storymom- did you write that it's the male that draws the female to the nest when mating/egg laying starts? If so, this may be an excited McGee trying to get Molly interested in nesting?

I read online that at 12 weeks is about the time the parents stop feeding the young, really tapering off ... and by 14 weeks, the young ones have left the parents home range. Well... Wesley is not that age yet, but didn't read on here, that Max and Patty certainly could be? I'm looking at a calendar and counting the weeks from the first hatch ...

Ok, I have to admit I have MOD. I have been in total denial. I've now attached myself to 3 different sites and I still have a large hole in my heart for our famous owl family. What, oh what will we do after tomorrow? Is there a pill we can take for this ache in our hearts? BUT...the ache is not as big as our appreciation for Carlos and Donna for sharing THEIR lives with us. Hats off to them and all who posted pictures etc. I raise my glass to ya'owl!

if it were a different owl/owls, I guess I would still expect the box to be considered M&M's territory. I mean, their offspring still hang there. So wouldn't you think there would at least be some commotion between new owls and M&M c&w?

It may be Molly and McGee. I just read this:
Barn Owls in the southern U.S. can raise as many as three annual broods. In our area the first brood is usually produced in April and May, another in the late summer (July and August), and a third in November.

Why I believe it is (was) Molly and McGee inside:
1) The owl which landed on the roof did an acrobatic maneuver, from the roof to the perch by the door, just as we watched McGee do on many occasions when he was delivering food to the box.
2) The owl that flew in also went straight to the door, not using the perches like all the owlets do.
3) That little bit of bonding that just happened right in front of us. 😊😊😊

For Latrippi, cuz I promised.,
San Marcos Wood (This Bird Has Flown)
I once had an owl
Or should I say, she once had me?
She showed me her Box.
"Isn't it good San Marcos wood?"
She asked me to stay and she told me
This was her own roost.
So I looked around and I noticed
Some Owl Happy Juice.
We sat on her floor,
biding our time, drinking owl wine.
We squawked until two
And then she said,
"Time to lay eggs!"
(Guitar interlude)
She told me she'd lay in the morning
And started to laugh.
I asked her how many
And she said, "We'll have our own staff!"
And when I awoke, I was alone,
This bird had flown.
So I felt real good, knew that I could Breed a San Marcos brood.
(For Molly, from "Legs" McGee) 😊

How many of us have dropped by the house we grew up in, persuaded the sixth generation owner to let you walk through and then think "I don't remember it being this small"? I imagined all owlets outside the box last night thinking "we grew up in there? I don't remember it being so small!"
All the best wishes to you all. It's been quite a fight!

My goodness, the chat is moving faster tonight than it did when we still had owls in residence. I had my volume turned up a while ago and hubby came out of the bedroom to tell me if he heard "the song" once more at top volume he would take the speakers and hide them (I'd had the same warning a couple of times before when the noise from the owls blasted thru the house 😊). It's been a sad day in the chatroom - good byes already being said, memories shared, posts by two MODS who have lost family members in the past couple of days (Joan Schub and Melissa). Earlier in the week we got happy news from other MODs on the birth of a new daughter, graduations and other family celebrations. I'll check in periodically tomorrow and will surely be here for Carlos' 6:00 pm final talk. Till then, I'll be lurking for a while and then off to bed. Good night all.

I feel the urge to confess signs of my MOD affliction now that the end of our Molly experience is nigh. I have been lurking quietly since Austh was hatched. SH, don't tell anyone not on this site, promise? Take a deep breath, whew, here goes.
Hello, my name is Nancy and I am a modaholic.
1. I have often stroked an owl's head with my cursor.
2. I have held my finger up to the screen when a reluctant owl was peeking out of the box, saying "Up Up, step on my finger, I won't let you fall".
3. My elbow has a raw spot from resting it on my desk for hours at a stretch.
Ah, I feel much better now. This is the first step of my 12 step program.

