlos just said that events are listed below the owl box. I don't seem to see it. Help? I loved the song, can we get the words and music, wonder? It'd love to see my music teacher at school teach this song to the kids!

 I watched earlier as Austin was in the middle, Wesley wooing him on the perch to stay and Max/or/Pattison wooing him from the roof top to leave. Then I had to go eat lunch: It's almost 3pm in Italy. So happy to see that Wesley won in convincing Austin to stay another day.

 Good morning again, everybody. While Carbs is talking, here are the blue box stats, such as they are, for people who can't see them. I can't get anything but IDK IDK IDK from the chat moderators when I ask about specific food delivery times (gee, do I sound peevish?), so this is it. They'll be on the wki in a few minutes.

June 4/5. Total treats observed: 6.

Branching Stats: First owlet out at 8:51p. Second out at 8:55p. Austin and Wesley both back in by 5:08a. Max and Patti chillin' at The Palms.
