Evening 🖰 Tables are turned for me today, you lot appear to have had loads and loads of sleep for once - but because I didn't want to miss the 'final goodbye' I stayed up last night and finally got to bed at 3am- been trying to function on 4 hours sleep so I know how you have all been feeling for the last few

Hi Cheryl, I'm sorry you feel like we have felt, but the good thing is except to catch up, you won't have to stay up late hours.

Today, 10:46:18 - Flag - Like - Reply Chery I Owen Oh dear!! I've been so lucky to watch from the UK - whilst i've missed some of the evening 'chat' on here - I've been able to watch all the owlets night time antics without losing any sleep - work got in the way sometimes - but then you can't have everything!!

Of course, we will all be here because some of us have turned our sleep hours upside-down.

Eve, I'm right behind you. I look at the owl-box-level carnage in my house and want to return to my friends in the owlie cam world! 🙂

I tried to return to the other world and back to my business... I decided to start by cleaning out the msn's list of people on my computer. I went to ease the first sign in name I haven't used in years. Now, I can't open any of my emails and go back and start to work. Back to the same problem as my old

I was really glad to read the note from C&D that the owls are no longer in the palm tree. I think it was the thought that they were in the tree and I couldn't see them that was bothering Hello Everyone! We all slept in this morning; spent all day yesterday with three of our grandkids on a riverboat cruise to the Gulf and visit to a local aquarium in Tarpon Springs. Temp was mid 90's! Anyway I found myself thinking out of habit that it was time to check on Molly's family. Old habits die hard, don't they?

Good afternoon everyone. I slept-in today and woke a full 12 hours after closing my eyes. It was a peaceful sleep, without a single electronic gadget in the cabin turned on. I even turned the AC and ceiling fans off just so I could have absolute quiet, except for the sounds drifting in from the woods out back. Oddly their words (1000 characters at a time) to leave here on the good ole SPO pages. I am about to make one now going back to my sign-of last night and I will return to make a couple more through the week. The last page in the Epilogue will probably be captured on Friday. So plan your last words if you like, or just continue chatting as if nothing had changed, it's all good. PIC TURES

            Thanks, James! It was an odd night last night, and I didn't have the "right" energy to write much of anything at all. I'm sure I'm not alone. Plus the chat was a bit crazy so it seemed kinda futile. This is like the big party that you throw...all of your casual acquantances come, have a great time, and then say goodnight. Then the "core" group of friends sit around for a couple more cocktails ruminating on the events of the day. I always like that part of the party.
            Hopefully someone still has a haiku or two left.

            Morning Kathleen!! Latrippi just put your final collage up on the fornt page of the wiki! 😇 I asked her to do it because I wasn't sure how she got it there. She also made a page for it, but that one has the previous version still. She told me she had to get back to work and will switch that one later. 😃

    I wonder if Carlos realizes that it is Molly and McGee who are writing this story. Not to be demanding, because I feel truly blessed to have witnessed this miracle but if they are going to breed again it would be great to know and be involved since it is just another chapter in this story.

            Actually, Carlos said pretty much exactly that on his final webcast last night, that M&M are writing this story, not him or us. He said, "We didn't pick Molly and McGee, they picked us." And he said, "They're the producers and directors, not us. We're the characters." But M&M get to keep on writing in the wild, and C&D get to get on with their lives.

I missed the chat last night after the "Royal's Farewell." Have most MODS given their farewell on here also and moved onto the Facebook chat? I know its weird but I don't have a FB account. I know myself all too well and would spend WAY too much time on it (like I have done here), so I've vowed not to even start. I will miss everyone who has moved on .. ijust watched. sob i believe Carlos said they're gone because he doesn't want looky-loos around his house and for good reason. at this point, we have to respect these fine folks and let them get on with a normal life. I even hesitate to send a personal thank you as I don't want to add to a potential mountain of mail. just my humble opinion though, this has been the best internet experince ive ever had, and as the Newscaster said, perhaps there will be a "Season 2"!!                            There are two reports on that site. The one that's 3:26 is the later report where Carlos left the answer open as to whether they'd light up the box again.

