If you can post it here again (and if I'll be great for people to read it again), I'll grab it and upbad it. I won't be able to do that til later today, but I'll come back here and get it.
Anybody else who has something to be put up on the wiki: Post it now and I'll come back and get it and upbad it. Or you can request access and do it yourself.

Hoping people will come through and buy them. Price won't be cheap, but competitive for a coffee table book. The photos are amazing!

Send people to email me at eric@ericblehm.com (subject line Coffee Table Book) and let me know how many you may want, and contact info so I can write back when I start accepting pre orders.

 Good morning, friends! Just checking in for a few moments--I see Molly is back in the box! 😊 As Ingrid, says, maybe Carlos misses all this as much as we do...and maybe that means he'll do it again next spring!

Jan, I'm so happy to see your New England connections.... I just sent you a couple of FB messages about that.

 I'm thinking how much we're willing to spend depends on how much we want the book and how much our bank accounts will bear. (Well, duh.) Right now I'm with you, Toni, but in August I might get desperate and think I have to have one even if it costs $100. One thing for sure: We'll never get a discount. This book will not appear on the remaining tables where I usually do my book buying!

The transformation from this video to the fledgling is startling - we were so lucky to have Carlos and Doma, who were so devoted to bringing everyone this experience that they just never stopped improving and investing in it.
6-8 hours of Molly, and I have to go to meetings - I wonder what excuse I can give for having to leave early - I'm not feeling very well, I have MOD. The men would probably say "oh, Oh, go ahead then. No problems" while looking at the floor sheepishly. The women would just look puzzled.
Have a great day, lovelies! See you as soon as I can.

Good morning everyone! Ok, this other owl box is really weird! Both mom and dad in with the babies during the day, mom is staying between the babies and the dad. Their names are Bob and Brenda! Someone in the chat room said Bob stole food for Brenda and ate it himself TWICE!!! They aren't like our owls!!! They looked out for each other!! Also, if you look at the bottom of the owl box, I think they have used this box several times before! Lots of owl pellets around! Here's the link... It won't paste, let me send it in another post.

The winter weather is a bit strange. If the lake is open then it's a bit warmer along the shore than it is where I am, just 5 miles away, but depending on where you are along the shore you could end up with yards of snow if a good "lake effect" sets up for a few days in a row. My kids ask periodically if we can move into the "snow belt".

When the lake freezes over, the weather is a bit different.

 Bill in SD,
 I read this and thought of you. It sounds like the killer bees made it to San Diego. Years ago, we had one very aggressive hive. (We have kept bees for a long time.) My husband went out and stomped the queen and replaces her with a calm queen. Two weeks later, he could work the hive in his tee shirt.

 Aside from the obvious embarrassment that there are those among us who would cite Alex Jones as their news authority, it is most disappointing that there are still those here who would risk poisoning the harmony of this room by interjecting manifestly partisan politics into the dialogue. Surely those of you who enjoy gabfating over such things can trade e-mail addresses and confine your exchanges to precincts outside the hearing of the rest of us.

 Elliott that was very rude. there is a polite way to ask that politics not be discussed. BUT like my faith, my beliefs are what make me. If it isn't to your cup of tea, the nicest thing was to ignore it. I'm sorry Mary that he felt he needed to be a nasty jerk. The whole point of the post was not political if you read it.... it was that IF the internet was shut down she couldn't see her OWLS..... which IS appropriate for this chat. I plan to flag your comment when I finish and post.... just so you know I chose to do so.

 Alskat, I too have my beliefs, both political and religious, and they are very fervent. I do not air them here because there are most certainly those of us who will disagree with them. The key to the harmony here is that we have all refrained from doing so. This is not the first time that this poster has aired hers, provoking no small degree of argument. Otherwise I could have given her the benefit of the doubt. I must heartily disagree with your assessment.

