Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

Mixed messages on the star thing. Off to garden. I am sure Carlos has to catch up on his sleep, tell Donna how remorseful he is, for putting up the for rent sign and pack the RV. As for myself, there are some weeds waiting for me. I hope the owls are safe and sound and sleeping it off a bit. What an amusing, talented, and filled with knowledge bunch of people. Owl being seeing you in Owl Box 2, I hope. Or is it Palm Tree 1. Thank You, Thank You

I'm watching the video "Molly and McGee Back in the Box." It's at 27.5 minutes, and Molly seems downright traumatized. Ask any woman who has a babe in dappers and just found out she's pregnant -- and she'll tell you she can relate. One definitely cool side bonus: I'm finally hearing Molly's clicking noises that Carlos tried to mimic.

On one of the websites (Barn Owl Trust, maybe) it said that crouching posture is The Invitation. And she always did that when he brought food to the owlbox after she started nesting. It does seem kind of traumatic, but I think it means something else in owl body language.

To help all those who are confused about how to vote ... 😊
There are actually two places where you can "vote" by clicking on the stars: At the top of the page there are 5 reddish stars, below those stars is the latest vote count -- and just below your name there are 5 stars that turn gold when you click on them. Either one, but not both, will result in one vote. And, as a reminder: you do not have to comment to vote nor do you have to post to let us know that you have voted. I often vote without commenting as I want to follow the conversation threads.

Have fun! 😊

PLEASE READ! ABOUT STARS
If you are merely posting to add stars, or reposting because you forgot them, please don't. All you have to do is click on the stars at the top of the page to add your rating. You do not need to add a comment. Dozens of comments with nothing but stars only makes the chat move too fast and makes it more difficult to find or follow conversations. PLUS, this site has over 19000 stars; the next closest one has less than 600 stars. Your presence and involvement here has already counted for so much and we will certainly have 300+ people sign on by tonight.

RE POSTING STARS TO VOTE - Just under the "Live Owl Nest Box Cam" on the left at the top of this page there are 5 stars and the total count. You can just click on the 5th star and it will register your vote. You can add your vote each time you bring up this site or when you "refresh" the page. While it is fine to add your stars when you have a message to post, there is no need to post just add stars.

 quick summary is that it would appear that Moly and McGee are back - we know it is possible that they could have a second brood this year - and from the information that I've read it would appear that it is even possible while some of the previous owlets are still in the nest - however they have waited until the last one fledged - just!!! Even if they have a second brood they do continue to teach the other owlets to hunt for themselves. They aren't in the box at the moment but did spend a lot of time in there last night - hopefully Carbs will give us a bit more information later.

 Dianne, I was wondering who set that goal? The next closest site has less than 600 votes so we've already marked this as an outrageously successful site.
 We've been asking people NOT to post just to post stars since it counts the same if you merely click on the stars in the upper left corner of the page. Multiple Star posts last night really jammed up the site and actually put us off line for a few minutes. You can vote without posting a comment. Comments with content are good! It's just the posting just for stars ones that are unnecessary.

 It says on there that whilst Barn Owls are not territorial they will defend the area immediately adjacent to their nesting area and also Adult Barn Owls are highly sedentary - once established, they do not normally leave their home range' which is why I think it was Moly and McGee!

It was last night, there was an owl or two around when I was here, I guess there was bonding in the box too. But couldn't it be another set of owls, seeing the box put out 4 healthy kids. I would think that the locals would want the prime local on.

I don't think it was a different couple by the way they were interacting with the owl on the roof. There appeared to be some subtle communication going on there, almost like it was a little confusing for adult and owl alike. A very cool moment to witness...

The sequence begins several frames earlier, but this is the one shot that I remember so vividly.

I think it was another adult owl on the roof. A stranger drawn in by all the courtship calls. McGee was really screaming it up.
The third owl was quite sweet and had really long tail and wing feathers, so it looked like an adult. Plus it did none of the hissing and rasping an owl would do in the presence of a parent.

