Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more Information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

Merritt, it really depends on how long you've been married, not how long you've been gone. If you are married more than 5 years tell him you need a few more minutes, he'lleither be asleep or happy to wait a little longer. If your married about 43 years, he would say that in passing and then go to bed, or turn on his computer and play another game of World of Warcraft. 😃 🙂 Today, 22:03:05 - Flag - Like - Reply

It's a shame I didn't know anything about owl boxes earlier. Speaking of those fake owls, my Dad has always used one to guard his 1/4 acre "garden". He's in the ideal location to ahve real owls guarding it, but I don't think he'd go for it at 80. Or his grown daughter moving back home after almost 30 years so she could watch an owl box.

Finding out anything about him is tough. There were two Winfield Scott Applegates in Indiana in the 1880-1960 timeframe. Some genealogies have scrambled the two. Plus, the Applegates took down the web site with the best genealogy.

I have a real-world problem of my own to figure out:

What would cause a cardinal to keep flying into my glass door kitchen window over and over again? How can I get him to stop doing so? I've put up a black cloth to scare him away -didn't work ... any other suggestions? He's going to knock himself out one of these mornings. It's been going on for a week now. (It may actually be different birds, not the same cardinal) ... Can I put something outside? I don't have any feeders out there ... Today, 20:22:20 - Flag - Like - Reply also try a few streamers of ribbon, or crepe paper (as in party decorations) to fly around and on the window too...that will be too distracting for the bird to worry about the window again.... Lynda C Is it flying directly into the door window or jumping from a nearby branch or porch railing? For the past few years we have wintered in FL and there is one cardinal pair in the yard most of the day. The female will perch in a decrepit looking orange tree in a neighbor's back yard and repetedly flutter up to a window on their utility shed. Almost looks like she is picking insects off fromit. I looked closely and no insects were there. She also landed at the bottom of our car window or on the car roof manyl times and pecked at the ourside mirror. They apparently love to "play" with their own reflection or perhaps think that their reflection is another female ???? Today, 20:34:48 - Flag - Like - Reply

Enjoyed Carlos talking about the kestres and the hawk. We have ketres here, too - but usually call them sparrow hawks. The songbirds usually sense when one is around, but occasionally he gets a little one off the feeder (not often). A couple of views I took thru my kitchen window a few years ago before we moved to this house. Believe this is a sharp shinned hawk. It landed on a "T" pipe post where I had two bird feeders on a rope/pully system as the window was pretty high up. This hawk sat there for a good 10 minutes, turning, preening and peeking at us only about 2 ft. from the window.

SO....Time for "Sleep-Talking Hubby Stories and Other Horks..."

Before we went to bed, Hubby and I were talking about the owls, and I told him that it was possible that this might be the last night they came back to the box, but how Donna was probably going to have a party, and that maybe we turning off the camera in a rew days. We jo have one, too.

About 1:30 in the morning, just as I was finally going to sleep, hubby gets out of bed and heads to the closet, saying:

"My tux doesn't fit anymore!".

I've been thinking a bout something all day to day... If the owls return to the playground tonight, it will be a 100% tribute to Carlos and all of his generous and loving spirit towards the owls. They have ABSOLUTELY no reason to return to it. It is no longer a strategic staging area, or a food drop-off station or a headquarters for Austin to use in order to coaxWesley into the palms. It is now, officially, nothing more than a playground, a monument to the owls who we love. If I see so much as a SINGLE talon touching the fledge-ledge Gymboreet onight, I am going to interpret that as a "Thank-you, Carlos, my human friend. Our family loves you and will, forever, keep you in our hearts ... especially, our mother." :-)

I'm glad I haven't seen any "stuff" about Stacey, because I just finished her book and absolutely loved it. The relationship she shared with Wesley was so touching and spiritual. I started crying because it was so much like my relationship with my dear, sweet Willow. Speaking of signing group cards, guest books, etc. how about everyone going to the Sportsman's Paradise guest book (click under their header - top right). I just checked it and there haven't been any entries (that I could find) since late March ! They have provided us with one of the best chat room setups ever and have kept this a good, family-friendly site when necessary. A "thumbs up" to them !!!!

Guess we've all been comforted by some of our favorite songs, as the owls leave us. This is one of my favorites, by New England blues artist, Ronnie Earl. There are no words (Ronnie doesn't sing), but he is a passionate guitar player, and the title of the song seems appropriate: "I Am With You."

Looking forward to a day catching up on the weeding IVe neglected since the owl thing started, I put on my garden clothes and went out side. Saw a humming bird and started to cry. Cried off and on throughout the morning every time I thought "I should take a break and check on the owls", then "ah no... I don't get to do that anymore...". Tears. Good eve everyone! I saw the take off and when the reality hit, I was stunned. Then, Carlos played that song!! I had no idea I would become sooooooo emotional. I told my hubband it was like watching an old tear-jerker movie: we all knew full well how it would end, then went and cried anyway! I LOVE the sign. Ingenious, as usual. I have a feeling this will not be the last we hear/see of Carlos & Donna... 🙂

Jan (Bayonne, NJ) I certainly hope not! Carlos is the type of person who holds nothing back when speaking of his likes and enthusiasms. I loved listening to him and Donna today talking about all the birds around their house. He could have talked for 6 hours about nothing but the birds and I would not have budged! La trippi On Friday morning, Austin surprised everyone by going back into the Box at dawn with Wesley and staying the day. Then this morning, after hanging out in the Playground much of the night, and a final visit to the roof by the two of them, Wesley followed Austin off to the Palms. Carlos came on a few minutes later and then put the sign up on the Box. Repost from this morning (for those who may not know this info yet)

Carlos is broadcasting tomorrow (pacific time) at 10am and 3pm and the final broadcast is on Monday at 6:00pm (pacific time). Ebook, cook book should be out in two-three weeks

hardcover book out in October

ecomics should have some final portraits of members of family (fine art print) so if you want it along with his ecomics its gonna include some journal pages of how a cartoonist creates a cartoon (sketch and final cartoon).

Last---before computer crashes again...ugh...He will do this again but depends on what ends up in the box. If a Kestrel comes first it will be a Kestrel box (Donna's favorite) or if an owl comes back first it will be an owl box on the camera. But we have Austin and Carlos to thank for putting this all together. It was quite the story Carlos shared of how this all came to be.