Thumper, I don't recall ever seeing a post or question from you. This is by no means a clique here on the Sportsman's Paradise web site. Most everyone here has always gone out of their way to be nice to each other and to newcomers and to answer questions. No one, unless they use foul language or are trying to cause problems by being rude to others, have been excepted or ignored. Unless the chat room is very busy, people usually try to answer questions within a short time. When it is busy, they often don't see the question as they are watching the video. When questions are asked and answered, the answer will appear just below the original post and not further up in the chat stream - so the poster has to go back and check for an answer.

People have gotten a little crazy with the stars but it doesn't hurt anything. We've been told by the site moderator that any time you log on or refresh it counts as a "hit" for the site. This cam site has already funded thousands more rating points than any other they have so it really doesn't matter anymore. But it's fun anyway

I must admit something...
My twin 12month olds are teething (yes, both) and are just awful right now. Inconsolable. And then there's the 4 yr old. So yesterday, 2 babies were crying and 1 little boy was whining simultaneously, when all of a sudden I realized I was singing the Holy Song over and over and over in my head. It was my "Serenity now!" moment. The song that previously made me a little (ok, a bit) annoyed because it wouldn't leave my head suddenly morphed into my Happy Place. Gooo figure.

I would like to be able to post a funny story, leave a sarcastic comment, or add a comical image, but to my surprise, I'm just not feeling very humorous tonight. I'm not sad, just quiet. Contentitive, perhaps. I say "I adore you all" when I sign off, but I think that at times I may come off as flippant or insincere. I want you all to know that I mean it. I have adored this. And you. Thank you, my friends, for your presence in my life these past four months. I am honored to have spent it with you.

Also, I have enjoyed everyone that have posted. I have cried, laughed, held my breath in fear and longed to touch the babies right along with all of you. Don't know what a leafhopper looks like, but this time of year (and for the rest of the summer) we get tiny little flying insects that come through the window screens and flit around the ceiling, the desk light and any other lighted source. Most are just annoying little gnats (or something), but the area under the desk lamp is cluttered with tiny corpses in the morning 😊

We just got back from eating at a restaurant that was right next to a Hooters. I kept thinking about the owls and saying to my hubby "We've got to get home before the owls come out!" We made it home in time. I've had a couple of margaritas and now I'm settling in to hopefully catch the owls one last time! 😊

Hi everyone, I'm back for the last night in hopes of seeing our little ones all grown up now. This is sort of like their cap and gown ceremony to send them off into the world. What a great experience this has been and so much was learned about the life of owls. SPO is a great place to learn about and so many other creatures and they sure have been super to us. Here are my stars for the night in case I don't think of anything else to say this evening.

Glad your husband is OK. From experience - never mess with a Momma bear if she has a cub nearby. I had a small cub run by me while picking wild raspberries one time. Knowing that a mother had to be fairly close, I don't know who got out of there quicker - the cub or me. I never saw the mother, but could hear her.

We have some fields near us about a mile away that we pass everyday on our way coming and going where they have cows and sheep. These pictures were taken in February showing the young ones out and about. It makes it a fun place to live. Yet we are only 4-5 miles from the center of Olympia, the state Capitol 😊

I have a friend whose dad farms sheep. She sent pictures and they all had green rear ends. When I asked about it, she said the ram wears a chak bag around his belly. When he mounts the sheep it leaves a green mark and he knows they have mated and he moves them to a separate pen until all females are marked. LOL

Hi Everyone!! I guess I came back to dog for my favorite feathered friends. I've been in and out all day, but had to take some time to do something with my hubby and the two Siberians. Took the dogs down to the beach for a very short walk, because I wanted to get back by 6:00PM to catch Carls and Donna; then fed the deer and watched a movie with Neil. BTW if you haven't seen "Blind Side" with Sandra Bullock, I highly recommend it, and since we all have our boxes of friends at hand, you will need them for the movie.

My grand-niece sent me her poem to go with the video of her feeding a wild owl (I posted the video earlier). Look close. The owl is FAST!!