In short, Moly and McGee spend some time in the owlbox, shooting the kids away and doing a little bonding ritual. We don't know if they actually bonded or not. Lots of cooing and twittering between them as well as the bonding posture. Looked real! Then they left the nest shortly before dawn. We were all amazed and thrilled for them. Looks like there's going to be a second clutch in this nest box. When? We don't know. The camera still goes off tonight so we'll have to just hope and guess.

The link has gone as far as Cyprus and our friends there have been watching. Our morning is Californian right so we saw a bit of flying about when they left the box. Owlosaurus PLEASE READ!! ABOUT STARS

If you are merely posting to add stars, or reposting because you forgot them, please don't. All you have to do is click on the stars at the top of the page to add your rating. You do not need to add a comment. Dozens of comments with nothing but stars only makes the chat move too fast and makes it more difficult to find or follow conversations. PLUS, this site has over 19000 stars; the next closest one has less than 600 stars. It has become pointless and silly. Carbs doesn't see this. Only we see this. This should be a fun and exciting final day with the camera - please don't make it goofy with stars...

JH (not related) The best way is probably to post a comment to the Moly Blog, explaining what you wrote in the comment, and also include this link http://fc.iti.com/obj/24hrMC/n2/Snhs/Linkv_mvc3.png so they can see it. From there it's just a matter of them deciding if they want to post it on the Moly Blog or not. You can not post the link directly in his chat, only his Moderators can.

It is going on the wiki, and in the Moly Slideshow. See my comment below on that.

And as much as I've loved this whole event, I'm looking forward to getting my life back. Our fairy tale. I guess I was looking for a wonderful ending to what Carlos calls, and I agree - our fairytale.

I hope Carlos and Donna have a wonderful, well deserved vacation and when they come back maybe they can update us on the bbg on occasion as to the progression of Moly and McGee's endeavors.

I too am passing through this morning. Carlos indicates that maybe Moly & McGee BONDED last night?! Wonder if he will talk more about that tonight and whether he thinks there will be a second brood????! Oh, my, what will the world be with another 4 months of sleepless nights watching and waiting for action, people being late to work, filthy houses, eating cardboard pizzas because the cupboards are bare, and neglected kids/spouses. Researchers better start now making a MOD medication, that's all I have to say!

Hi all. Just coming back from a super interesting night. I watched good portions of the videos (2nd one would not play). Wow! So much activity... behaviors, posturing, vocalizations. 😊😊😊😊😊😊😊😊😊😊. Some owlettes were no doubt a bit confused by parents behavior. I saw lots of interacting, no actual mating...but then I did skip parts of the videos. What a finale to this story. Life goes on..... This is the link to the Dutch scrolls. Remember, it is in Dutch. If you watch a translator, now is the time to use it. Also, on the right of the screen is a list of past events about the owl box. If you scroll back to the beginning and have "Mating" you will see the same behavior as we saw last night. The Dutch owl has a different call than McGee does, but it wouldn't necessarily follow that all barn owls sound alike. At any rate, the behavior is very similar, and if you keep watching you will see a time line and how long it took the eggs to arrive after the initial bonding. (Carlos has time for vacation) BE AWARE, IT IS X-RATED!

I've had good luck with it, actually -- but I don't use the automatic translation for the whole page, but instead copy/paste interesting sentences in. Dutch has enough English cognates that you can kind of tell what you want to read.

I've seen better - but it does make for amusing reading, for example: "Once it gets dark, the boy started to blow. A sign that they are hungry. That goes all night. When the boy during the night are saturated, took the blow strongly. If one of the adult birds arrived with a mouse they begin to blow about"

The translator is quirky as it translates literal meanings so it does not work well with typical conversation. I used it to write to my friend in Malay and she was hysterical reading my email. She wrote me back and explained how it translates typical American slang that we use to converse in literal Malay and it just does not work. She wrote a little back to me in Malay and the translation to English was a hoot but the same issues arose. Often times it was incomprehensible unless I really thought about the words and what she might be trying to say. So it's helpful but not perfect.