                    Hi all. I'mchecking in for a short time and then have to be off again. It IS amazing how many of us sat down in from of our computers this morning, knowingly in front of "no live cam owl box"... But comforting to see the familiar chat friends.
                    I misunderstood last right, what was happening to the chat room. When JH said it was our last chance to be immortalized on a pdf, I thought he meant chat would no longer exist. Now I get it!!!!! Old chat...immortalized!! New chat....not!!!
                    Hope Wes got plenty to eat last night. I have a feeling he did...Molly and McGee have been superb parents. Use Seems strange, not reaching for the stars the end of the news for now.

                     I'mso glad to see people here chatting this morning. I see in the blue box that our babies are not in the palm tree now. I wonder where they went. I still worry
                    I don't blame Carlos for not mentioning M&M's activities the night before, although it kind of was like the elephant in the room. He was around so much on Sunday that I thought he'd be here most of the day yesterday and heard very little from him. I really hope they have a wonderful vacation and owls are far speaking of horking..... has anyone bought that bumper sticker that says "hork if you love Molly" on ebay? I haven't read if Carlos has endorsed that or not. It's pretty funny but I don't want to get it if it's not "kosher" to do so. any advice?

The bumper sticker is approved by Carlos. He mentioned it in one of his chats. Said he was going to put one on the RV. Donna said, "No." and he said
                            "We'll see." There is also a note in the eBay description that it is sold with Carlos' approval.

Good Morning MODs. I just had to turn on the computer and take a look to know that everyone was still here. I found Carlos' talk to be very objective and a little less emotional than I thought he would be, but I'm guessing that both he & Donna are more than tired and it was such a positive experience on the whole. There's a whole different tone to the chatthis morning too... Not the frenzied chatthat sometimes happen. Ahhhhhh... alas. Withdrawls. 📛 Today, 07:08:17 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by

           The Facebook group is an entirely different way of connecting. Remember some of the long - and very interesting - discussions we started here, only to have them banished to the basement, cutting it off sometimes just when the discussion was getting good? That doesn't happen in FB. The discussions stay where they are, open and available to anyone who wants to continue them. In my opinion, that's the best part of the FB group. However, when it comes to real chat, this roomrocks! Facebook is not nearly as good as this chat roomfor that Robin, I think I saw you post a similar message last night. I wish he would too, but I think we have to accept that it's not just a matter of turning on a camera anymore. If you watched any of the last broadcasts, expect for last night, Carlos showed the equipment he used to do the broadcast, the wires run from the outside cameras to the inside computers and switchers, the way it had taken over their house. They are packing up the equipment, taking down the ladders with cameras in the garden, pulling the wires (which were snaking through a doggie door out of the house!), etc. He can't just flip a switch and start broadcasting again. Maybe by next year he will have built himself a control roomand will get into it again, but I think Carlos will be on to something else by then. He's a smart guy and knows he can't recreate this experience again.

          IMHO, I think we just have to give up these thoughts of continuing this singular experience, Candace. It's the end of our experience with the owls, not the end of the owls! We have to move on to new things, knowing that the owls are moving on to new things themselves. If Carlos wants to do something similar in the future, that would be great. But we can't sit around waiting and wishing that it'll be. What we've had will have to be enough, and it is enough. In fact, it was more than we could ever have wished for!

                    Good morning Everyone!
                    I knew there would be some people here today. I agree with Jan - this is a great place to chat. But I would also encourage you to check out the facebook page. I know some people have concerns about fb for a couple reasons - I resisted it myself for a long time but was 'forced' into it by family as a way of keeping track of what was going on across a wide-flung group of 'in-laws and out-laws', as we say. Maybe I can ease your fears enough so you will give it a try. You can always cancel it if you don't like it.

