Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

I have learned from this to be a responsible bird box owner! NO! just for owls but for other fine feathered friends. I make sure they are in a safe place out of the reach of their predators and that they have food and water sources. I have bird houses that have been turned into homes and LOTS of birds of prey around and I have thought carefully where to put them. Hopefully successfully too!

Ok. I think I have it really bad. I was just fixing my hair and putting on my face... I mean makeup. Thought I heard owls screech. Came in running to my computer (although I know owls don't come out during the day) hoping against hope they might be back....alas.... it was my husband napping/snoring. Now how sad is that.

Finally plucked up courage to log on again, knowing I'd be seeing the empty box. I feel empty and strange too but very very happy for the owlets, that they all fledged successfully (unless of course there are strong winds, then I'll start worrying about them in the tree 😊). What a fantastic experience and so good to 'meet' so many lovely people 😊. Also just looked at the blog photos, soooo good to see one of Wes in the tree and below, one of him trying it out with Austin and one of the other's boking at him 😊

Hi everyone; just checked my email and found this in response to letting Eric Blehm know if anyone is interested in a photo story book with Carbs' photos:

Dawn, Please tell EVERYBODY who is interested in a photo coffee table book write me at erik@erickblehm.com and put the words COFFEE TABLE BOOK in the subject line. Include contact info, and I will email everybody within a few months to let them know details, and how to proceed... Don't want to bse emails, etc...

Also, anybody wishing to be on a mailing list for Moly The Owl Books (send me an email as well...)

It's so interesting that watching these birds helps us connect with our own humanity and brings us such peace. I will miss them. I'm grateful for the people that made this all possible. Best wishes and I hope I can connect next year as I came in late this year. When does the monumental event begin?

I have a song playing in my mind....the Sound of Silence. Didn't know I would feel a hole in my heart. I have to remind myself that one loved Wesley so much that he came back to help her pack up and have a traveling companion. If all our thoughts and prayers help to keep them safe, they will have a long prosperous life. PS I have a feeling we will be checking in the next few days just to make sure they are really gone for good.

I don't anthropomorphize animals, but there was some reason Austin kept coming back and staying with Wes. Max and Pattison would come back to play and fly around but they didn't stay with her. Owls seem to be very affectionate and loving to other owls, and since animals tend to have some reason for doing what they do, even I believe that Austin was coaxing her to come with him.

When I looked at the site, decided to adopt an owl but you can "Save an Owl" for very little money (£1 in UK)

I don't have any connections with the trust and only heard of it when someone, I think it may have been JH, was talking to someone called Trystan on here that worked there.

I cared for my father for 2 1/2 years in my home before he died. I know it is very tiring and I frequently got emotional over nothing. But I would do it again. I am glad yours has a daughter who cares for him.

Why is everyone sad? This is a wonderful thing that has happened. These owlets had plenty of food, shelter and a pair of careful, nurturing parents. All of them survived and are healthy. They are on schedule to be exactly as nature intended: healthy young owls with their lives ahead of them. We have been privileged to watch nature unfold in front of us. I for one have learned things I never would have known or even thought about, and I have developed a respect and affection for owls and in the future will do everything I can to make sure that all owls get as a good a start as these have. This has been a small miracle of joy and education, and while I will miss them, the privilege of this look into their world has been such a positive experience that I will always remember it with great joy, and no sadness.

I can say the same thing about my children growing up and leaving the nest. It was a great experience, I was thrilled for their success, but as a part of my intimate family, I will miss them and will be sad for awhile. It's not unnatural to feel sad when saying goodbye to someone you love.

I agree as far as the owls are concerned, not only by making friends but also helping people take their minds off of every day worries. Although a lot of us who post regularly intend to keep in touch it remains to be seen how many actually do. I think a lot of the sadness and tears (mine included) come from losing something we all hold dear to us.

Having said this, I'm also so happy that the Royal owls have successfully hatched, survived, and fled the nest box especially as Carlos gave warnings very early on that this is nature and disaster could strike anytime.

I haven't read where Alessandra has told anyone how to feel. She simply asked a question and then went on to explain what this has meant to her. I for one agree with her statements and also understand the reason for the question. I seriously doubt she is trying to tell people how to feel, just that to her it seems odd for sadness to play a leading role. I'm all smiles here, knowing that all is well and I no longer have an excuse to delay many other parts of my life. I know that tonight the owls will be back in action or me to witness and, after the camera goes dark, I'll have taken part in a wonderful unparalleled experience. Truly something to look back on with fondness.

There was a man named Carbs,
jolly as could be,
he put up an owl box for the world to see.
Along came two owls, Molly and McGee.
They moved right in and started a family.
Soon there was Max and Pattison followed by Austin and Wesley.
As we know, they did grow
much to rapidly.
And now, the time has come for them to be out on their own,
and for us to remember long after they have flown. 😊

RECIPE FOR PRESERVING OWLETS - By Storymom 5-26-2010
Take 1 large field, 4 adorable baby owls, several trees, a cool brook, a large quantity of field mice and a pinch of pebbles. Mix the owlets and the brook together and stir frequently. Pour the brook over the pebbles. Sprinkle the field with flowers, various grasses and the field mice. Fill the trees with a gentle summer breeze. Spread over a deep blue sky and bake in the summer sun.

When done, set away safely in a cozy owl box or tree stump.
Wrap securely in awe and store in the hearts of everyone.

