                           Personally, I would love it if pertinent links like this (even sort-of pertinent links 🙂 like merchandise, other owl stuff, etc) were added to the wiki (or the FB page). I'm a pop in/pop out kinda viewer and I rarely have time to pursue the links when they are actually posted (or search the bsmt), so it would be hugely helpful to have a link spot somewhere. I think I ve missed a lot of stuff this way…like the card. 😃

                           This one is an actual guest book on their web site. They have links to their different vacations and that sort of thing. You can make a comment if you'd Hi everyone, I hope we all realize what these barn owls have done for us. Firstly, have taught us to 'respect' all of nature and its wildlife. 2) That when we care for Mother Earth, She will care for us. 3) That all life is precious, be it human, avian, mammal, reptilian, plants and trees. Because what happens in nature, will someday happen to us. I enjoyed chatting and learning with everyone. God Bless us all!

                    Becky, I enjoyed the picture of the orca calf. I broke my leg in 1997 and flew to Oregon to visit family. My sister took me to the aquarium in Newport where I was fortunate to see "Keiko". While I was sitting in my wheelchair, he became fascinated with me and came over to the glass and we watched each other with him bobbing his head from side to side and up and down. It was as though he were sympathizing with me. I backed up in my chair to let other people enjoy the gorgeous animal. One of the volunteers came over and told me they had never seen him do that with any other visitor. Was disappointed when he died as I

Well, I got up this morning, saw the sign and heard Carlos. Then I went back to bed. Seemed like the thing to do. After enjoying a pleasant afternoon running errands and eating an early dinner out, I guess I have gained a better perspective. I have been reading in the basement for about a half hour and you all have had some interesting discussions! At some point, I would like to tell you all what I learned from these little guys and a certain flock of geese last fall/winter, but I think FB is the forum. Hopefully, I will find the right place there to do so. I have so enjoyed getting to know you all, and I look forward to continuing the Windows? If so, run the Network Troubleshooter (aka Diagnose and Repair).

         Access it through the Network & Sharing Center, in the Control Panel.
          The troubleshooter should ask you some questions and do some magic under the hood.
          That should give you a good idea where to start. You may onlyt need to change the network type to Private

                       Carlos only gets 10 percent of the purchase price if you buy his stuff through a general search on Cafepress, but he will receive 2 or 3 times that if you get it directly through his shop....and you will actually pay a little less at his shop the last time I checked.

         I've actually lost some weight. Not enough time to cook, much less shop for groceries.
         The good news is I have emptied my cupboards of all the ancient goods and partial containers which I usually pass by when I have real food in the cabin.

         Darlene, contact your state department or wildlife or natural resources and they will have all kinds of info on how to make your yard wildlife friendly.
         There is even a certification program for wildlife friendly yards--could be as simple as a window box or window feeder on an apart ment building.

Where do you go to see Carlos when broadcasting

Yeah, $37.49 for 20 cards. Rather pricy! But they are exclusive - one of a kindl 😃

Buy your cards and plan an area get-together! Everyone bring your cards and trade!

Just out of interest what is the price in dollars for the cards from cafepress? It is showing as £27.50 here (roughly $40) - Needless to say I won't be

Q [fromCarlos webcast]: How long will they stay in the Palm tree?
 A [fromCarlos webcast]: Typically, the parents will continue to feed the owlets for 3-4 weeks from the time they leave the box, at which point they begin to find their own hunting grounds and take off.
 Owlet Departure Dates:
 Pattison June 1
 Austin June 8
 Wesley

Here is the story of my big fish. I wrote this in an email and sent to all my friends at that time. (This will be in installments) Am I a happy camper or what????
Caught Sept. 3rd, length 39 inches long, weight approximately 35 pounds. Total number of bruises getting the d*mn thing into the boat: 7.
That's a Chinook Salmon, by the way. Caught on the Siletz River on the coast of Oregon right off our dock!
We had been crabbing in the bay all day, and had the crab cooking in the crab pot and we decided to put our poles in at the dock. I was hanging out at the dock watching the lines when Paul called out and said the crab was ready to eat. So I went up to eat, but then remembered I forgot my beer on the dock. So I started back down the ramp to the dock and saw this huge fish leap out of the water about 8 feet off.
Today, 13:55:29 - Flag - Like - Reply
Liked by britt in southern cal
        "Wow!!!" I called out. "You should see the fish that just jumped!" As soon as I stepped foot on the dock, "WHIZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZ" and the pole bends over and the line starts whizzing down the river
        "FISH ON!!!" I yelled out. "GET THE NET"
        Paul ran to get the net out of the boat that was still hooked to the trailer because we had driven to the bay moorage to crab. So I am fighting this thing and I can tell it was a biggy. All I am thinking is "Keep the tip up, keep the tip up!" I did not want to let this one get away like I did last year when I put the tip down and the line snapped on me. After about 10 minutes I let Paul have some of the fun and gave him the pole, but after fighting it for about 15 minutes it took off across the river and wrapped itself around a snag.