                           FACEBOOK:
                           First of all, if you are concerned about privacy, only put information into fb that you are OK with sharing. Don't include birthdate, where you live, where you work, etc unless you want to.
                           ▶ If you really want to stay private, then make up a name. You don't have to be a real person to be on fb. Afterall, Molly Royal has a fb page! People have fb pages for their dogs.

                           you made it work. Facebook WANTS you to use their service and make it very easy to sign up and get started.
                           ▶ You already have friends there: us! Once you sign up, you'll see a "search" box near the top of the page. Type in SPO-MOD and you'll find this by your hometown. Then you'll see that adding your hometown information can be a benefit because it will help old friends find you.

                           As you want to add more information, you can ask your SPO-MOD friends about privacy settings so that only 'friends' on fb can see your information.

                           the Facebook group is an entirely different way of connecting. Remember some of the long - and very interesting - discussions we started here, only to have them banished to the basement, cutting it off sometimes just when the discussion was getting good? That doesn't happen in FB. The discussions
                           stay where they are, open and available to anyone who wants to continue them. In my opinion, that's the best part of the FB group. However, when it comes to real chat, this roomrocks! Facebook is not nearly as good as this chat roomfor that

Judy R Greetings from Iowa. I didn't think I was a $\,{\rm MOD}\,$ until this morning. I amreally going to miss the owl's adtivity This has been such a wonderful diversion for me. I am a full time caregiver to my husband, who is in the end stage of Alzheimers. I am pretty much housebound. M & M's family has given me so much enjoyment. It's been wonderful to celebrate life instead of watching the slow death of my husband. And.. I will miss all the humor and chatter from all of you.

I will check in periodically and on FB. My hope is when Carlos and Donna return from their much deserved vacation, they will turn the camera back on. Bye for now. . Today, 04:49:51 - Flag - Like - Reply

                          Morning, he said that every story has a beginning a middle and an end. In fact he said it twice because hed forgotton to press a button and had to start again. He gave out some statistics and basically said thank you and goodbye. He didnt say anything about doing it again. It was hearfelt, you could hear that. That was basically it. A lovely couple and a fond farewell from them.

                    I plan on putting up owl boxes in the huge evergreen trees that cover the island on which I live. I hope you can do the same where you live. I will also never put out rat poisoning again and will tell others, every chance I get, why they shouldn't either. This has been a treasure of an education and one that I trust will make ALL of us ,who have become involved and enchanted with the owls, to educate others about the importance of the owl to our ecosystem. And I amCERTAIN that the owl box tonight is occupied again by the two lovers from last night. There will be more eggs in that little love nest very soon and it's heartening to know that. OWLS ROCK!

goes on. I have never followed a chat room before and I am so glad that I fell into this one. Thank you, thank you, thank you all for sharing your thoughts and talents. It has been a privlege. Maybe next time I will be able to figure out how to set up an avatar so when I post I won't be that grey face. Be well and well That's too bad that everyone suffers the property damage that they do. It would be like you were always having to remodel.

        Maybe it's time for some Californians to move on up to Minnesota? It's fairly safe here. 🥹 Just don't stand still in a snow storm.

Well Ive been dreading this. I wanted to say something special, wise, profound, memorable, to you owl peeps before I signed out tonight. Its prity much all been said. I feel very lucky to have been here with all of you watching eggs hatch and owlets fledge. I have laughed and cryed and enjoyed every moment, and I will miss this very much. Many thanks to Donna and Carlos, even if shut down was burtal, I understand they realy had no choice. I will keep in touch with the face book, but it just wont be the same...Please take care everyone. GOOD NIGHT FROM MONTREAL. XOXOXOXOXOXOXOXOX

Well, friends. Seems like I Ve been saying goodbye for about 2 weeks now -- because, I have! It's been an honor and pleasure hanging out with you. I'll be tending the wiki for a while, no doubt, along with the heroic Chris, because I love doing it and I love what's there. I never dreamed it would take the way it has!
 Thank you, deep profound bow, Chris and James, and Kathryn, and Molle, unsung heroine of the daily stats. And thanks to everyone for pouring your thoughts and feelings into this chat stream -- or hung back but paid attention, for that matter -- and made this such a magical place to be. Not to get all woo-woo about it, but it's hard for me to imagine the combined effect of our aattentiveness didn't contribute in some way to what unfolded before our eyes in Mollyland! You all take good care, OK? And owlsee you round. 😃 😃 [my 2 favorite emoticons here]