I did read one comment about having a Daily Update space, this would probly be a SPO thing, but under my avatar and next to ob2 is a huge space, and I know with all the techies out there, could be utilized for Daily Updates. I hope we are entering chapter two, and Carlos gets some support from SPO so he doesn't have cables running down his hallway and the kitchen table full of computers, and he can go someplace if he wants to. Maybe a nice new computer shack off the deck! LOL! I don't want it to end, and I don't think anyone else does either.

Well now! They're saying the rattling of the windows that woke me up shortly after midnight was an earthquake centered in Mexico. After reading of the night's events I think the center may have been from San Marcos.

how likely is it that wesley and austin will end up as a mated pair? is it common for nestmates to practice bonding behavior before moving out on their own?

I think the third owl that showed up last night and was chased off was another adult that was lured in by the courtship calls and not one of our owlets. It wasn't even behaving like one of our kids- no demanding hissing. No hungry hissing at all.
Today, 08:04:58 - Flag - Like - Reply

The owls can start a new clutch now, and in warm weather places a third in November. It all depends on food source. Which does seem abundant.
M&M were doing all sorts of bonding rituals last night so it appears she is ready to start a new nest soon.

As for the eggs birds produce one egg a day it takes I think 1-3 days for the egg to be formed with the shell going on at the end of the cycle before laying. So she wouldn't be "full of eggs" but capable of producing a fertilized egg.

It was a beautiful story... we were blessed by people who did so much... for so many!!!...we watched parents who were focused on their families and worked as a team, all of owlets are healthy and have fledged.... and Momand Dad return to the box to continue "The Circle of Life". After scrolling some of the a.m. posts, a repeat of something I've posted before - The SP chat room is one of the best - if it could be made better, especially for long-running events and busy chats like this one, it would be great. If there could be some dedicated space at the top of the chat for FAQ and important links of the day. It could be changeable and access for posting there could be restricted only to designated "moderators". I often see posts with the same questions being asked over a period of a few hours. Most often they are reasonable questions from folks who don't post often and aren't familiar with the "scrolling to the basement" routine.

I was thinking of space a little bigger - perhaps some designated white space where it would show up. I can think of at least 4 items of interest, notices, etc. Just from the last 3 hours of chat today that could be put there. Answers in the screaming chat are sometimes gone in a matter of minutes. The blue box often gets overlooked and part of it not always visible to everyone.

Good morning. I've "scrolled & strolled" a bit to catch up on stats, info and earlier posts. Owlosaurus, I agree with your earlier post re: Carbs keeping the camera rolling and what is involved in giving up their house to bring this experience to us. While he probably will keep us updated with photos, reports, etc. as he can, I think we all have to accept the fact that they DO have a life "outside of the box" - family they need to see, privacy to just sit and watch a TV show or read a book; a long-planned vacation that has been put on hold; a 50th high school reunion that Carlos, as class president, has been very active in planning; and even a chance to get away for a day or two without worry about equipment/camera failures.

Hi Lynda and Owlosaurus, Down below on Owl's original post explaining that Carbs and Donna have gone through to enable all of us to see this amazing story unfold, I have posted some photos I captured when Carlos did the video tour of the inside and outside of his house to show us all that has gone on. I did not capture the very long thick cables that trail down his hallway into another room that probably go to a server I would imagine. I posted the photos to refresh everyone's memories and also those that missed that tour can see what the Royals have put into this. Thought it might be good for everyone to see the photos.

Good morning; Just checked in (old birds die hard) Is it really true that M&M were in the box together? Hope they were just celebrating the kids are own their own and not having any ideas about starting this all over again. I think the summer months would not be a good time for new babies. Too hot for them. Guess nature and critics know what they are doing but I hope they wait until the weather cools down again and Carlos and Donna are back and rested where they might decide to let us back into the world of Moly and McGee.

Come right in, sit right down, baby let your feathers hang down.... whoooooo's your daddy, Moly? What a pleasant turn of events we're having, this return of Momma/Poppa to the box.... Carlos and Donna definitely deserve their vacation, and we all need to be understanding no matter what they decide to do!!

