Live Barn Owl Nest Box Cam - San Marcos, CA

This is a live feed of a wild female barn owl named Molly. The owl box is located 15 feet off the ground. The male(McGee) has a white chest and face. He usually shows up after dark but has spent an entire day with the female. For more information about the owls and this cam. Click Here Click Here to "Like" us on Facebook.

I come here. I look for owls. I see no owls. I miss the owls. Where these owls go? Why they leave us? I say boo-hoo. Maybe they come back and visit, yes? I hope so. I will wait for them. Here I am, waiting. Yoo-hoo, owles, come back please. Ok, you stay out there and have fun and catch treats, and share, K? And zoom around, and soar, and sleep standing on one leg. I am trying to learn that too. When you fly high, say hi to God for me.

An interesting fact I learned yesterday after finding maggots in the Owl Pellets I dissected at work - it would appear they are not maggots after all but the grubs of clothes moths which find the pellets an ideal breeding site!! You learn something new everyday 😊

I would imagine all sorts of moths, flies, and insects would find an owl box a perfect environment to deposit eggs. I think I'm glad that Carlos decided to clean out at least some of all that warm, moist "yuck" from his box. I don't think that will deter owls from returning. It certainly will still have the "used" smell and future owls can lay their own carpet. 😊

Good morning. Dropped by earlier to scroll thru what little chat there was during the night. Just another quick check to see if any word yet from Becky or Colleen. Taking me a while to remind myself that with everyone in different time zones it isn't necessarily 9:45 a.m. for everyone else 😊 Will check in again later. Going to try to work outside for a while, but it's already 80 degrees and pretty humid, so I doubt I'll get much done.

I don't mind the heat - it's the humidity that gets to me. But, we don't have too many of those days in Maine. It's been an unusually warm and early Spring. Earlier this week we had 2 nights of frost warnings and it did get into the mid-30's. We generally have 3 seasons here - winter, mud season and August!!!

Here are a couple of very cool photos. They were taken this spring (not by me) at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in upper Manhattan. Red-tail hawks have been using this nesting spot for 4 or 5 years now.

Went to a wonderful solstice celebration which included a meditation and songs for the birds and waters in the Gulf. Shortly after we began our fire, by a field of fireflies, there was a lightening show, and then the wind created sparks and finally a great rainstorm. The air was magnificent afterwards. I know that we all love our owls and came together, as a result of them. I hope that we can use our good will to send some healing thoughts to the birds and other innocent wildlife in the Gulf. Thank you

About the avatar: I saw a post from yesterday made by JH where he commented favorably on Kely's avatar - the backside of a horse. He said it would be fun if everyone could get "behind" that type of avatar. So I found a great painted cat image of Charlie Chaplin and used that as my avatar for a short while. But then Britt posted about overcoming problems and it reminded me of something we always say in our family about being a duck and letting bad times flow off our backs like water off a duck. Suddenly I knew I needed a duck butt picture! Glad you like it!! Hope it makes you all laugh - that's the best medicine, after all.

Barbara - When I was boking back through the basement the other day I see you mentioned a possible get-together for us UK MODS - just been having a look for possible venues and wondered about this one <http://www.iberlycentre.co.uk/index.htm>. The only problem is it may be a bit too far out for most people. It's about an hour fromme and I've not been there yet but looking at the web site it looks like a nice place to go - I did look at the Andover one as well - This one looks smaller and there is probably more chance of perhaps getting a 'personal' experience with the Owls - it's cheaper too!! Any thoughts? - I'm in NE Hants by the way!

rmm boks interesting... 2 hours from me according to the AA routefinder. It would only be ok for southern based people really wouldn't it. as going south for a couple of days next week might just check it them out if I get chance. A smaller place for the personal experience would be nice. .... I'll save to favourites and build up ideas. must have another look at moly site and flags for UK... see how many might be interested. Not an easy one as people are so busy these days. small scale meeting could well be bet for anyway. Time to talk properly!

Carlos pictures are copyrighted but I would imagine if we write to him he may give permission for one of them to be used - particularly if some of the profits are going to the Barn Owl Trust or similar - trouble is there are so many fantastic photos it would be very difficult to choose just one!

as daughter works there maybe could work on the boss to donate a percentage of profits to the barn owl trust? Ideas for whimsy pieces... flying owl, palm tree, owl box, perching post, dudley, rat, mouse, gophier, rabbit, pellet. Getting enthusiastic for this idea now. More we order the cheaper it is.... will have a word with them thinks. Maybe the rspb or barn owl trust would sell them too

Not really sure. If you go back far enough, you will see some re-posts of Becky's posts from this morning. Merlin just didn't want to move this morning and seemed to have trouble with his hind legs. She was worried because he is too heavy for her to manage if he won't walk. She did get him to the vet, though I don't know how, and he is staying there for that same reason. They are running tests. Guess we'll know more in the morning.

I have no plans of stopping abruptly. I seriously thought the scene would be tumbleweeds and dust by now. I guess I'll make two runs a day until that happens, or until people just ask me to stop. It's really not too difficult to scroll back 12 hours at a stretch, now that the volume is so low.