 I've shared this site of a loon nest a couple of times here.....began with 2 eggs, one floated away...and the 2nd is way, way over due....they got permission from the DNR to go tonight and take the egg....so so sad....they just did it at 11 pm cst.....the loons have not returned yet, but the howls and wails were so sad, when they knew someone was at the nest.....
 2 heartbreaking bird cams tonight...

       I don't think it's unusual, Bil. We had a web cam here in Maine (still do, but I haven't checked it at all recently) and a mink or raccoon at e both eggs. The female continued to sit on the nest for a while. And, just like Molly did, they will continue to set on a non-viable egg for a long time. Probably best that the egg was removed so that she might have time to lay more.

       A loon's nest is one of the most vulnerable nests I know of. They are nearly totally dependent on a constant water level - too high and they flood and the eggs wash away - if the water level is way too low the adult loons can't walk back up to it. They are also very susceptible to predators stealing the eggs (raccoons, ravens, mink and crows) and of human activity such as boating. It may not be too late in the season for them to lay another clutch of eggs. Let's hope

       I'm in the panhandle of FL, Crestview. 30 miles from the Gulf, if that far. It was 101 today, with heat index of 110. Crestview is the highest elevated point (just about) in the whole state. So it's the hot test in the summer up here, and the coldest in the winter. Lucky us!

Last night's video was huge for me. I was feeling blue about leaving all of this, but it was so magical that it's hard to leave it with anything less than a full heart and a smile on my face. In one night, we got to see it all. We saw some of the kids return, Wesley practicing her pounces (one of my favorite things to watch), OB2 gave us a lovely evening sky, and then...THEN...the Holy Grail of allowl watching. We got to see Molly and McGee return to their home and - be still my heart - bond and make lovey-dovey noises and so on. How could I NOT feel somehow priveledged? It fixed my attitude but good. Well worth the sleep deprivation. All we needed was some cheesy background music and a setting sun with the words "The End" floating across our screens. But really, it was perfect exactly the way it was. Off to bed with a smile on my face! No good-byes fromme. Owl be back!

by e it! hahahahaha now THERE's an idea! i can set up a webcam to play what our 3 heathen cats are doing during the night time. It sounds like elephants running amok from one end of our house to the other. then you might hear hissing (not owl hisses either) and spitting and growling. just like teenage siblings....and the one you THINK is the shy demure one is really satan's spawn! they're all siblings from 2 litters from the same feral momand they are completely different in coloration and nature. yeah.....james.....can you be in charge ??? merritt, will you be the moderator? yeah.....ill even dress them in owl costumes and everyone can just come along.....of course they'd rather EAT an owl.....they weren't so happy with the elf and santa costumes i tried to put on themat christmas.....

When I talked to my daughter (her name is Lisa) I was telling her I wasn't understanding why I was being so upset. She helped me to realize that my sister loved loved loved owls... I recently lost my sister who was my best est friend ever. I've been going through her stuff the last couple of weeks, giving stuff away, keeping stuff. My sisters husband wanted me to have all her jewelry. Sure enough, owl earrings and the like. So that helps me understand why I've been so emotional. I'malso losing my wonderful Molly dog. She's a shiztue who has a serious heart condition. I thought we were going to lose her Saturday. So all in all.
 I'ma basket case. I truly appreciate all your comments to me below in a earlier post. Thank you.. Hugs to you all. I am going to miss seeing our babies so much.

        I'm so sorry. I agree with Janeen, nothing like a good cry but think of how much your sister would have loved the owls and smile. How did you discover the owls? Maybe she sent them to you!

