I just saw that today is the 6th of June, D-Day-The Longest Day. I tell you Lang (Lieut and aid to German General Rommel) that our only chance is to catch them (allied troops) as they are struggling to get ashore. For both the allies and for Germany that will truly be the longest day. Rommel talking to his aid while overlooking French beaches.

OK that's it for me. These owls are saying it to sleep. I just dozed off with my hand on the mouse and all of a sudden I must have picked up the mouse & slammed on the desk. I would say it is time for rest and I will try and be awake to see who comes back to the box I must have picked it up. I have lost track which owl is which and the whereabouts of each of them, etc. I hope I see Austin and Wes return home. Seems like that is who is sitting on the perch now but I couldn't really tell you. Mary Carroll, I will have to delay the wolf discussion for later... Sorry. So goodnight to all you night owl watchers and the ones who can pull an "owl nighter" and stay up all night.

Summertime, and the owlets are restless,
Bunnies hoppin', and the neighbors are high...
Your daddy's fast, and your mom's a great hunter,
So hush little owlet, do-on't you cry!

One of these evenin's, you're gonna ri-ke up screechin'
Then you'll spread your lit le wings, your pretty wings,
And take to the ska-la-la-ly....
But th'at evenin', ain't nothin' gonna harm you,
With Austin and Pat tson fly-yin' by....

Glad my hubby isn't the only one. He "peeks" at the site now and then just to see the owls, but sitting in front of it for hours is not his thing. That's OK - when you're with someone 24/7 it's necessary for each to have their own time to do their thing. . . . right???

There's a party next door, the place is happening.
We haven't gone far, were just night capping.
Were not worried about rabbits or even mice.
Just bring us a cold one, make sure it's on ice.
Wonder what Moly & McGee would say if they knew.
We weren't in the box, we were drinking brew?
I bet we would really be in big trouble.
Hey wonder if these drunks think they're seeing double?
We better not tell Max and Patti where we were.
They may be jealous and cause a big stir.
They think they have it made in that fancy palm tree.

A little story that hapoened with mv hubby's familv. Last week mv father-in-law oot a call from Canada. kid came on the chone and said "Grandba. I'm in jail... then a guy came on and said he was with the Toronto Police and Grandpa would have to wire $4700 to get him out because of a hit and run accident. Hubby called his dad about that time and his dad was crying...couldn't talk because he didn't have $4700. Finally Hubby got hold of dad and told him it was a scam that targeted older people. THEN... LAST MONDAY his granddaughter DID GET ARRESTED for driving with 3 friends Not because she was drunk but she was 3 weeks under the age of 21. So when GRANDPA was listening to the answering machine with his DAUGHTER, SHE SAID DELETE THE MESSAGE. Even when the Bail Bondsman called, Mom hung up on him. It was eventually straightened out. But there were even more nightmares. 1000 words up?

I'm sure Carlos is way too nice and wants no trouble with a neighbor (because he may feel that he has been an inconvenience to the neighbor's peace and quiet), but don't you think he just might want to tell them to quiet down a bit? Okay - so I don't think hubby was sleep-taking on this one...
I'm laying in bed, computer on my lap, he's sleeping on his side. Rot's over, puls himself up onto his elbow, looks at the computer screen and says:
"What's that?"
I say: "It's Wesley. He wants more food." Hubby looks at the screen for a few seconds, then looks me straight in the face and says:
"Huh. Must come from your side of the family."
Plops back down and back to sleep!

Truthfully? It depends. But we live so close to the coast that funnels rarely touch where we are. Ironically, the news just said someone lost a roof in my div...I'm betting no wind from us. And I didn't know about the warning till after the fact anyway...tv was off for bird view and I didn't hear any sirens.

Guess I'm buying a WeatherAlert radio tomorrow.

 Laura TN - I saw your reply to me about your cabinets (when, I thought I'd never get back down that far 😊 😊). They are definitely custom made cabinets (vs. pre-made) to have that pattern continue across the doors. The lumber for the door panels was most likely cut from the same tree and the pattern reversed on the doors. Anyway, I love them and hope they don't get painted. I'm impartial to natural wood.

Common Barn Owl

They say these owls are "common" barn owls - and I guess they are. What makes them so amazing to me is that they are so dear. That nature's common sites and sounds could be so truly rare. And still be just the common daily tasks of normal owlsh fare. I look into the trees around me, hoping for a glimpse of something 'common' and not rare, but seldom seen by me. Surrounding us on every walk and every 'common' day are things as precious and so sweet as Molly's family. Look up and see what's there to see. Look down and sideways too. The 'common' is so grand and worth our time to view!

I am so grateful to all of the obvious participants in this little event, but I'm also grateful to SPO for being such gracious hosts to Carbs' stepchildren (teehee). I'm sure this chatroom has taken on a life of it's own just like everything else connected to M&M and they've done a fabulous job. From smurfs (heck, we can't even call em trolls like normal het people) and our zero tolerance of them to issues w/ adverts, not to mention the "norma" things that go into keeping a place like this running smoothly. They've done a great job and have been so nice to our little community.

SO THANK YOU, SPO AND MODS! (that's moderators, MOD's :D)

Those wood pieces were arranged so the owls would show up on each door.
Glad you like it.

Not really sure who had it done since the house was originally built in the 1950's. We bought the house in 1993. If I ever needed one replaced chances are I would not be able to find someone that could do it.

The image is pretty dark, Laura, but I can see an outline of a whole owl? Did you say earlier that it continued across two cabinet doors? That's interesting. Do you know what type of wood the cabinets are made of.

Lynda, I couldn't tell you. Even though the pic came out dark, the cabinets are a pine color. As I said, they were here when we bought the house and at that time I didn't know Molly and McGee existed so it wasn't that important to me.

I'm not using a MAC but at the top of your comment box you should see a youtube icon. Click on that and add the actual youtube URL. Hope that helps 😊

Jan it looks to me that some tail feathers are protruding more than the others-but like someone said it may be just the way they are standing.

Question: I just went to the site to purchase and do not see anything there about the hardbook (just the e book) They said they would each autograph all pre-paid orders and I don't want to miss that. Is there a sep site for the hardbook of Molly the Owl? Thank you.
