Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

karen in ky Hello, everyone. What a treat to see Austin back in the box today!!

Sleep little owlets in the owl box.
When the wind blow,
Your eyrie then rocks.
When the night comes,
You'll fly to the tree
And start life's adventure
And "owl" it can be.

Birdlover Maybe it's just me, but am I the only one wondering why he/she returned. Don't get me wrong, I am thrilled beyond belief to see them both there, but is this typical? Do barn owls sometimes leave and then come back to where they were hatched? Is it possible that these two have a special bond?

Mary Carroll (the Shadow) For the people who want to know what the quarrel with the other owl group is about, I will second James' recommendation in the basement. Here is a photo of Stacey's web page. You will get some idea of the issues if you read through her blogs.

Some of the people here are just tired of the fight and want to enjoy our last days with the owls but I, too, at one point was saying "What is going on?"

Denise I haven't formally checked in today, so, "Hi y'owl!" My household is insanely excited because World Cup soccer fever, and we were up early to watch the first games of the tournament. We were rooting for South Africa to win against Mexico (solely because they're the host country) but they tied 1-1. Then we were REALLY rooting for Uruguay to win against France because that's my husband's home country, but again the game was a tie, 0-0. Anybody else interested in soccer??

We had it on here as my husband likes to watch it - but I can't say I took any notice of it at all - it's crazy in the UK with it at the moment - little England flags absolutely everywhere - I expect if we get anywhere near the final I will start to take a bit more notice but as the last time we won it was the year I was born I'm not getting too excited yet!!

Owosaurus A note about CafePress! Anyone can create a 'store' at CafePress and upload any picture. They have no way to check or verify that you have a right to use the picture. So it's kind of silly for anyone to assume Carlos set up a store there to sell products. He's already got an agreement with Transferit.com*. Why would he need cafePress? And if he was using cafePress why wouldn't he have a link from his blog site to them? Only a paranoid crazy person would blame him!MHO. * (I saw someone say they read Transfer-it as Trans Ferret. Chris in Olympia, WA Agreed. The only items for sale that Carlos has approved or given permission for have been mentioned by him during his talks, and they are the only items listed on the wiki (and also given out by MODs in his chatroom). Many other sellers have used the name and probably photos, but it is too hard for him to chase them all down and sue them all. So it is up to us to decide if we want to only purchase from approved sources, and if so, make sure to only go to those places he mentions or are listed on his website or the URL passed out by MODs in his chat room Today, 14:29:01 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Chery Owen CAR purdyfarmsBecky, WA JH (in Technicolor Dreamcoat) Jessica Bette Ame -Stacey, the person who wrote the bigg, and some people who support her, have come to this site and made some disturbing accusations. As it says on her site, she hopes to "agitate" to try to get her opinions across. She has accused Carlos of exploiting these owls for his own profit, and believes that the people on this site are unresponsive, difficult and childish. Now, personally, I believe that Stacey has some impressive experience, and I do not refuse to listen to her side. But I don't like to be bullied. And I don't like my friends to be talked badly of. So, we tried to reason with her, but it didn't work. So we have left it alone and moved on. But she has not. So every once in a while, something comes up and we discuss it again. Sorry for the confusion. Now, we take you back inside the owl box!

Hey Ruth! Wanna help write a series of Noir? I'm thinking about a Comedy/Noir series starring a Disgruntled Private Owl and his exuberant dame, Kasey. Can't give too much away but, the gist of the story revolves around PO Wesley's quest to put an end to one of the most disorganized crime families ever. A real bunch of yahoos. The working title is Wesley's Scowl - The Hilarious Crime Story of a Private Owl and his Dame.

A while back, I noticed that my store had been illegally overrun with Molly the Owl products. When you went to the Wesley the Owl store, you saw Molly t-shirts, Molly everything, with the Wesley terns confusingly scattered amongst the Molly things I was very upset, of course, but I didn't turn anyone in (I should have gone straight to the complaint department but I didn't).

Hey y'all I've been here for an hour of so reading in the basement and checking videos and such.
Kathleen...your video on youtube is wonderful. I've saved the link to show to hubby and Jade. I worked in nursing for years but, never with dialysis (ignor bad spelling pls). You do a great job explaining.