 Mary Carroll, I just went to Google Map to see where in Ireland, Dundalk was situated. I wonder if it has anything to do with the ash from the Icelandic volcano. I also thought that about the time of year the northern parts of Dundalk, UK and Scotland have light skies most of the time.
 I've been in Scotland along the river Tay during the last 2 weeks of June, and it was daylight till after 11pm, dusk to 4am, and then daylight again. Never really night (dark).

A lonely barn owl has found love at last at Dorset Wildlife Trust's Lorton Meadows Nature Reserve, near Weymouth. Lorton's resident male barn owl and his new partner, named Bob and Brenda, have settled in to the large owl box provided on site (see picture below) and are being keenly, if unobtrusively, watched by wildlife fans across Dorset via webcam. This is a life changing period for Bob who had previously occupied the box in recent years without a mate.

It's funny - a friend of mine on facebook who noticed my references to the owls just sent me the link to the Transformer owl video!! I have posted that here many times and may even have put it on my facebook page once. Anyway, I sent her back the Head Tilt video. For those who don't remember them, I'll post both here now. 😊

Now, don't get me wrong, I am very concerned about our friends in the Gulf of Mexico and Southern states. This oil spill mess hits all of us. And those whose lives and livelihoods have been devastated deserve as swift a remediation as possible. My heart goes out to those who suffer for now for we shall all suffer as a consequence of this failed drilling system.

Here is a very (tragically) funny video about BP response. It's going viral on YouTube.

Down in the basement, I said I would post the link to the Dorset, England Barn Owl nest web cam.

They are yelling. I went to the site and suddenly relaxed. It was owl noise again!!

<http://www.dorsetwildlifetrust.org.uk/bird-webcam.html>

I think someone from England posted the pictures of outside the nest, but I will look.

Ahhhhhhh.....owl noise

I've had several owl cam sites minimized in my Task Bar all evening. The screeching at low volume was music to my ears 😊. I just had to check now and then to see which one it was coming from. They are by far the noisiest. Good night, Becky. You could move to the East Coast - it won't be on here until 9:00 a.m. 😊 - and we have lots of birds, animals, etc. here, too.

But, you probably wouldn't like the winters with sustained cold at times of below zero to 10 or 20 degrees and lots of snow usually 😊. I am really going to hok you up if I EVER get to Washington State. How dose are you to Seattle? I have a niece in Sequim and a sister-in-law in Mt. Vernon (formerly in Bellevue). I'll probably have to come out alone as hubby doesn't want to fly and he shouldn't because of some advanced COPD.

We do the Amtrak car train from Lorton, VA to Sanford, FL on our trip down to FL. It saves lots of driving for hubby and god meals (it's only a 17 hr. trip) but I'm not sure if I could do any longer. The "roomettes" are OK, but a little claustrophobic (sp?) in the top bunk for me. If I go I will fly I think.

I'll give you my opinion/take on the owlbox2.... carlos and his family have given us an experience second to none. they have sacrificed and spent lots of time and money to share moly's family from egg to fledge in a way I've not really seen on other cams. we've hit the top of the mountain.....I would hate to see the project go down and become less than what its been, to wither away. it's much better to close the show than to have it lose the audience. my hubby figures I have over 300 late night hours and scattered minutes during the day watching them. I'm not saying I'd be against it, just sharing the thought.

I'm glad, too, Bill. But it is night time and bees aren't usually active at night. I appreciate the comments made about the situation with the bees. Not an easy decision to make, but, it is truly a "wild" situation and things like that happen. As he said, he couldn't get a beekeeper to remove a bee hive 40 ft. up in the tree anyway.

a few more! they are gearing up and getting volunteers ready for the oil to come in. there is an air of urgency there....small hole in the wall operation set amongst huge beachfront properties. people were busting around, cleaning enclosures, taking and even taking care of the birds who came there to nest. funny to see all these birds crunched in to the trees when there's lots of other areas. It's like they know that they are loved and protected there.