All of you are a blessing. My sister loved owls as long as I can remember. I have a cup tree in my kitchen that she made for our Mother that I inherited.
          Yes, it's got a barn owl at the top of it. She and I were so close. She was six years older then me but we were very close. Thank you everyone. Your comments mean a lot to me. I will be back in this chat room for sure Chris, I keep forgetting to ask this question. How long will the Wiki be up and on-line? Is it a site that was set up by great MODS such as yourself and ALL the other DEDICATED MOD's? I have not even had a chance to really check the Wiki out that much. But guess that will change and very soon now that I can't be checking in on the owlets anymore. Also, do you know how long SPO will keep this chat site open for us? Curious minds need to know where to go for comfort in these sad and quiet times you know!

                               alskat - I know that flaconers live for their birds; it is a love affair between them! And I've always wanted to be close to one of those huge stallions - they seemimmense and so powerful even in pictures. Are they the same breed that was developed to carry the knights with heavy armor into battle?
                               There's a word for them, but I forget what it is.

I've seen posts about a book of Carlos' photographs possibly being put together. If this happens, I certainly don't want to miss out! Is there any more info. on this? Or where do I need to check back to regularly to find out if and when it happens? Yesterday, 20:27:36 - Flag - Like - Reply sportsmansparadiseonline.com/Live_Owl_Nest_Box_...

😃 😃 - A good need laugh after all the sadness today and now. I needed to smile and laugh so thanks!

       FYI - For a coffee table book of Carlos's photos, email Eric at eric@ericblehm.comand let hm know you'd buy one. Put COFFEE TABLE BOOK in the subject line. He needs to know there are 500 interested people before he pursues it.

 I don't know how Carlos would be able to get those cams out of the owl box. He can only disconnect the wiring. He will most likely take down all the camera equipment, ladders etc. around the owl box. Sounds like it could be awfully tempting when he gets back.

I'msure most/all of us have stress and/or sadness in our lives. I'mso grateful we had this experience together. I'm sure for many of us, it was the highlight of our day...and night. It was something to look forward to...after a long, hard, or tiring day... or first thing in the morning when we woke up. It was, I'msure, one of the highlights of our lives!!

                      Not to be melodramatic... My marriage is ending because my husband has been cheating and wants me gone. (No one here knows who I am, so it's ok) This experience, with the wonder of Nature and the shared love, pride and fears of all of us, and the dedication of the Royals has been an enormous Positive vibe that has helped me to try to keep looking for the light at the end of this tunnel. I haven't participated in chat much; but I have loved the goodwill and generosity of each of you. I've cried so many tears, joyfully watching Molly's mothering and gentle care care of the owlets. I am surely not the only "watcher" whose life is

I had a hummingbird come up to my bedroomwindow today... it saw my red water bottle. In honor of Carlos and the gang... I am going to hang a hummingbird feeder out my window... so I get some visitors and think of Molly World!

       It's one thing to think about the owls moving on and having good lives and M&M back in the box to make more little owlets in the future, but it's another thing altogether to miss the people who have been here, knowing our connections have been so deep but brief. You and I and a lot of others sure go back a long way, KHM. I will miss you very much.

                 I wondered too. But didn't James post a Twitter feed yesterday that showed HF sending out Tweets about the Owl Cam? I saw that somewhere...

           I amsurprised too, but I bet he was lurking. He probably didn't find the need to say anything and the chat was fast.

                 About 2 hours ago, I saw him on. He answered the question from someone asking if the total #'s of viewers included people in this room. The answere was yes. 😃

           Now that we're done, I just have to say that I really cannot stand that Molly Molly song!!!!
           I will miss everything EXCEPT the song and the horkin' carrot!
           (ah, that felt good to say...)

Guess I'm a "party pooper" to. The song was cute the first and second time, but I wasn't fond of it after that - thank goodness for the mute button. And, I nevr understood the carrot. It was always a good time to mute & "pause" and scroll the chat. But, it's over and now I'm sd. Go figure 😕 Yesterday, 19:41:41 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Barb Mary Carroll (the Shadow) I know that felt cathartic, Owlo, and I am with you!!