One comment on the "Barn Owl Education video", I only watched on bit but, I think they should check at least one of their facts. Our owls certainly hunt in the rain! The man says they can't. Just a small point.

I'mso happy to see A & W in the box together. Maybe the time together will make Wes want to go the palm tree with him later

My hubby Brad will be home soon and want me to pay attention to him instead of theputer...especially since Jade is out with friends at the library. Time for just the two of us is hard to come by sometimes

The Barn Owl family have a tendency to avoid hunting in the rain unless they really really have to. Their silent flight comes from very soft plumage that lacks the level of waterproof oil found in other birds, even other owls. If a Barn Owl is out in a light shower and for a short while they can shake it off, but out in a downpour they get soaked to the skin - and wet feathers are heavy forcing the owl onto the ground. I would never say that they 'don't fly in the rain, but they certainly avoid it like the plague!

Thank you for the explanation. Do Barn Owls have enough oil on their feathers to get Vitamin D by exposing the feathers to sunlight as I have read that other birds do?
Today, 13:49:05 - Flag - Like - Reply

Trystan Williams
I'd have to look that one up! They will certainly gain vitamin D from sunlight as all feathers will, but I'm not sure of the part the oil has in the process. I've seen my owl species sit with wings spread enjoying a sunbathe, but I've never seen Barn Owls do that. Probably cos they stay in owlboxes all day and miss the fun! Maybe they do though when I'm not there. I can look that one up for you!

I'm sure there are many "shopkeepers" that are out to make money on these products without getting permission. It's hard for CafePress to keep up on this stuff. If someone tried to sell Twilight stuff without permission, they would catch it right away. I'm sure Zazzle and other sites probably have this stuff going on also. It's too bad, because Carlos might want to take the pictures off of his blog if people keep abusing this. I am a shopkeeper at CafePress and this weekend, will alert CafePress about this. I'm pretty sure they will take it off of the market then.

Hy CAR, I just read your question below. Replying here because I'm disorganized and like it that way. 😊

My guess is that Trystan was probably right. Your stolen bandwidth issue is more likely to be an interference issue. It's the most likely scenario given your "secured" Apple Airport router, Model #Bt549 and MAC address of ksjhfe845kflz.por at IP address 123.456.789.0. I wouldn't worry about it. 😊
But I would try to narrow down what may be causing it. If it's electronics, then good luck remedying the problem. About the only thing you can do is move the router to different places and see which works best. If, on the other hand, it's a bad line from the telco, then they should be able to troubleshoot and correct that.

Mary Carroll (the Shadow)
One of most famous of all old time radio shows aired on October 30th, 1937. It was the "War of the Worlds." Orson Welles and writer Howard Koch converted the well known H.G. Wells story into a seemingly live broadcast. This episode of Mercury Theater terrified the nation into believing that the Martians were attacking Earth. When I did radio broadcasting in the 50s, it was banned from the radio. It remained so for many years (I think it was the 70s or 80s before PBS finally rebroadcast the production.)
The YouTube video below has the Shadow soundtrack performed by Orson Welles on the 1937 The Shadow radio show.
It struck me as a good addition to my name.

My husband just emailed this picture to me - a guy that he works with was telling him about a very wet and bedraggled owl that he found a couple of years ago - it was just sat in the road - so eventually he picked the owl up (very carefully!) and took it to the Raptor Centre in Andover where they took care of it - I don't know if the owl is still there or not - and I don't think the guy my Hubby works with knows either. He said he thought it was a Barn Owl (which it definitely isn't) but he's labeled one of the pics as Tawny Owl - and I reckon its a Little Owl - are you still there Trystan?!!! 😊

Tawny's are the most common owl in the UK, and the only owl in the world that 'says' twit-twoo. (Others do variations on the theme, but the Tawny has the copyright lol) I always say in my public talks and tours that books written by experts tell you which gender makes which half of the call. Books written by women say the females say 'twoo' and the men are the 'twits' but books written on by men say it's the other way round! 😊

Thanks Trystan! Poor little thing - apparently the guy didn't know whether to leave it or not - but as it was literally in the middle of the road and clearly very wet and cold he decided to take it to the Raptor Centre. What is the best thing to do in that situation?
Today, 13:14:32 - Flag - Like - Reply

A lot of baby Tawny's are picked up at that age when they are perfectly alright, it is a natural process and they have been doing it since the year dot, but in these times of roads and vehicles they just have no road sense! In this case it was best to move it off the road, maybe over a wall or hedge, not too far but away from the road. If a rescue centre get just a single Tawny owl on it's own it will VERY easily imprint on the humans caring for it. That's the story of Toby in our display team.

