Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male (McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here

Good morning, y'owl. I actually slept in this morning, and I STILL feel tired. I have the Dorset owls on, that loud squawking is better than the silence! Funny how we've fallen in love with such an annoying sound! My favorite is the Tel Aviv owls.

I would think with the success Sportsman Paradise has had on the Molly site, they would set up other sites in a similar fashion. There are bound to be other naturalists in the US who would love to host a nest, although I think the fact Carlos was learning just like us was what made it so user friendly. . . .

It's not unusual for SPO to wait a few days before inserting another feed. Have patience.
All of SPO wildlife cams have chat rooms. It takes work to monitor a chat and researchers need to spend the time on research and not other stuff.

It's really a matter of what the owner of the nest-cam puts into it. SPO just does the streaming. It's easy enough nowadays to set up a nest-cam but the interest and energy that Carlos put into it is extraordinary. It seems that most nest-cam owners are not that involved in the quality aspect, or can't afford the equipment that Carlos had, and time invested is staggering.

I see what you mean. I was honestly thinking of doing one at school. We are in the process of creating a wildlife habitat on a portion of our schoolyard. We are in town, but have a wide open field with trees around the edges and lots of bushes hosting LOTS of rabbits. There are owls in town, and I'm thinking of putting up an owl box. It would be a great project for the kids, but the equipment cost would definitely be an issue. . . .

Boy, my MacBook does not like that Tel Aviv site - the streaming takes forever to load, and even then it stops periodically for LONG periods of time to load more info. But there HAS to be a better way to view it than that!! If I find out, I'll post the info here, and on FB.
And if not, I'm calling His Steveness, and asking him!

I can't always access that site too....I've been watching the TX Barn Owl. Wigg...sometimes take a couple of times to load, but not as bad as the TV site. No sound either, but this is the 2nd clutch for this pair, the first pair the owlettes were eaten by a snake. 😊 when they were a couple of days old around May 20th...she now has 4 new eggs, the first bird on 06/06....

So between the dutch and the texas fun watching...of course nothing compares to Molly and McGee and their "kids"....

I'm going to make coffee and then wander down there. This PDFing thing is almost as difficult to crack as actually watching owls (and it smells a bit like crack, too).
Maybe there's a 12-step program out there for that too? Anyone have a PDF of their website.

I think we may have run the Tel Aviv University site over their bandwidth allotment last night (or fired a server or two). I doubt they were prepared for the unexpected onslaught of such a big MOD group hitting their servers all at once (and over and over). They probably receive only a few dozen hits a night on those cameras any other day.

I only hope they're back up again soon, so we can hit'em again tonight.

Hello to those us who are still hanging around. I read Carbs' blog about the owls. And it occurred to me that Carlos has said many times that he believes that McGee has controlled/guided the actions of Moly & the owlets from the beginning. His bonding/mating with Moly might have been the signal switch to the kids that they were now grown and it was time to move on. You saw how they had started to fight over treats. So it would make sense for McGee and Moly to drive them away from THEIR nesting area if there were the possibility of another clutch. I couldn't find anything definitive about owl territory and overlap in a quick search, but it makes sense. And that would make it coincidental that the cams were shut down the day after the mating. Good luck Watt, Pat, Austin & Max.

I always dread those chainsaw noises! Not enough trees as there is. Takes so long for a tree to grow, and such a brutally short time for it to be destroyed!

We had a complete reconstruction of our street a few years ago and lost a bit of trees in the tree lawns. Our neighbors lost 4 trees because the sewer or storm drain went right underneath them. There is a culverted creek under our road too which made the hole project rather complicated--really had no choice but to take out right between because you can't move the creek and culvert. The culvert caved in at one spot and it was neat to peek inside it. It's quite large. Long time residents talk about the big flood of 1972 when the road was a river! and cars floated away!
We lost our one tree on the tree lawn. The city planted 2 replacements for us and our neighbors planted their own trees.

Good morning.

I forgot to mention yesterday that I purchased a few things at the Nature Center and one was a small field guide for owls from Sibley's. Here is their main web page <http://www.sibleyguides.com> and if you scroll down a bit you will see their new Folding Guides to Birds. My youngest, 3.5 yrs, told the store clerk that we have found and seen lots of owls! The lady had not heard of Molly but we had a fun conversation about the Buzzard. I suggested the park put up a buzzard cam on a nest.

Waterford Press also has foldable guides <http://www.waterfordpress.com> and from their main page click on products. These are great to keep in the car, light weight for carrying on a hike and because they are laminated, they stay clean!

Great for anyone who works with kids or hangs out in wetlands, etc.

Waterford Press also has most of their activity books online. It used to be available without registration but I see they require that now. It shouldn't be a big deal to do that and if you have seen their books in the store you know the activities are fun--animal mazes, coloring, word searches, matching animal with tracks, etc. They are well done and I recommend them.