        So my husband gives me back the pole and runs up and launches the boat from the boat ramp a few hundred yards downriver. I'm reeling the line in best
        I can to keep the slack off, thinking "hurry up," up," as I could still feel it giving a tug here and again. He finally gets back to the dock, picks me up and motor over to see if we still have it. We thought all was lost as he starts dragging the line up and the line is around a tree snag under water.
        Suddenly, I see this huge head come up!!! I grab the net and hang over the side of the boat and get the net down as far as I can and start pulling with all my might, but I could not lift the fish out of the water!! So then we have two of us hanging on to line and net about half in the water trying to get the fish in the net while trying to untangle the line.

        The pole ended up breaking but Paul got the line by his hands by that time. Finally we get the fish in the net and he cuts the line. We haulit into the boat and it gets a couple of good wacks on the head with a crowbar.
        Then I got the fun part to gut and clean the fish, and I loved every minute of it! The next day, we smoked a big slab of it for several hours. We complimented it with the crab we had caught the same day. (We never did end up eating the crab that night, we were too full of adrenaline by that I tell you what that was one of the best days of my life. It just can't get any better than that.
        The end.

YES!
Just send me, and have anybody else, send me an email with the subject line: COFFEE TABLE BOOK. Then I will follow up in a few months when I have costs, etc figured out. I need at least 500 emails to justify doing a print run. Right now I'm at about 90 emails, so quite a ways to go. Spread the word... I really don't know what it would cost, but again, it will be comparable to other coffee table books... spread the word...

         I know I'm in the minority here but, I really wish the original sound had been left on that video.
         You know the sounds: the owlets squawking; the wind blowing; the night sounds outside the box; and, of course, the bawling MOD sitting alone in the room recording that screen on a cell phone.

Well, JHTD, I'm with you. In fact, I'll see your 'original soundtrack' and raise you an 'unedited version'! The video has a cut in it that, together with the angle on OB2, creates a false impression of the exact sequence of events. Not to be churlish but both landed on the roof, in quick succeession, at about 5:16, Wesley on the backside of the roof and Austin up top. Then Austin took off, Wesley stepped up to the top and followed seconds later. I was so hoping you were there taking screen shots the whole time! But oh well. That's what I saw and it seems corroborated by the chat stream.

How will I explain to my youngest, Liam, that I didn't fill out at least 2 months of his baby book and 1st year calendar because I had a love affair with the Royal owls? The gravity of what I've done has set in with the empty box. Can't I just look up baby averages online for when they crawl, wave, talk and walk? Would that be so wrong? I could just average out what/when my older boys did. Hey...my husband had to order a new computer to handle the load of digital pictures we have taken of this child so I should cut myself some slack, right?

                   How sad, i just came on and found the empty owl box. Well it has been a wonderful journey for us all. I will say my goodbyes now, going away for a few days and I know the cameras will be down when I get back. I will check to see if our cha't is still up. Godspeed to you all! Fly safely Molly, Mcgee, and our little babies, Wow! James (in Technicolor Dreamcoat). Thanks so much for giving us the gift and joy of seeing these photos of Carlos. I love "Joseph and the Technicolor Dreamcoat" and saw it when I lived in NY. This will help us all to savor this wonderful experience and all our feelings about moving on. And, who knows, next year, perhaps we'll meet again and there will be a new Molly and Magee family! This is wonderful James. Thanks.

                   When I was around 6 years old I "met" my first owl. I was walking near our home & saw him there. We watched each other for awhile. We "met" several times & I talked to him. He seemed to listen to me so carefully. I wanted a pet owl. I knew I couldn't (mommade that clear).
                    This experience has been as close as I will probably ever get to having a pet owl. I have had the joy of "getting the know and love" the Royal owls. I am so grateful for the chance. These little ones are so precious and I'm so happy that they are healthy and will go on the have families of their own. I am sad only for me and those of you who will miss getting to "peek in on their daily lives".
                    Thanks for indulging me. I know that you won't think I'mcrazy or strange for wanting an owl.