Got to the URL on the picture and click on the blue box with the white waves in the upper right. (it might be on the left in other browsers, I don't know)
That takes you to the RSS feed page and you read through the sidebar and choose the feed you want and where you want to read it. Might be easiest to click subscribe in mail. Make sure you read carefully as some feeds are for followup comments only and will not send you notices of blog updates.
Hope that helps.

I don't get what Barb is saying. Molly's bbg is at <http://mollysbox.wordpress.com/blog/>

See the two attached photos. Got to the site. Click where it says "37 comments" as in first photo. Scroll down until you see the form in the second photo. Fill it out and be sure to mark the box which says "notify me of updates".

Meta, if you sign up via RSS then you will get several previous posts.
Chris, because my computer knows I subscribe to RSS feeds in my mail program I don't always get the RSS page, it skips that step, otherwise I would post a picture of it. It goes straight to my email program and I get a popup box to verify that I want the feed from that particular blog. Once I subscribe I can move the mailbox to show in my inbox or keep it as a separate mailbox. and you are right, probably a good idea to subscribe from the blog page and not the about Carbs page, I think that was because it also has the form at the bottom to subscribe that way. Sorry about the confusion.

I have something I wanted to talk about, but never knew when would be a good time to start a discussion. We all have been involved for months with "our" owls and look at the trouble we're having letting go. I can't believe it is any easier for Carlos and Donna. Although it might be nice to have their house back to themselves, everything around them from the inside out is a constant reminder of this experience. I believe they have started something that far exceeded a simple owl box with a camera. They have created a "Brand". Around every corner, week by week, new ideas become new products; new opportunities extended to writers, artists, designers, etc., etc. It's a total WOW. I think they will have to come back.

You could be right. They definitely tapped into something invisible but yet tangible in the human spirit and the connection to one another and nature. that circle of life it encompasses us each and us all.

I think after Carlos and Donna get some well-earned and well-deserved rest, they will realize they miss it too. They definitely need a break, but I think they enjoyed the camaraderie (sp?) and the bonds they formed with so many people. And of course, the owls too. Donna got teary-eyed while discussing how wonderful this experience was, and how she was going to miss it. Perhaps now, after the initial experience, Carlos and Donna could discuss things for themselves if they choose to return to "broadcasting." They could get some help (Donna? Austin? Other friends? MODe?) to "co-host", or broadcast and certain times, to make it easier for them. Just thinking outside the (owl) box, and hoping Carlos, Donna and co. return someday...sooner rather than later.

Did you see the pictures of their house? They can't have anyone over with all that stuff in the dining room and kitchen! It sure was wonderful but I think they want their house back and they want to be able to visit Carlos' mother without worrying about some thousands of strangers who will go bonkers if the feed quits. I think it was a once in a lifetime to broadcast owls.
Carbs did say he would live stream kestrels if they come back. Daytime only as they sleep at night.

Chris:

Heilb NorthEast Ohioans (and anyone else who wants to travel from Western PA) there was discussion in the SPO chat about a meet-up at the Nature At Night event on July 24 at the North Chagrin Nature Center. The program is from 5pm to 11pm and is a carnival-like family event. Both the Nature Center and Education buildings are handicap/wheelchair friendly and there is a very nice board walk that goes out over the marsh for wildlife watching. The education building houses screech owls, a barred owl, a horned owl and some newcomers flying squirrels. The naturalist I spoke with said the squirrels are getting used to people and do come out of hiding. The EarthWords Shop will be open as well.

Here's the link for more information and directions to the North Chagrin Nature Center

Contact me via the chat room at SPO or the MollyMOD yahoo group. There is a very nice picnic area next to the center so as we get closer to the date we can talk about who may arrive early and want to picnic before hand and other details. We are looking forward to this event and to the possibility of meeting some other Molly-watchers as well.