Good morning Elliott. I saw your post yesterday about Carlos cleaning out the owlbox. I would have been nice for him to post that he used some protective gear while he did that. You are right, it's quite unhealthy. Birds are vectors for quite a number of diseases. When my dad's wife had non-Hodgkins Lymphoma she was told in very clear terms not to touch or refill their backyard feeders because of the suppressed state of her immune system.

I know we used to pick up feathers, etc. all the time as kids and my husband completely freaked out the first time our child brought him a feather. That was when I learned about all the potential dangers. A few years later we had West Nile virus invade our area.

Good morning, Barb. I certainly would have thought Carlos was more clued-in than to undertake the cleaning himself. In addition, he had consistently said he would NOT clean the box, as owls prefer to return to used nests. Well, the deed is apparently done. I just hope he doesn't fall ill.

Have a great day!

That sounds like fun!!! I'm not working today - got to take my middle son for his first Physio session later - he broke his ankle on 1st April (by jumping from the shed roof onto the trampoline then hitting the ground at his Dads house - aided by rather a lot of cider so I have no sympathy for him - well maybe just a little bit!) He made such a good job of it that it was weeks before the swelling had gone down before he could operate - and he now has pins and plates in it - the plaster came off a couple of weeks ago and he thought he was going to be able to walk on it properly straight away - he also thinks he will only need one session to fix it!! Kids - they never listen LOL!

Hello....I didn't actually go to bed... I watched the Deadliest Catch and then... After the Catch. Out of high school and welding school, I was a cook welder on a crab boat out of Dutch Harbor for a few years... so I love this show. I had the best time... we worked like dogs, but played hard. I had the cutest crew on my boats!!

Good morning UK. Always nice to say that, especially since most are signing off and saying Good Night. Hi Pamela, there are a few of us night owls around. I just walked and fed the dogs and if I had a working brain I would probably go to bed. I don't know who else is still around as I haven't been on the whole evening. Just pop in and pop out.

There is so much noise on the Tel Aviv site that I think it is a aviary, possibly in a zoo. The vehicles, the other birds, and the way the mother owl comes in and out. Maybe this box is in a large cage. I wonder what time it is there.

In my experience, it's probably meds that got us into this in the first place. How else can you explain thousands of people 24/7 watching eggs hatch???? Once they hatched, your hooked. Now that they have grown and flown, we start all over again looking for eggs.
Sounds like drugs to me. 😊

We need time zones peeps. I'm guessing Tel Aviv is east of the Dutch babes, who at this moment are more active. I know they don't know their night from their day yet, and there's the question of age... I was thinking about this thing home from work today - if any of our owls were transported to another country, they wouldn't be asked where they came from, that's their background, etc. they're accepted because barn owls are barn owls no matter how small/different

Hi All, by the way, just checking in (hopefully). I seriously don't want to be drawn in tonight, but haven't been able to help myself! before I check out. Now, I want to check what I've been missing these last 8 hours, but part of me wants to get to sleep before 1:00 AM and trust there will be pdf-s to save & read when I have time... A BIG thank you to those who do that & post on the Wiki - that site will remain up, too, correct?

While I agree we should treat everyone we come across as though they may have been a part of this, another part of this IS to recognize each other. I get that I'm at an age when I get to do what I want, no matter what my teen-age daughters try to "teach" me. But seriously, picture going into a place where you know there are going to be many strangers: a mall, a county fair, a concert... what if you saw an avatar you recognized??? Wouldn't that be great? In my opinion people wear statement clothes/art to be looked at by others, so I don't think it's "creeping" to see how I relate to the message. Just another humble thought.

I'm not even scrolling down until I post this - let alone going to the basement - this is completely blind, I have no clue as to how many of us are currently logged on, it doesn't matter, but please, pass this word if you think it's worthy. "WE" have to come up with a sign- at first I thought of one of my favorites, an iron on logo of my screen name & pic accompanied by any of the captures I've made - we'd all recognize each other & them, our babies, right? Now I'm thinking there are so many easy ways to make a button, or a lanyard...

I had the same problem with the website. So James gave me this instead. I cked on it and it opened in Windows media player. But some folks have to open Windows Media Player first and insert the URL. Then it just plays in the player, not in your browser. You can shrink it and make it fit in the corner and make it stay on top of other windows.

It looks to be an Firefox vs Explorer issue. As it often happens it went open in Firefox but it does open in IE....so now I'm waiting for it to load...thanks!

Just wanted to give my most sincere apologies for my political thoughts earlier, did not mean to offend anyone.
This is such a special place with special friends and it will always be a oasis away from life and a verra verra special part of our lives, again my most humble sincere apology to anyone i offended, i should not have said a thing, what lucky and all are going through is affecting so many. Enough said, again my most sincere apologies.

It is Mary Carrol.
My husband and I are trying to figure out how to find "file" in our Windows Media Player so we can open a window with a nest box from another site.

No luck yet. He is downloading version 11 now.

Anyhow, I go back to offering generally unhelpful suggestions.

There were a couple links posted below by James & Chris I think. Check their history if it's down too far. James was his blue circle, Not the Egyptian Pharaoh then. LOL
