	One o	ther chatter said they had an owl box and they cleaned it out every time. If they didn't they could smell it all the way from the house. 😮

		But the person who said they could small it said that the fact that they cleaned it after every clutch rever prevented the curk from coming back even

But the person who said they could smell it said that the fact that they cleaned it after every clutch never prevented the owls from coming back, even though the barn owl sites suggest doing it only once a year in Oct -Dec.

The grumpy guy is still on the chat over there, so maybe he has been reasured by this other owl box owner. I hope so,

I wonder why Carlos never came to this chat room? When I got the link to this site it brought right to here... I didn't even know there was another chat room for quite a while...Odd how there were so many places to chat...There's the Streamtoo...Well, he missed out on some very interesting and wonderful comments in this chat...

And I hope the video will be re-run for the entire event... that would be great ... until Carlos turns the cameras back on for Molly and McGee's second time around....See, you can't keep an eternal optimist down.. Sue from Syracuse: I read An Owl and His Girl. It was a great book. Since I have two parrots and have had birds for a very long time, I know and think all birds are intelligent, but this was a great read and very insightful into her life with Wesley.

No matter what you think of Ms O'Brien (I never read/heard any of the controversial stuff online), she really sacrificied her life for that owl and he loved her just as much in return. Today, 19:39:41 - Flag - Like - Reply

I've been peeking in at the TA nest and I've come to the conclusion that the scrawniness of the owlets is at least partly due to optical illusion:

- 1. The TA owlets are in a big box, and they are far away from the camera, which makes them look small.
- 2. Our owlets were in a much smaller box, and were much closer to the camera, making them look relatively bigger.
- 3. I also noticed that the closer they come to the camera, the fluffier they look.

Lynda C Reasonable deduction I think, Jan. But even when they come close enough to almost obscure the camera they seem very thin to me and a bt less down feathers - than Molly's owlets were at that age. Some info posted earlier today said that owls in different climates and settings often develop different characteristics - a very warmenvironment like TelAviv vs. the cooler temps in CA.

Letting my mind freewheel 🙂 - a favorite pastime. Here's another possibility re the 'scrawniness' of the young. I have not been paying attention to the TA box, therefore my question: is it very warm there right now? Air trapped in feathers (or fur, in the case of mammals) is an insulating layer. When such animals are in the cold, they tend to 'stand up' their feathers/fur ('piloerection' for mammals) to trap a thicker layer of air. The converse is true when they are hot - they compress their feathers/fur to minimize the thickness of the air blanket. Could it be a combination of the two - differences in the amount/type of down feathers produced in a warmer climate and behavior (compression of feathers) - that makes them appear thinner?

Lisanne - Labsolutely LOVE the way non-ornithologists approach the issues of the owls with their theories. If I were a biologist studying owls, I would want you and those like you in my circle of apprentices questioning me all the way. The thinking that goes on here is absolutely intriguing! I have always been here because of the owls, not because I have seen human behavior in the owls! Don't you just yearn to be an owl for a day so that you know what you're looking at ??

Batting around theories (or, should I say, hypotheses?) is such of fun, it can go on for hours! What I by e is that someone's idea/observation triggers another idea in the next person (i.e., Jan's & Lynda's observations started me thinking). If I were an owl for a day I'd probably come back more confused

Good evening, all! So nice to see everyone.... it's great that we're all still chatting here.

I don't mean to be boring with my recent wild turkey stories... but this is funny. I was sitting at the computer today, wishing the turkeys would show up again. My computer is on the table, right next to glass doors which overlook the deck. I heard a funny tapping sound, looked over to my right (where the deck is) and there was one of the turkey hens, not two feet fromme, pecking at the glass door! Maybe she saw her reflection, or maybe she was calling me to throw out more cracked corn for them....but she really startled me! She had to climb two sets of steps to get there—amazing! I include a photo of the view I had....unfortunately, I didn't have my camera at the time, so can't show you the turkey at the door. But she was there!

They just had an offidal post from one of the MODs on the U-Stream chat for Carlos and Donna that they have not authorized or approved anyone passing themself off as a counselor or psycholgist offering to treat MOD. This apparently is not a joke. I guess there are some legal issues here. I know we joke about it but maybe someone out there is trying to make money by "treating MOD" as an Official MOD Counselor. Amazing! Anyway, please know that Carlos and Donna have nothing to do with that if you hear of it.

Hey Jan and anyone else who was here for this conversation - Today we had our slide show. Our tech teacher used a CD of popular music. They just changed some of the lyrics to make them kid-friendly. Well, the kids were sitting there on the floor bopping away and singing the songs and telling me who the singers were. I felt like an old fogey. But like you said - they don't make music like they used to! I bought a new car a few years ago with a satellite radio. I like the power of being able to pick the genre you want to listen to. I never pick the top 100 or whatever. I'll go 80s or 40s or lite rock or whatever my mood is. Anyway, I thought of you when they played all the "young people music!" My friends - since Molly has turned her back on us above I must share. In just 7 hours the worst year in my 16 year teaching career will be over. I have had chairs thrown in my general direction. I have had to tell the kids that if they think they can throw a tantrum I can throw a bigger one. I have dealt with 15 regular ed kids and 5 emotionally disturbed boys. I'm so excited I could hork.