 If you go to the info page on the Dorset site, I believe the male has been living in that box for quite some time before he found a mate. Which would explain all the pellets in the box, because most guys would not know that if they shredded those pellets it would make the box much more comfortable/or how to use a broom 😊

 JH, that's so funny, because earlier today I was talking about my one chore, what most people would call "dust bunnies" I actually have "dust T Rex(s)" I have a double coated husky who doesn't like to be brushed, but she'll run around leaving knee deep wisps of herself all over. If Wes Anne got stepped on and pushed around as much as the baby in the Netherlands, no wonder she took complete advantage of having the box to herself for a couple of days! 😊

That little guy is fleshy though and will hold his own I think. Someone today said they had seen him down 4 mice whole and I've seen the mother hold him between her legs and stuff food to him. I suspect that maybe one or two eggs didn't hatch so he is much younger than his siblings.

All nests must be cleaned out at the end of the season. Disease and insects infiltrate the nest if left for too long and would be harmful to the nestlings.

Instead, it's as full as ever! I guess, like others, I'm finding it difficult to wean myself off of the peek-a-boo and fly-out... the squawking and stomping, the kicks to the day-cam (why did they kick the day cam?)... I sure miss the roof runway with its running lift-offs, the OB2 Psycho-esque owl box on top of the hill...

Last fall I painted a few things and made a little Smilebox video of them. One was a basket that has a small crow in the scene, my little moonshine man has an owl on him, and the wooden box has a primitive bunny on it. If you would like to view it, here it is:

Beautiful work, Colleen. I love primitives. A neighbor does some nice ones that she used to sell on eBay. Did you also post a photo a week or two ago of an antique ironing board you had painted? And such talent for being able to do the Smilebox. I'm lucky that I even get photos of my quilts (and poor photos at best). I just spread them on the spare bed, on a floor and one time on a snowy driveway because the quilt was so big!! I just click a few shots just to document that I made them.

Awesome, Becky. Your own personal wildlife refuge! Unusual to get such good pictures of the pileated woodpecker. When I saw just your thumbnail views I thought it was a person leaning on a tree 😊 They are such a magnificent bird - almost prehistoric in shape. Glad to see, too, that leave the old trees for them to peek away at and perhaps other critters to live in. Many people would think of a tree like that as "unsightly".

Did Carlos say why he removed the Gag Shag from the box? I thought that mating owls preferred boxes that already had that lived-in look.
Yesterday, 19:01:11 – Flag – Like – Reply

Lynda C
I think he did it when he looked for "Dudley" - the unhatched egg. I think his BLOG mentions that he removed about 15 lbs. of "stuff". I don't think he thoroughly cleaned the box, but it was smelly and all that decaying matter would surely attract vermin. Also, if it was wet, it could possibly rot the bottom of the box. Owls supposedly DO like a nest that has been used, but I think they will be able to tell it isn't fresh and new.

Checking in for just a bit 😊 --- Another reason he might have cleaned the box is because he realized that he got a 3-inch accumulation of "stuff" from the raising of just one family. The second family might add another 3 inches, and so on. If I remember correctly, the threshold in that owl box is only 2 inches high (when the light was just right, you could see from the outside that the stuff was higher than the threshold). He also might have realized that he'd have to clean the box some day - better deal with 15lbs after one brood than 30 lbs after two 😊 ...and the second brood might occur this year!

Good night, Rhonda. I think the PT will help. I've been through PT 3 times and each time it did wonders for me. Mine was for bilateral Achilles tendonitis one time. Hip bursts once and torn rotator cuff another time. They not only give a site-specific exercise routine, but give other helpful info on how to lift, bend, etc. Also helpful advice about using neck and shoulder rotation techniques while sitting, or hand resting devices for carpal tunnel, etc.