 Friendly reminder, today is flag day in the USA so if you have a flag, this is one day to display it.
 I'll be off to the cemetery later this afternoon for a flag retirement ceremony with the local BSA and GS troops and packs. They usually have a very large flag to retire from the baseball stadium--lots of fun for the young people.

 The pages are very long and the documents are rather large for PDFs. You may want to update you Adobe Reader program or download a Free PDF reader such as Foxit PDF Reader.
<http://www.foxitsoftware.com/downloads/index.php> (My regular PDF reader, no frills but fast and reliable)

If your browser is set to open the PDF in a window/tab, you may want to change that. It's always best to download the files and open them in a freestanding PDF reader. Hope this helps.

 The images are all there and in sequence, right through Mystery Owl leaving the box at 4:37am and then flying off from the perch for the last time at 4:38 am PDT. The only thing left is for someone to volunteer to write accurate and descriptive captions for all of them by using the chat in the saved PDFs. That should only take about a month. 😊

 Bonding can be any behavior that enhances the mating bond between the owls. This includes preening and a fake mating ritual that looks like mating but may not actually include mating. Since we can't really see inside the box well enough to tell what it is, we call that "might be mating ritual bonding".

 Some photos of McGee bonding with Molly as she sat on eggs or tended to very young owlets. He just sort of gently lands on top of her for just a few seconds and then would leave the box. He would do this after he had brought her a "treat" (food).

I was just catching up in the basement and I really hate that I feel the need to say this but I do so here goes. And I have felt this way a really long time and I have tried to convey this before but the practice continues. I am really disappointed and quite frankly irritated by the use of the flag just because someone expresses an opinion that you don't agree with. That is a COMPLETELY inappropriate use of the flag tool. It makes the site very hostile feeling, and you all remind me of a bunch of high school bullies. It is so inappropriate and on today of all days I think it is shameful. What happened to Carlos making the world a better place? Tolerance for others might be a good place to start. I'll stop there before I say something I will regret later.
Flags are ONLY for inappropriate comments, i.e. swearing, pornographic things etc... not expressing a different opinion.

Good morning from Atlanta, everyone. Here are the "stats" before I post them on the wiki for the last time.
June 13/14, Total treats observed: 0.

Branching Stats: Molly and McGee are "reverse-branching." 😊 McGee returned to the box at 9:37p and Molly returned at 10:02p. At 10:07p an owl showed up and was chased away by Molly. At 10:16 other owlets showed up and were also chased away. During the night, Molly and McGee were observed bonding or mating or both. When Molly left the box to sit on the fledge ledge, McGee called and called until she returned. McGee flew away at 3:31a. Molly left the box at 4:26a, sat on the fledge ledge for awhile, and flew away at 4:38a.

Carlos and Donna will say their final good-byes tonight at 6 pm PDT.

Molle, that's the loveliest, most narratively thorough set of "stats" I've seen yet! Now I can relax (I'll add some links and other things to the timeline later today, probably this evening). Thank you for posting the hunting and branching stats to the wiki every single morning since the wiki began, grabbing them from the moderators banner, tracking down missing information, filling in narrative gaps, working things in just for fun, and more generally being the best co-editor the wiki could have hoped for. Thanks too for the other pages you maintain -- Owl Resources, Amusing Ways, Just for Kids -- and keeping me cheerful when my spirits drooped! Your Poem without Words is wonderful too. And furthermore, I love your avatar. A thousand thank yous and -- oh, stars!

PLEASE READ! ABOUT STARS

If you are merely posting to add stars, or reposting because you forgot them, please don't. All you have to do is click on the stars at the top of the page to add your rating. You do not need to add a comment. Dozens of comments with nothing but stars only makes the chat move too fast and makes it more difficult to find or follow conversations. PLUS, this site has over 19000 stars; the next closest one has less than 600 stars. It has become pointless and silly. Carlos doesn't see this. Only we see this. This should be a fun and exciting final day with the camera - please don't make it goofy with stars...

Owosaurus posted some great pics of Carlos growing up last night. Perhaps she could be convinced to do so again sometime...