Can someone who knows about internet connections explain something to me? I have a wireless router, and I have a WEP password for it, so you have to know the password in order to get onto my network connection. However, I always know when my neighbor is home, because my connection slows WAY down, and sometimes disconnects altogether. I know they're using it, but I can't figure out how. I tried creating a closed network, but Hubby just couldn't tolerate it, so I went back to a fairly secure WEP. Help! Any advice on how to keep them out that isn't too complicated?

I am far from the most tech savvy and I am sure others can better answer this but are you sure they are logging onto your wireless and it's not some other interference they create?

Oh, I misread that, nothing new for me, LOL. Can't you just have it "remember" your password for the login? I know mine has a password on it but I don't have to enter it unless I've logged into another wireless network before that.

If your computer can find other wireless networks in range that are unsecured, you can hitchhike onto that unsecured network. That's how many hotel or airport networks are set up - completely open to whomever. Your network might not be as secure as you think <-eek->

You should be able to secure your wireless network with a password that isn't onerous to use. My son set up ours (two desktops and four laptops - soon to be 5) and it's well-secured and I don't have to enter the password every time I use the network. He used a linksys router system and we have linkspesky anti-virus software and firewall. If you check for other networks in range, you can see what neighbors have a network and if they're secured or not, including your own. And that's about the limit of my wireless network knowledge!

Car, when we got our laptops we had someone come in and set it up for us. I understood how neighbors could sign in on yours because my brother did it until he set his own up. Good afternoon everyone. I have my darling 2-year-old grandson taking a nap in the puter room so I'm sitting on my sofa with my laptop. I hardly take it out of the puter room so this is really funny to me. It is amazing how the technology sets us free. I use a mouse a lot so the little pad is very foreign to me. I should use it more. Enough about this... I was so glad to see our 2 little owlets this morning. I go day by day like others in this chat does. I will lurk while the little one sleeps. He will be here for a couple of days. I should nap while he does but I can't give up my Molly time either. Later, Hazel 😊 me too... my tekke just left and he says it's not the fault of the computer. I have manually shut down out of necessity dozens of times in the last week, and it takes close to 10 mins to get the owls back when I reboot. So frustrating, he figures there are so many of us watching 24/7 that our computers are on overbad. Or maybe Carlos' equipment. does that make sense to you>

I really don't know.

I'd really like to stay and stuff that accumulating on the computer desk. I've dusted everything, cleaned the monitor screen and scanner bed. I think Austin came back because he wanted that nice, plush carpet under his feet. I think some of their behavior is a continuation of their bonding and some of the preening around each other's faces is because, other than with tabs, they can't preen it themselves. Back later this evening. 😊

Chocolate is an imprint European Eagle Owl at my work. She arrived at the World Owl Centre at 3 and a half weeks old and staff took turns in rearing her. She does a flying display on the lawn at Muncaster Castle, and does various Owl Ambassador duties like visiting Oxford University today! There's tons of pictures and videos among my Facebook albums 😊

Connie in case you missed this I called them several times. They were a very small, over populated shelter run by volunteers. Apparently, they had logged my info, and when she was picked up they ID'd her. It's pretty amazing as she was a 9 lb short haired black cat. Beautiful but nothing special to identify her except her nasty attitude toward strangers. 😊

The generally accepted view on this is that no, they don't recognise each other. I don't know I completely believe that now. Working with so many captive owls over the years I've been amazed at how well they recognise particular people, we are distinctly different and the owls remember each person - they make a decision whether they like or dislike you on first impression too! There are so many times that an old member of staff or volunteer comes back in and speaks to an old favourite bird of theirs and the bird hoots back as if to say 'hi there, where you been?'. My studies of feathers show patterns as distinct as fingerprints so they must surely recognise each owl and remember them. That's my thought on it anyhow. 😊

I kind of wonder if Austin figured out that if Wes was chasing him away from an owl box full of snacks it would be worth being nice and green 'til sb' just to get to sit in the box - with the snacks during the day. No snacks in some stupid palm tree either! It's hard not to put human behaviour and thoughts onto them, after all the preening is just natural bonding behaviour too. 😊

It's just that this seems to go above and beyond any preening I've seen previously - even Wesley's "I'll preen anyone, anytime" behavior in the past. I'm obviously overreacting to this. I surprised myself!