Hello my wonderful friends. First, thank you Merritt, Mollie, Joan, Jan, and Karen for your e-mails. Also thank you to everyone else for your thoughts, prayers, and concern for Merlin and me. I just got back from the vet in Silverdale. They did x-rays and blood work. (They have a lab there in the building). Everything looks OK. She is going to start him on pain meds to see if that will help. I had to make the VERY painful decision to leave him here. He is in a floor to ceiling cage, 8x8. I was worried about bringing him home and him trying to follow me around and not being able to. Also, getting him up and down the stairs. This is a 24/7 emergency clinic, so there will be someone there with him always. Everyone there is so compassionate too. Merlin is a very mellow dog, and they love him already. I will call first thing in the morning to check on him. Sorry this is so long. Thanks again everyone, for caring so much!!

Meta Davidson: Do keep us posted! Keeping Merlin and you in my thoughts and prayers.

cj in fl: Becky, Great news to hear. Everyone was so worried. painful decision, yes, but the right one. Will give him rest that he needs. He will be in good hands, so dont worry.

Colleen: My thoughts will be with you and Merlin, Becky. I so hope he is back to his of self real soon!

WallyRussell: Becky... Thank you for taking the time to keep us informed. There are a zillion thoughts of care and concern bouncing through the universe from all of us here.

Jan (Bayonne, NJ): Becky, Merlin is in the best place possible right now. I know that you know that, but I know that scary, un-sure feeling you get when you have to leave a beloved fur-kid with the vet.

Marla Woody Dillsaver: Becky.....know that was soooooo hard to leave him!! But you did the right thing!! It's such a comfort when you know people are there through the night watching him!!

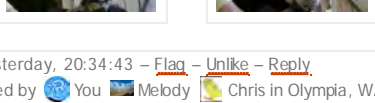

Lynda C: Thanks for the update, Becky. I know it was hard for you to leave him there, but he is in good hands. Thoughts, prayers and lots of hugs continue to be with you both.

Doreen: Praying for you both!

Kelly Warren: Hi Becky, sorry I didnt respond earlier, I had to make "emergency" muffins for my daughters riding club tomorrow. Im so sorry about merlin. Its so rough when you have to leave an animal at the vet.

Michelle: Hi all, I had something very exciting happen today and I wanted to share it with my fellow MODs. I volunteer at the zoo and got to meet Hobbs the barn owl. These owls are even more beautiful in real life!!!!!!

Colleen: Well things have settled down a bit, our road is open and by the sounds of the police scanner, there are still other roads to clear. They probably won't mess with any wires until daylight. I have seen vehicles driving by very slow and camera flashes going off. My little camera is worthless in the dark, but I will get some pictures in the morning. I am sad to think of the birds that may have had nests yet in some of those trees. Yesterday, 20:19:54 - Flag - Unlike - Reply. Lynda C: Thunderstorms with some areas hit by "straight line" winds happen in Maine quite a lot. They can cause as much damage as a bower grade tornado. National Weather service often has to visit the way the site to determine which it was. Trees usually downed toward one direction vs. twisted in all directions is the simplest answer I think. Anyway I just wanted to say bye to you all before this chat room has closed down since the cam has finished now! I have watched the cam a lot (mainly at this sort of time) but only commented a few times. When I have commented before I didn't connect with facebook/twitter/yahoo etc so my avatar was blank. I just thought I would show people what I look like!! And also to mention I don't know if any of you have seen "Barbara" around (she has surfed owls as her avatar and has written a few poems on here, and also put them up on the pbworks site that has been set up - molyowlpbworks.com). Maybe an eagle, but I don't think a one pound barn owl could carry off a 25 pound rabbit. I used to have a rabbit when I was a little girl, Adam. I bugged my Dad for one and he said if I built a rabbit box (good enuf to keep the rabbit from getting out) then I could have a rabbit. So I went to his shop, unaided, and measured, cut and hammered until I had a good rabbit hutch. I got the rabbit.
As a side note, my Dad was a Perfectionist cabinet maker. I really didn't think he would accept my work.

Here are Becky's posts from earlier. The first was posted 4:50 pm EDT (1:50 PDT) and the second at 4:52 pm EDT (1:52 PDT)

I need my peeps. Merlin is not doing good. He is having trouble standing up. For the last 2 hours I have been trying to help him up. He was fine this morning, went outside, down and up the stairs. Came in and ate his cookie (vitabone). I called my vet an hour ago, he is on vacation. I called the vet in Silverdale I took him to on the 26th of May for the ultrasound and bone marrow biopsy. Her asst. just called, and I am waiting for a call back from Dr. Cook. I am going crazy with worry right now! Thank you for letting me share. I have ben trying to stay busy, and act normal, thinking he will get up in his own time, and I will help him. I live alone, and trying to get a 100 pound dog up and down stairs is going to be hard. I have a few people to call if need be. If it comes to that.

Going through MOD withdrawal, Elliott. I watched old Jeannet to MacDonald and Nelson Eddy movies on TCM for most of the day. Jose Iturbi was in one that I saw. Lots of good piano.