Most clutches have eggs that don't hatch. Molly's 4 healthy owlets from 6 eggs is a good ratio. We've mostly focuses on the successful eggs and left the broken egg and the unhatched one to the detritus on the bottom of the owl box.

Not to be a spoiled sport, but to all that are requesting Chapter 2 of Molly the Owl, I vote we NOT be selfish for a full blown 2nd time around. Carbs was SELFLESS on that, as he is originally was. It became a 24/7 job and took over their living space, and increasingly more complicated than he EVER expected. A simple camera in the box, as it originally was for Chapter 1, should be the most that we request

OK, off my soap box.... I do Love you all...I'm just sayin'...

I understand everyone's desire to have the camera as keep rolling or at least to have them come back on after the Royal's vacation. But it's more than just turning the camera on for them. Think about the wires running from the cameras to the 'Command and Control' center in the house. Think of the cameras on ladders in the middle of their garden. Think of the computer and broadcast equipment set up on their dining room table and all over their kitchen. They want all of that gone and you can't blame them. I'm sure Carlos will take some night pictures and post those if there are owls about, but I don't think we can expect much more than that. Who knows what he'll decide, but if we get a live camera shot it will involve a LOT more from him than just flipping a switch.

It made things crazier last night when everyone kept posting "stars"... the chat went too fast and my screen kept freezing up because of the speed of the posting. Just clicking at the top of the page gets the job done and doesn't "mess up" the chat stream so much. Still need caffeine...going to make tea.

I wonder if after their vacation Carbs and Donna will allow us just a quick peek to see the progress!

Well, Dru Ann it's a bnggggg story. The last Owl Wesley left yesterday AM and last night it seems Moly and McGee came back and were seen bonding in the box and they were making mating sounds so I think we end as we began. Very nice. You may want to tune in for a while to see what Carbs has to say this AM, that is if Donna allows him out of the RV. She may just cry when she finds out. James copied last night's chat to the wiki site you may want to read the PDF from last night it was entertaining as we all sat a speculated. Also Carlos recorded last night and the files are on the main u-stream site.

The issue is that people feel the need to post every time they add stars. It was so bad that last night that it froze up THE SITE, not my computer... all while we had live owl action so we couldn't even view what we had waited all night to see. It also makes the whole PDF thing a nightmare for James. Very frustrating. People just need to know that they don't need to post when they vote.

Hunting Fishing said a while back that stars on comments do count. The stars help them decide what sort of wildlife cams to add to the site.

Poor Wesley. I just read further down that when Moly and McGee were in the box, that they ran off an owl! That must have certainly been Wesley! Poor baby probably doesn't know what to think! She's such a timid little thing and just recently left the box. She's a week behind everyone physical development wise, but she's also demonstrated that she is also a few more days beyond that, because it took her longer to leave the box and longer to stay away from the box. And she still comes back looking for her Mom and Dad to bring her food.
I hope Moly and McGee keep caring for their existing brood while she is getting ready to lay more eggs.

Good Morning everyone

Please keep your enthusiasm for the stars in check. I'm going to make a PDF of last night's chatter.

Take a break and check out over 100 screenshots from last night.

Was of line all week end and it seems I missed a bunch (if I am reading correctly):
1. Wesley Anne finally joined everyone at the Palms Spa and Howitel
2. M&M came back and bonded "played house"?
3. Have the Royals left yet?
4. I don't think the owl box is going to be available for rent hehehe

It seems as though the events at the Royal Household are not unheard of, but were not actually expected by Donna and Carlos! They have been fabulous with providing us many resources to learn more about the owls...here is a whole page on Mollys Blog site to help answer Our numerous questions!! 😊

A bunch of us thinks Donna and Carlos should go on the Elen Show. Elen because she is such an animal lover. We should write to her.

Some people also think Oprah. Personally, I think Elen is a better fit. - but your choice

I wish (hope) SPO would take over this camera (site) while Carlos and Donna vacation. It might be too intrusive to the neighborhood.. but would be enjoyed by so many. OR.. it could be an extra credit thing for grandson Austin.. good experience for the future tech expert.