I have been away all day and just had to check in to see how you are doing.
I have been thinking about the owls too and have one question. Did anyone answer the question about whether owlets from the same brood can or do mate? Thanks.
Yesterday, 18:46:34 – Flag – Like – Reply

Elliott
Carolyn, that question has been examined in great detail over the past 3 or 4 months. There are scientific studies which answer the question. The short answer is that siblings can mate and produce offspring, but the actual percentage of barn owl pairings that are incestuous is very, very small. I think the number was 1 in thousands.

Yesterday, 19:26:52 – Flag – Like – Reply

Carolyn, if you mean the beaking, I did find references to it on internet sites. Some knowledgeable writers said it was a bonding gesture. Others said it was a symbolic handing off of prey. I find it difficult to believe that it represents "kissing" as some would wish.
Yesterday, 19:40:19 – Flag – Like – Reply

Thanks again. I thought beaking was more communication -- or maybe information exchange, like smelling to see what the other has been eating. At first I wondered about the chirping sounds we heard the day Austin stayed over. There was alot of chirping going on later between Moly and McGee. Nature is very interesting.

JH, the smaller file is updated. Now I am off to have dinner with my mom and dad and family. Celebrating Emmalyn's "graduation" to middle school and Father's Day combined. Oh, and that we've been smoke free for six months now, YEAH!!!

Hi everyone - Some of you ladies mentioned reading Maie Dobbs British mysteries so I asked for the author's name last night, went to Borders today and bought #2 "Birds of a Feather"...they didn't have the first one...so I'm going to read a book for the first time in time in 3 months...!!! My daughter was encouraging about this...I know she has serious doubts about me getting wrapped up with more owls...I, on the other hand...am excited about it...#D!!

I like her books, too, although I haven't read any in a while. You just prompted me to go to Amazon and put some of hers on my "Wish List" along with another series by Margaret Coel that someone else here recommended. I knew there were good reasons why I need to wean myself away from owl cams for a while 😊

 Well, back from the office and caught up with the chat. I was just about to agree with Bill that you guys sure like to talk a lot but James beat me to it. I am sad to see I missed Carlos chatting on the other site today. I think I may be an owl box groupie! Need to run and get my owl to bed. Doubt I'll get back here tonight. My husband already thinks I am nuts and I am finally getting back to the gym after months of missing my daily workouts and swims. I have a lot of explaining to do next trip to my health care provider. I imagine the conversation to go something along the lines of "why have I not been working out and why I am going to do next trip to my health care provider?...." well, you see there was an owl box in California and I started watching in March at first it was just every few days but then they hatched and before I knew it I was no longer working out, eating right, and I was stuck to my chair and glued to my computer over night. That would explain things. It's not unusual to lose a few. We were so blessed that Molly's babies were all healthy and made it.

I don't know.....???? Looks like a lot of wishful thinking. I think I can....I think I can....I think I can....

Based on the timeline above, there would be almost a week and half between the oldest and youngest. That would be right. Remember how much bigger Max seemed compared to Wesley and they were only a week apart. 😊

Has anybody else noticed the eyelashes on these babies? I guess Max, Pat, Austh & Wes probably had them too, but I never noticed.

I was worried about little runty also, until I checked out of the side where it says "Tiny eat big mouse ...and ukkie eats a whole mouse... & shows that little one eating a whole mouse."

Yep. And they were eating frogs too! Wonder if Molly and Max ever brought frog for dinner? 😊

And Mom seems to shove food into him whenever she can. Yesterday I watched her holding him between her legs and filling him up as quickly as she could. I think he's a tough little guy/gal - just like Wesley.

I've watched Runty eat several mice that are as big as he is - he is very feisty, and I think will be just fine!

I did OK at physical therapy...it wasn't too hard...there was quite a bit of paperwork, but not too hard. I have exercises I need to do daily to try and build my "rotator cuff" muscles up. Jade will be helping me keep the form correct (Thank God for such a good, helpful daughter). I apparently sit...and do most movements with my arms wrong 😊 Thanks for the good wishes and words of encouragement earlier today.