Love to eat them mousies
I love to eat them mousies,
Them mousies what we like to eat.
I bite theys little heads off,
And nibble on theys tiny feet.
I love to eat them mousies!
We very proud to tell it,
You will see theys fur and bones.

In our owl pellet.

The link took me right to the barn owls. When you're at the Dutch site, check out steenuil. Earlier someone described it as 'screech owl'. Actually, it's Little Owl, Athene noctua. It does not occur in N. America; however, we have a close relative here, the Burrowing Owl. Little Owl and Burrowing Owl look remarkably similar. The owlets are ridiculously cute 😊

Thank YOU so much WlyRussell for remembering me and adding me to the poster. That was very sweet of you. Seeing the house and it's for rent just makes me want to cry, that and YOUR kindness. Hi Everyone! I just wanted to let everyone in this chat room know how much this experience has meant to me. I don't mean to sound to sappy but in Jan., I lost my precious kitty of 16 and 1/2 years. I was devastated. I discovered Molly and the eggs and March. They have been such therapy for me for the past 3 months. I am really sad to see the owlets go but it is nice to see 4 new livers begin and be so successful. I mainly read in the chat room and didn't talk much but I have truly enjoyed being a part of this with you 😊

For a long time I was here every night taking picture but this last two weeks I've been working a bit. Every night I'd look in to see what's been going on. I couldn't stay and talk but had to see how the baby's were doing. I thought by this time everyone had forgotten who I was or the pictures I took for everyone. Thank YOU so much WallyRussell for remembering me and adding me to the poster. That was very sweet of you. Seeing the house and it's for rent just makes me want to cry, that and YOUR kindness. I miss all of this and all the sweet people like YOU. Thanks again.

Thank you for adding me to your collage. I haven't done much talking but I've been here every day and evening for the whole 4 months and now I feel like I am part of the family.

It has come to my attention that HOP (The Hungry Owl Project), an organization that operates under the umbrella of Wildcare, and is a well-established not-for-profit group that promotes the construction and use of owl nest boxes, recommends AGAINST the addition of perches or ledges to owl boxes, as such structures are helpful to predators such as Great Horned Owls. Here is their website:

You may refer to their specific pages concerning nest boxes.

ELLIOT, I often wondered about that, as I have seen rat snakes climb way as far as 20 feet up into a tree in my yard, one that my son released it was about four or five foot long, we also have a abundance of raccoon families in my neighborhood, who are notorious nest robbers, and Great Horned owls in the area. Interesting ...

Hi, JL. Someone asked Carbs early on about snakes. He said that there were no species of snakes in his area that could scale a 15 foot pole. I also think a barn owl would make quick work of a snake, although a venomous species might pose a threat, I suppose.
Do raccoons climb?

Oh goodness yes! :D We had a family of them living in our front yard in a small grove of hickory and oak trees, they climb like cats. They fight like cats also. We also had a family of armadillos tunnel under our drive way they prefer to have several escape routes, like the gophers tortoises we have had in the yard. Poisonous snakes in our area NE Florida tend to stay on the ground (coral, moccasins, rattlesnakes, and the like) Although there are some pretty big anacondas in the southern part of the state that are not indigenous to the state, thankfully we have freezes up my way. Rat snakes will climb so will several other species. I would be more concern if the momlet the nest unguarded, they may have a system worked out where that does not happen.

Thanks, JL. I have so little opportunity to experience animal life living in Manhattan as I do. At least not the kind of animal life we are discussing. :)

YES, they sure do - and do it very well. I've had them up metal bird feeder posts and they DO know how to get into the supposed "squirrel proof" feeders. They climb on top of the box and reach down to the feeder tray. And if you have ever had 4 raccoons squealing and fighting about 20 ft. up in a blue spruce tree beside your bedroom window in the middle of the night you KNOW they can climb.

Yes. It is not unlike great writers of another day, such as Melville, whose "paragraphs" could be entire chapters.