                          Check to see if there is a raptor center near you that may be looking for volunteers. It would be a great way to stay connected with the birds and to pass on much of what you've learned here. It certainly would be a good way to keep the spirit of Carlos' efforts alive. just think of all the Crazy Owl

                   For anyone who missed the interview between Carlos and his garndson, Austin; Austin is producing a DVD as a school project which will chronicle the start to finish episode of Molly and McGhee and the four owlets. He doesn't know how much it will cost yet but is taking names to determine how many will want to buy it.
                    The profit will go to his college fund. Send an e-mail with your name & address to: Austinfaure@gmail. com. Put Molly DVD in the subject line. Indicate that you want to be put on the list for notification when it is finished and available. With the way he has helped Cralos with all of this, I'm sure it will be first class.

                    Kathryn, if you're still on...is it too late to send you a more clear avatar (f it's going to be published) Mine is real fuzzy,. What file size an avatar can be? oops, I can't remember how to word the question! My husband wants to know so he can send one that is not blurry. Or does someone else know? If I don't hear back from you, I'll try later. A big storm is heading our way now. I don't want to make a lot of work for you now, though, if you are done. Thanks.

Kathleen ~ I truely do not mean to cause a big discussion. I changed my avatar yesterday because of contoversy. If everyone understands I chose that cute owlpicture months ago, before I knew better, fine. If you wish to remove/ exchange it I understand as well. Leave me a note above or on

                    You know what I wish? I wish I had 14 barrels of ink to print out all of the PDFs of the chat room. And on cold and windy winter nights I'd go to bed with a hot mug of tea and read them, in order, start to finish. I'd relive all the tender and sweet moments with the babies and Molly, all the speculation about their welfare, all the ideas and creativity flying around the chat room, and all the hysterically funny moments as the owlets got ready to fledge and spent their last un-fledged days in the owl box. I just know that all the communal warmth emanating from those pages would heat my apartment for the winter!

                    Off but on topic. I am also watching a live streaming video of the Harvard Conference (http://www.livestream.com/humanityplus.) at Harvard today. I am honored to know someone who is speaking today. ANYWAY, ironically, the live streaming video and chat room is not as good as the one for the Molly Cam. We don't realize how well this was done by all, and the technology employed here was amazing, we are so spoiled (like Wesley) with how well this was produced.

                           But I do now have a few thousand little reminders of this great experience. Not to mention all the chat PDFs. As the days go by, and we each move on with the rest of our lives (those who have them, I make no claims here), we can look back at all the snippets collected and smile. Besides, it was all good

                    Such a bittersweet day - 🛎 sadness because this wonderful experience is in its final hours, the owlets are now owls. Many friends we've met here will go on their way, perhaps to meet again in another chat room, on FB, etc., but the dynamics of this experience and that bond will change. But, 🙂 the joy in knowing that Molly, McGee and family now grown have done just what Mother Nature intended. Let your joy and happiness overcome the moments of sadness. We are all better people in small and big ways because of this shared experience. I'll be back this evening to chat, reminisce and share farewells.

                           What you have said is perfection. Today IS BITTERSWEET, and "We are all better people in small and big ways because of this share experience."
                          I amst ill "processing" the gifts I have received from sharing our moments on so many levels. I'mnot ready to put it in to words yet. But I will, at least for my own benefit. When I put it in words, it broadens and defines our lessons and journey and becomes a treasure.

I have learned from this to be a responsible bird box owner! NOt just for owls but for other fine feathered friends. I make sure they are in a safe place out of the reach of their preditors and that they have food and water sources. I have bird houses that have been turned into homes and LOTS of birds of prey around and I have thought carefully where to put them Hopefully successfully too!

Finally plucked up courage to log on again, knowing I'd be seeing the empty box. I feel empty and strange too but very very happy for the owlets, that they all fledged successfully (unless of course there are strong winds, then I'll start worrying about them in the tree 😲 ). What a fantastic experience and so good to 'meet' so many lovely people 🐸 . Also just looked at the blog photos, soooo good to see one of Wes in the tree and below, one of him trying it out with Austin and one of the others looking at him "

                          The site in dispute has been up for a long time. It was mentioned here a few weeks ago, and a certain person seemed to relish the problems it could cause. It feels like a CafePress mistake to me, or some tech-savy hacker created it.....just a feeling.

I have no idea what you are taking about! This is a new store on caferpress that Carlos has set up. Are you saying someone just made this up? Oh sportsmansparadiseonline.com/Live_Owl_Nest_Box_...

And just how do you knows this? Why couldn't it be a CafePress screwup? Why couldn't it have been hacked?