I saw they were on, Mollie. I'm so glad you like them and you liked them! It's funny that I am a student of every significant pianist of the latter 3/4's of the 20th century forward to the present, and I never think of Iturbi. I must look him up! Do you ever want to talk about the piano? It is my ultimate passion, you know. We'd have to create our own chatroom!

Well now, let me think about that, Elliott. I took for 6 years and was terrorized by my mother the entire time. She would sit and pound on the piano with a pencil and tell me she was helping me keep time. So I took for 6 years and ended up sounding like I had taken for 2. You think I could hold up my end of the conversation? LOL.
I looked Iturbi up on Wikipedia (where else) and saw that he had studied with Wanda Landowska and was a great harpsichordist. I never knew that part about him.

Lynda C. Me too. I hope my earlier post with picture of Merlin and You're In My Heart sung by Rod Stewart were not taken in any other way than the comfort I wished to convey. I think Becky's sharing of what's happening to Merlin pulls at our own heartstrings about our beloved pets. She is reaching out to us and we are reaching back. Imagine if Becky could feel all the arms out here that want to hold her right now as she holds Merlin.

Adam, I think you are a sensitive young man and I see that is reflected by others on this page. We love you for it. Kathleen

Next to the "Ukkie" on the Dutch site. That's just a term of endearment for the smallest one, but his name is "Gossie." I signed up on the chat the other night and did the Google Translator to talk back and forth. but then a nice person chatted in English with me. He gave me the names of all the owls but I forgot to save them locally. They would be in the PDF history.

Two other observations about the TA owls vs OUR owls. Moly's owls roosted much of the time on one leg....these don't. And don't the TA owls have a more metallic sound to their rasp or hiss??? I suppose the sound could be influenced by the acoustics. Maybe someone has already made these observations, if so sorry for the repeat.

I was just thinking EXACTLY the same thing about the sound. I was calling it the "Hebrew" dialect! But you're right, Sawwhet, the nest box is constructed very differently, and we don't know whether it is sitting in the open air, or atop a pole.

And the mic and recording equipment are probably different too.
I think it's very likely we would see differences in behavior. So many factors can influence that. We would have to see several owl pairings from each area though to know if it's regional or just one owl family vs another. As far as the standing on one leg thing goes: maybe the TA boxes are on very stable posts that don't sway so it doesn't trigger that roosting mechanism they use to keep from falling off a branch. Does that make sense? I haven't seen those owls swaying like our owls did so I figured there is either very little breeze or the boxes are very stable.

Also, only twice I have seen two adult owls in the box. Usually it is the lighter adult delivering treats. So is the female lighter than the male, or is the male delivering most of the treats?

But, Max wasn't actually in the box much at this stage, was he ?? The male may still be delivering food to the Tel Aviv box, but could he be leaving them in the area to the left and the female bringing them in - another "room" perhaps. ?? All speculation 😊😊 I wish there was more information posted on the web site about the owls.

It looks to me like the nest might be in a building of some type (barn-type structure) - the support timber on the back wall and seemingly another "room" to the left. And, yes, Moly's owls were on one leg frequently at this stage ???

Hi. I can hear chainsaws cutting trees. So far the Fire Department trucks can't get up to the houses here yet because too many power lines and trees are down. They are working with lights on their helmets to see the trees. Pretty exciting, as long as no one gets hurt! Oh a big bulldozer truck just came through to move a tree.

For Lynda, who noted that my frequent change of name AND avatar today have made it difficult to recognize me!
I thought I was going to stick with KBorlando because I am Kate from Orlando, but I don't want all my Moly friends to forget me so I may just go back to Owlosaurus. After 3500+ posts it's hard to change!
The avatar change started when I saw a post from James admiring Kelly's horse's *** and suggestion it might be fun for everyone to get 'behind' the change. I started with a great painted cat picture with Charlie Chaplin, but then Britt's message below got me thinking about ducks. And there aren't many things cuter than a duck's butt. I'm kind of missing my Owl MotH though...

Yeah... pretty easy to see that from late Feb until Carlos turned off the camera I haven't had much of a life outside this chat! It's been a blast but it has taken a toll. My house and garden look neglected, my husband hardly recalls what it's like to have me speak directly to him about something other than owls and even my boss asked if everything was OK because I've been so distracted! Truth was, I was spending about 4 hours a day (during work!) watching owls. It really was time for me to step back and recover some of my life! LOL But you see, I keep coming back!

The latest from the Dutch Barn Owls (Kerkuls) bbg!
Many viewers are afraid it is not the smallest young. When sufficient food is raised will also save the smallest. The youngest, however, is flying out later than his older brothers and sisters. "Ukkie" will also be the longest staying in the closet, but they will not be forgotten! When the boy out of the closet and had fed (!) Mice still take them and bring that to "Ukkie. If the mice are not adopted by the boy outside the cage, the adult fly birds to the cabinet and carry the young Beautifully arranged!
Please note that "Runtley" already has a name. He is "Ukkie" !!