This is a bit much for me. First my oldest son graduates, turns 18 the next day, and then the owls leave! This mom is having mixed emotions, lately, for sure. I'll have to find something to divert my attention, and now!! Been on the verge of tears all week with graduation, and realizing my time raising my son is pretty much done. 😞

Congratulations to our owlets, and to Molly and McGee for their great parenting skills! Many thanks to Carlos and Donna! I've been watching since the eggs hatched, and it's been better than any National Geographic special, 'cause it was available 24/7! I never dreamed I'd have an opportunity to watch nature so up close and personal. It's been a wonderful experience for me, and apparently for many, many others! I'll tune in every now and then, in case you do this again! Best wishes to the owlets and all of the owl friends!

Well Friends. This is the day we all hoped (and some prayed!) would come. Four healthy, beautiful owl babies off doing exactly what they are supposed to do! And dear Molly and McGee did exactly what they were supposed to do as well. This past winter was not the best of my life and to have had this gift from Carlos and Donna meant more than I can express. There aren't words to adequately thank them. And having this chat added a marvelous dimension to the entire experience! Thank you. Thank you. Thank you!

I am so sad also ... stopped in for a quick peek expecting one or two ... and alas empty!! I will be here tonight to see if any fly-backs. My son and family in from Houston so probably can't get on later in case Carlos speaks. ... But think it is left on till the 14th?? 😞

A good friend who works in a card shop in MN is a watcher but doesn't post. She sends me emails though about the owls. Yesterday she said a couple came into the store and asked about owl cards. She immediately asked them if they were Molly watchers and they said they were. We are sharing our stories with one another today but there are probably a few thousand more people out there beyond their keyboards who are feeling all the same things we are. This community is even bigger than we know.

The only way I can bear this is to think of all of them being just outside our view, peeking out of that palm tree. The fact that they are all together, with Moly and McGee caring for them and watching over them, is somewhat consoling. I truly pray for their safety and well-being. May they thrive. Whether any of them will decide to sleep inside tomorrow, guess we'll have to wait and see. This is Wesley's first day out of the box and she is a very timid owlet, so anything is possible.

But I only feel joy for the owls and satisfaction that they have done so well. Congrats to Molly & McGee for being such great parents and condolences to all the residents of Rodent City for all your losses (past and future). Applause for the Royal Family - a perfect storm of willingness, capability, affection, technical ability and personality! We could not have had this without you and we will never forget what you gave us. Godspeed to our young owls: may you fly free, eat well, find True Love and live long, healthy lives. Warning: The quality of CP products is somewhat questionable. When you receive it, you will know that it's an image slapped onto a generic mug. The original Molly Mug looks to be of better quality and design. (I don't own one - just going by visuals)
It may or may not be worth the extra $10 for the quality.
My 2 cents.

I've purchased mugs from CP for years to commemorate the first one's work events for my employees, new pets, etc. Probably given away 50 of them over the past few years all together. I still have the first one I ever purchased and even though it's been through the dishwasher hundreds of times the picture is still sharp and looks new. I can see wanting to have the official Molly mug, but there shouldn't be a concern about quality.

I wasn't referring to the durability of the product... but the quality of the printed layout... if you look at the original Molly Mug, the image extends from the very top to the very bottom of the mug. CP graphics are simple squares centered on the product (for everything: mugs, t-shirts, etc). It looks super cheap and unprofessional, IMO... Sorry, just my opinion.

I have always loved owls from little on up but rarely get to see them anymore as I live in Phoenix, AZ. In past years there was a very large owl in our neighborhood for a while and I would get to greet him while on my walks. What a pleasure it has been to watch McGee & Molly raise their family! Those kids are the cutest! I am feeling very emotional this morning, but I have a feeling maybe little Wesley will pick the old homestead to raise a family of her own in since she was so reluctant to leave. Thank you Carlos and Donna for one of the best webcam sites I've seen. Be safe, little ones and enjoy your new world!

If you're looking for a Father's Day present, consider this - instead of getting him something he doesn't really need, go to <http://www.tristatebird.org/catalog/2/adoptabird> and adopt a bird in his name. This is the organization that is coordinating the efforts to rescue wildlife that had been affected by the Gulf Oil spill.

Or - donate to a local organization that rescues wildlife.
I'm adopting a pelican for Hubby - let's see what THAT brings up at night! :)

Hello and good Saturday morning everyone, from the south shore of Long Island, NY 😊

I missed the owl goings-on last evening. Although I'm sad to see the "For Rent: the owl box" sign; it appears our last owl has left the nest, as it should be 😊

Sooo. Now I have time to compile the stories and put them on the Wiki... I'll let you know when they're done and posted.

What do you think? Just Hubby stories, or Hubby stories, song lyrics, poems, and other horks?

And BTW - that's what I'm thinking of calling it: "Sleep-talking Hubby and Other Horks", by CAR

You need to save his shop site on CafePress and go directly to his store if you want to buy something. You will pay a little less for the items, and Carlos will get a bigger profit on his items if you do it that way.

I wonder if Carlos is fully aware of the social aspect of all this - not just that people from 50 countries have logged on, but of the friendships made and the sense of togetherness that are the result of watching the owls - and watching him! It's a whole other dynamic, and a heartening, encouraging thing to witness - especially for me, who had lately and often felt pretty disappointed with my fellow humans. All of you wonderful people have made me feel grateful and happily reborn. Thank you all so very, very much!

Carlos and Donna we appreciate you so much. It is not everyday that so many people are able to share such an enriching event. With so much sadness and grief in people's everyday life, you have given us a gleen of life that has brightened us daily. Fellow chatters, I look forward to talking to you on FB.

I've been a watcher and not a blogger but like you all I have been transfixed for weeks. The humor and community of this site has been as much fun as watching the owls. I'm sure we will all smile when we see an owl somewhere and will never think of owls or birds in general in quite same way. Thanks to all