Sorry it has been so difficult. My mom taught emotionally disturbed kids and I know how hard it was. She got stabbed with scissors in the forehead once after climbing over a desk to disarm an angry child. Si I understand about the chair bit. For the most part she loved it and was good at it. But it is definitely challenging. You are a trooper to be in that field and you have my admiration. P

Ø	I amgood at it. Not quite sure what else I will do, but I can't keep this up. The problem was that I was going to team teach with this really great teacher. Let's call her Benedict Arnold. She said if you take these 5 boys that no one in their right mind will take, I will stick with you, and we will get through it. She quit in November. We've had 2 terrible teachers since then. Hence the problem. See I wasn't raised this way. My parents taught me that if you give your word, you stick with it. Darn values!! Hi Susan. Molly ate the first egg, presumably because she could tell it wasn't viable. I don't know if that white spot on screen now is an egg or not, but if it is, she's not incubating it, and if it wasn't incubated enough, if would have gone bad for that reason. Hi all. Only looked in briefly this morning and checked the chat. Have been good all day and accomplished more of my "on hold" projects (not many, but it's a start). JAMES, saw your post earlier with your version of an RV. Funny !! But we saw one very similar - with a gambrel roof - back in the 1980's while on an RV trip (a rental) up the coast of CA from Ontario to SF. There were 3 couples in our RV - (tight quarters) I think we were in Solvang or San Simeon and the guys were ROFL at a couple who drove in with their "house" on the back of a truck. The wife was "trying" to guide the driver as he backed that ungainly conraption into an RV space. Pictures of it somewhere - but long packed away. Today, 13:04:18 - Flag - Like - Reply

If this was Moly in real time in the box, Carlos would have had to power wash the inside of that box to get it as dean as it is in the video!!! That should be a clue to anyone tuning in and not knowing it is a video from February!

So hard to tell if the feed is actually progressing -- Molly is so still and no flies or fluff to show any movement. Very strange to watch the beginning after the end.

I tried scrolling down and see that Carlos was on and said some stuff. Nothing is posted about what he said.

I've seen some saying that he has moved his equipment to another location in his house and that he's going to have another camera up and running. Is the video feed we are seeing Molly in the box waiting to lay more eggs?!! Today, 12:28:53 - Flag - Like - Reply

JH (ÖÝÖ)

Carlos simply started broadcasting the video from a different room in his house. He never said anything other than that. People have taken snippets of conversation from two different chat rooms and taken them all out of context and run with wild speculation.

The video is a recording from Feb8th, before she laid the first eggs. She is not in the box at this time, in real time. Today, 12:32:12 - Like - Reply - Delete Liked by 🎆 Bill in SD 🔞 Cheryl Owen 🔎 Mrs Whiggins 💽 Lynda C

I just read all that stuff too. Donna says Yippee, Carlos is clearing off the dining room table and the feed will be back short ly . . . THEN: Carlos says he is moving to a new location.

THEN, everyone thinks he's packing up and leaving the house entirely. Seems a HUGE stretch to me going from moving the computer from one room to another to selling his house! Today, 12:35:08 - Flag - Unlike - Reply

I think there are 6 owlets. As for size, apparent health, etc. Here's what I wrote earlier:

One has to remember that birds evolving in different climates will have adapted to best cope with their chosen environment. Moly's brood was hatched in a rather chilly area compared to Tel Aviv. I suspect these owlets are just fine, and only look different due to different insulating requirements to cope with their environment. If I were in a dry hot area, I think I would forgo the thicker down. A barn owl's normal body temp is said to be 104 degrees.

That said, I'd love to have some input from more knowledgeable people in the field. But I don't think these owlets are in any worse health then Molly's brood was. Today, 11:10:00 – Like – Reply – Delete Liked by Cheryl Owen 🎉 YTQ

Can anyone help me with someting....I have a Toshiba Satellite laptop bought in 2006....could it not be powerful enough to watch these live streams? The TelAviv site and a few others are streaming Windows Media Files. Try to open this link in Windows Media Player and see if it works.

http://video.tau.ac.il/General/birds/2010/index.asx

That link will also open in a web browser window, if you right click and select open in new window. It's the streaming video feed, without anything else from the website. Today, 10:45:19 - Like - Reply - Delete

I have a 3 year old Toshiba Satelite. It's been temperamental, but works fine. Maybe you've overloaded it? I had to buy an external hard drive and put a lot of my sewing and music on it so I could have "space" for doing some of these things. Perhaps try that. Maybe that will help. Good luck! Bette, you were saying you had a good RV story about your husband picking you up in an RV for a first date?... You also mentioned something about those ostentatious rolling palaces.

Here is my story. My neighbor of many years retired comfortably from AT&T. He and his wife then went looking for an RV... and they sort of fellinto the deal of a lifetime. The salesman loved them so much (reminds me a lot of the Royals) that he persuaded my neighbors into traveling the country as ambassadors for the RV company, living in and showing their top of the line RVs to wealthy clients. They traveled for many years in a number of $1,000,000+ RVs. Eventually they retired again and bought one of their show vehicles for pennies on the dollar. Kind of cool.

One has to remember that birds evolving in different climates will have adapted to best cope with their chosen environment. Moly's brood was hatched in a rather chilly area compared to Tel Aviv. I suspect these owlets are just fine, and only look different due to different insulating requirements to cope with their environment. If I were in a dry hot area, I think I would forgo the thicker down. A barn owl's normal body temp is said to be 104 degrees.