OK, I'm surely not going to win any stars here for this. I guess I am getting a little tired of some of the newer "ads" here. The Moly the Owl book, the DVD cookbook, Austin's DVD and even the Moly song once in a while haven't bothered me at all and I mute Mr. Carrot - but an "ad" for Barbara Lyalls other DVD is stretching it. I know, I know - it is Carbs' site and he can put on what he wants and I have the opportunity to "mute". Just saying...

Lynda - I have never been crazy about some of the ads, but like you, I believe that he has the right to put anything he wants on his site. A lot of people really like the ads, and I'm not expecting this site to be what I want it to be. I come here and under it for what it is. I agree care for the Moly song either. I mute, I come back later, and I love the site. But we're not Stepford MODS. We like what we like, we ignore what we don't and we get true joy from the experience. Just saying, too...

Connie I called them several times. They were a very small, over populated shelter run by volunteers. Apparently, they had logged my info. and when she was picked up they ID'd her. It's pretty amazing as she was a 9 lb short haired black cat. Beautiful but nothing special to identify her except her nasty attitude toward strangers. ☺

Owls that are born in a barn, they seem to really stay around. I wonder if any of the owlets would really try and make this their permanent place, the box. Interesting to know.
Today, 11:06:18 - Flag - Like - Reply

I hope you get an answer to this.... I was asking about it all morning @ different times. I think they will use this area because it is familiar to them... Just as they would use a barn. They may not go into the box every day because it is small compared to the room they would have in a barn. 😊
Today, 11:11:42 - Flag - Like - Reply

It's an interesting question. It's true that, often, at least one of the clutch of barn owls will stay in the barn. And wine-growers are finding that to be true, as well, in the boxes that they put up in their vineyards. So while it's unlikely, it's not inconceivable that one of our owls would stay.

As James said below, the practicing of the hunting techniques was so great to watch! I think it might have been Austin that I was watching at the platform last night - but he was jumping up so high, then pouncing, then grabbing the wooden rail with his beak and biting down-it was just so cool to see! The parents are still making food deliveries throughout the night. Some of the owlets are probably hunting on their own, but not all are up to snuff yet with their technique. A couple of them have been practicing their Pounce and Attack movements on the platform, right in front of the camera, much to my delight.

A slightly reworded Re-post from about two hours ago:

For those who missed all the morning shenanigans, most of which did not get recorded on video.

I've updated the 100 or so uncited screenshots from the flurry of morning activity... Lots of directed flying, feeding, and fidgeting going on. Help yourselves to any images that you like, or click the slideshow button (upper right) to watch a full-screen time-lapse of the pre-dawn flights and fidgeting. The encroaching color of a beautiful sunrise is nice, too. Once in full-screen mode, select your preferred speed in the upper left corner, move the mouse to reveal the thumbnails and speed options. Enjoy.

Good morning everyone. I have been checking in since midnight. Keep the laptop on next to my bed. Make it so easy. Loved hearing Carbs joke about what Donna's reaction to 2 owls would be. Can't wait for him to report what it officially was. I keep thinking a great cartoon would be Donna coming down a ladder and the owl box having a big "X" of wood nailed over the door. Have a great day and enjoy the show.

peg

well I was there but there seems to be two schools of thought on this... either austin was looking for some food and got caught by the daylight or (and this is my theory) the storm drove him indoors.

Carbs said it was just fog, no storm, although it looked stormy from our vantage point. Either way, Austin didn't look too happy about being in the box!!!

too old for the "crib" I don't think you're in the collage are you?..... Kathleen

A part in the storm. I wouldn't worry about it. He knows the box is a safe place, he knows the tree is a safe place. He just found the box more convenient to hole up in today.

Someone's hogging the camera, and showing off his/her BEAUTIFUL feathers

I too adore the Muppet Show! This is from Sesame Street however.

I haven't had my coffee yet. That was a little too much for me this early. I just had my 2 grandchildren on a camping trip with me and I'm still trying to regain my strength. We did have a blast though!

James, package on the way via pony express.

Thanks Bill, you're both a scholar and a gentleman.

Now, if only you could arrange to get me a ride on one of those... 😊 😊

Cut out of a lime, I would imagine. 😊

I'm afraid I no longer have much influence. BUT, next time the Blues are in your area go down and tell them I said you should get a ride.

sure Bill, and next thing, we'll see James on the news getting arrested for saying give me a ride already! 😊

It's two, it's two!.... it must have been a dark and stormy night. Sure beats boking at an empty box with designer wallpaper. Kathleen

Your avatar collage is magnificent. Thank you for all the hard work for hours and hours!!

Hi, Kathleen. Your AVATARIA poster is so wonderful. I feel like an idiot for just discovering that I can do this, but when I opened it from your post in the room I found out that I could click Ctrl + and a few times and make it large enough to really look at closely. Thank you again and again for doing this for us.

Put my computer on the nightstand next to my bed, left it on, and fell asleep. At about 5am, I woke up, turned over, pressed the space key to wake the computer, and this is what I saw. Scared the bejebebers out of me!!!!

This is FABULOUS! I love all of these pictures and avatars you have put on there. Thank you!

Thank you for all the work on the avataria and for putting me on it! I feel so special!! 😊 Kathleen, I used to do stuff like this so I can really appreciate the horrendous undertaking and hours you put in! GREAT JOB!

Off to work! I'll check in on them some time at work today, if I can sneak it in.

Now what would make these guys choose to roost outside rather than in the house, where they can get snacks during the day, lay down on a comfortable furry ground and keep out of the elements of weather? 😊

I'm going and I'm not coming back until I get something done. I'm "not."

enjoy, lucky MODS who have the time to watch this morning! and take pictures of kissy face, oh please, oh please.

BTW...my daughter thinks I have a yogurt obsession...I'll tell her it apparently goes hand-in-hand with MOD...

Lucky

Thanks for reminding me got to get Fage greek yogurt...goes w/strawberries!

JH (in Technicolor Dreamcoat)

Toss a few blueberries in there and call it health food, I do. And full-fat is the only way to go. No wimpy skimpy imitation dairy here.

emily

fage is the only brand where I can tolerate reduced fat at all. It's 2% is kind of ok. but why settle for ok when you can have the food of the gods?

Dianne Z in Rome

I prefer 0% fat. It's thinner and easier to mix with my fruit and granola.

Paige in Denver

I've started making my own "Greek-style" yogurt - so easy. Line a strainer with cheese cloth, put it on top of a large bowl, pour in a bunch of plain yogurt, let it sit in the fridge to drain.

emily

Id love to do that, but I have 25 roommates and only one kitchen... not enough room in the kitchen or the fridge for projects like that.

Ruth - from MN

????? does anybody DRINK it????

emily

ooh, ronnybrook farm makes drinking yogurt... they sell at the green market in union square, nyc, and in whole foods in the city, but I'm not sure if they're national. It's delicious, though, especially the mango - sour and sweet all mixed together, almost like a lassi (but with less sugar)

CAR

they're not national - pretty much tri-state only, and I was thrilled when my local market started carrying it so that I didn't have to lug it from Union Square (I lug enough stuff from there - Always buy too much...)

Connie

I'll try that. Thanks

Mary Carroll

Me. A little yogurt and some water....yum. I drink it plain but my husband adds cumin seeds and hot pepper to his. You can also use mango juice or other fruit juices.

Mary Lee Nance

Oh the strange things we shall see We thought the box would be empty But to our delight we see there are two Tomorrow morning will there be three? Oh the things that we shall see!

Ingrid

All this talk about treats and such makes me want to have some breakfast too.

I read in today's NY Times Obits that Crispian St Peters, whose hits included "I'm the Pied Piper", has died at age 71. I can't say I really remember the song, but thought some of you might.

Lori Fisher

Wow! He was cute. I'm surprised that I have no recollection of ever hearing that song before. I was very young in 1966 but my mom had the radio on all the time - thought I knew all the songs from that decade.

Dianne Z in Rome

Thanks. I remember that song well

Lizuk

Im afraid I remember it too, although I wasn't that old!! That was a nostalgic moment

Carlos was on earlier when they both went inside the box

Lisa U

He sounded exhausted - barely speaking in complete sentences.

Kathryn R

Carlos was up past midnight so he probably hasn't gotten up yet to switch cameras, LOL!

Ingrid

He was on a little earlier this morning. Donna and Carlos were laughing OUT LOUD about the kids never wanting to leave home.

Cheryl Owen

Poor Donna!!!! I suspect Wes and Austin will have left by the 14th - but I wonder if Carlos actually will switch the camera off then if they haven't...

Elliott

Carlos was also up at 5:00 am PDT, repositioning the camera which the owls had once again knocked askew. I don't think he ever gets REM sleep any more.

Rhonda Hargrove

I'll check in later today...very busy next few hours. Classes to teach

Kathryn R

YEAH! Two in the box!

Rhonda Hargrove

I only have a couple of minutes...I see Austin and Wes in box. Could it be it's more comfortable in the box today because of rain/wind? Maybe this is something that even "wild" owls would do. We certainly haven't had many to watch and see if any "return" for a bit after they have fledged. I really don't think this is anything to be worried about.

Lisa U

Im not sure if this is considered 'Smurfing' or not, but Wes had a rat passed to her just before she darted into the box. Austin most likely wanted to share & she was not having ANY of it. He peeked his head into the box then kind of oozed in after her, I'm guessing to see if he could snag a few mouthfuls. Ultimately, the sun was rising, so he found himself 'boxed' for the day. I don't think it's just family affection that's holding hi there, although I'm sure that is contributing.

Cheryl Owen

I agree - I think he would do pretty much anything for food to be honest!

Susan from Sweet Home Alabama

oh I dreaded tuning in this morning, figured Wes would be gone - only to read Austin spent the night!! So glad!! 2 babies still in the box. It sounds like they're having some rough weather there, maybe he got scared!!

Mary

To quote a line from the Wizard of Oz, "there's no place like home, there's no place like home, ...clacking back three times and going back to the box.

Dot O

Austin didn't spend the night. It looked like he popped in there this AM to "talk" Wes out, but then the daylight came so quickly he got stuck in the box for the day!

Darlene Salisbury

Wow... Good morning everyone from Oregon. I'm getting ready for work but just popped in here for a second thinking I'd see if any owl box. What a surprise.. Hello Austin.. Wow.. It will be interesting to see what happens tonight. Have a wonderful awesome day everyone!!! Til later.....

TerriHolmes

sandle

good morning all- sure surprised to hear that both Wesley and Austin are in the box! I think they are bonded. What's wrong with the inside camera?

Robin Nielsen

did wes come back?

Monica Szabo

Two in the box! Wes and Austin (I think!)

Sue from Syracuse

I'm thinking maybe we're not seeing inside the owl box yet is because Donna can't bear to see TWO owls there when she (and we all) expected to see NONE!!

Mary Carroll

Mmmmm! Fish cakes for breakfast. Yesterday we tried a new (different) Italian restaurant. I had the whole fish baked in salt (I had read about it but never eaten it before). It was delicious (not a bit salty) and more than I could eat. We took a "doggy bag" home (my dog would love it but it's mine). Soooo, fish cakes for breakfast.

emily

I've always wanted to try that -- seems so luxurious.

Mary Carroll

It was really yummy. I asked the owner if he put egg whites in the salt and he said "no." He just added a LITTLE water to the salt and made a casing for the fish and then baked it. I was afraid it would be salty but it was not at all. I guess the fish skin kept the salt out. I do not think it would work right if the fish was not whole and unskinned. He even left the scales on the fish.

ms...dood fink

good morning/ day, etc., surprising news! nature works in mysterious ways, eh? i don't have any time this morning to see anything other than this, but can't wait to catch james's photos later.

elaine

lots of chirping and noise going on in there - maybe Wesley doesn't like having a roommate back

Nora in Houston

Good Morning everybody. Just checked in to see if Wesley returned before I leave for my swim, only to find that Austin is back. Too funny. Sounds like kids. They can't wait to leave home until they get out there and find out it's not exactly what they expected.
